There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

IN the senate on the 2d Senator Voorhees (dem., Ind.) opened the tariff debate and in his speech denounced the protective system of tariff taxation. The nominations of Thomas E. Benedict, of New York, to be public printer, and James D. Yoemans, of Iowa, to be interstate commerce commissioner, were received from the president.... In the house a fruitless attempt was made to secure a quorum in order to bring the O'Neill-Joy contested election case to a close.

SENATOR ALLISON opened the tariff debate for the republicans in the senate on the 3d, and he gave an outline of some of the main objections which will be urged against the bill. A resolution directing the finance committee to prepare a bill for the repeal of all laws which give the secretary of the treasury authority to issue interest-bearing bonds was presented.... In the house the democrats seated John J. O'Neill as the representative from St. Louis in place of Charles F. Joy.

A BILL was passed in the senate permitting horse racing in the District of Columbia, but prohibiting pool selling and book making. Senator Allison concluded his speech on the tariff bill. Senator Mills followed, confining himself chiefly to a defense of the ad valorem system.... In the house the committee on banking and currency reported in favor of subjecting greenbacks to state and municipal taxation. The effort to pass the seigniorage bill over the president's veto failed by a vote of 116 to 114. Mr. Hillborn (rep.), of California, was unseated in favor of Mr. English (dem).

IN the senate on the 5th Senator Hill (N. Y.) gave notice that on the 9th he would submit a few remarks on the pending tariff bill. A resolution to reduce by 20 per cent all official incomes not protected by the statutes of the United States was referred to the judiciary committee. After a short debate on the bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the destruction of the Russian thistle the tariff bill was further discussed.... In the house the urgent deficiency bill, which carries something over $1,000,000, was passed, and the post office appropriation bill was discussed.

IN the senate on the 6th a resolution introduced by Senator Wolcott, looking to the drafting of a treaty with Mexico by which the United States should coin silver dollars at its mints, was discussed. Senator Peffer spoke on the tariff. A petition was presented from the millers of St. Louis praying for the retention of the reciprocity clause of the McKinley law .... In the house the time was occupied in discussing the post office appropriation bill. The evening session was devoted to pension bills.

Chas. Culbertson, of Ridgeway, was in town yesterday.

Guy Belding is working for J. B. Hause at present.

F. D. Lancaster made a business trip to Toledo Monday.

Miss Mae Aylesworth is calling on friends here this week.

Mertillo Stitt moved into the Baptist parsonage last Saturday.

Solomon Tate went to Buffalo Saturday, with a car-load of stock.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Roper Thursday afternoon, a daughter.

G. P. Avery is on the sick list, suffering from an attack of the grippe.

Mrs. Sam Shutt, of Tecumseh, was visiting friends in Clinton yesterday.

Dr. J. E. White is now comfortably settled in his new home on Jackson St.

L. H. Ames, of Ypsilanti visited his daughter, Mrs. Ham Niblack, last week.

Will Woodward started for Danville, Ill., last week, where he has accepted a position in a woolen mill.

Jas. Hogan and Wm. Gadd shipped a car of sheep from Manchester Wednesday.

Orel Harmon, of Lake Ridge, was calling on friends here the first of the week.

The eighteen-months old daughter of Chas. M. Cooley died on Monday of scarlet fever.

Russell & Garlinghouse, of Tecumseh, shipped a lot of stock from our station yesterday.

Mrs. J. Lapham, of Manchester, was the guest of Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle yesterday.

Master Frank Bowen, who has been visiting at M. R. Keyser's, returned home Monday.

Miss Florence Camburn, of Macon, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Will Niblack this week.

Neil Williams and Howard Hanse ride a new Hartford Safety purchased of S. W. Demuth.

Fred Stoutz has sold his farm in the township of Manchester to a sister who lives in Adrian.

The Clinton Plow Co. is again running a full force of hands and turning out about one hundred plows a week.

The body of Mr. Smith, of Chicago, a brother-in-law of A. G. Burton, was brought here for burial last Monday.

Ed. Rose is very poorly at present, and is wholly confined to the house. We hope he may improve with the coming of warm weather.

The Epworth League held a public meeting at the M. E. Church on Tuesday evening. An interesting program was presented to a good audience.

C. Sprouf has purchased the 80 acres belonging to the Glimpse estate that was bid off on the day of sale by Freeman & Burtless. The latter netted $300 on the deal.

Mr. Earle, of Detroit, who represents the Standard Building and Loan Association of that city, is in town this week, and is making an effort to establish a local board here.

The services at St. Johns Church Tuesday evening were witnessed by a congregation that completely filled the Church. Bishop Davies administered the Confirmation Rite to a class of 27 candidates, and the service throughout was very impressively rendered.

The afternoon freight Thursday caught one of W. O. Silver's cows carried her across the long bridge and hurled her down the embankment. Strange to say, with the exception of a few bruises the cow was uninjured. She takes her rations as regularly as before.

The Entertainment last week for the benefit of the Catholic Church was largely attended and was a success in every respect. The singing by Revs. Ternes and Nacy was particulary worthy of commendation. The Society netted the neat sum of $90.00, and their evening at Manchester yielded $80.00 more.

The friends of Prof. G. W. Loomis, who had charge of our schools a short time the year Prof. Laflin was broken down by sickness and obliged to leave, will be glad to learn that he is meeting with splendid success at St. Joseph, Mich. He has just been engaged there for the coming year at the comfortable salary of $1500.

Rev. Mr. Stout, of Indiana, has accepted a call from the Baptist Church, and will begin his pastoral duties at an early day.

Mrs. John Nelson, who lately returned from Grand Rapids, where she had a cancer removed, is failing rapidly. Her recovery is very doubtful.

Sunday afternoon, Mrs. C. S. Burroughs hitched up her horse for a drive. For some mysterious cause, the animal began to kick with the lines on the ground and Master Frank alone in the buggy. Fortunately the horse was soon caught, and what might have been a serious accident was prevented.

The annual meeting of the Clinton Woolen Mfg. Co. was held last Monday. The official report of the treasurer showed the profits of the past year to be about $21,000, and the Board declared a dividend of ten per cent. These figures indicate that the business depression has not struck the Clinton Woolen Mill.

A handsome gentleman, who goes by the cognomen of Prof. Hercules E. Fink, and who hails from Tecumseh, who is known as an orator and author, and who declaims upon "Social Evils and Their Remedies," gave our townspeople a literary treat last Thursday evening. If Prof. Fink doesn't become stricken with nervous prostration, the disease which is carrying off so many of our literary men, there is a future before him as big as a full moon on a clear night in June. The receipts of the evening were about $7.00. We understand that Prof. Fink intends starting out on a lecture tour as soon as he can procure a supply of window lithographs.

Golden Rod Chapter O. E. S. had a meeting last evening at Masonic Hall which eclipsed anything that has occurred since the lodge was organized. The members of Tecumseh and Manchester Eastern Star lodges had been invited to attend and they were present in full force from both towns. Seventy three guests in all were present, about two thirds of them coming from Tecumseh. Supper was served to the visitors, at the usual supper hour, and after the disposition of the eatables, the Lodge was opened in proper form and the initiatory degree was conferred upon Mrs. Frank Johnson and Mrs. Robert Redick, by the Tecumseh officers. After this ceremony came a feast of reason and flow of soul. An impromptu choir furnished some fine vocal selections, and brief talks were listened to from John F. Hicks, Editor Mat Blosser and Editor Scove Stacy, which furnished spice to the more serious parts of the program. The session lasted until ten o'clock when the Manchester guests retired to the train, which halted at the Chicago street crossing, to receive them. The members of Golden Rod were untiring in their efforts to promote the enjoyment of their visitors, and the visitors seemed to be well satisfied with their entertainment.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich., }
Council Room, April 3rd, 1894. }

Present, the President, Recorder, Trustees Boyd, Satterthwaite, Heesen, Hall, Smith and Wright.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Report of the Sexton read, showed four adult and one infant interment, and twelve dollars collected. Ordered placed on file.

Committee on Fire and Fire Limits reported that they had made a trip to Hillsdale to examine a hose carriage, accompanied by Thomas Elliott and W. H. Smith, and that Messrs. Elliott and W. H. Smith, would make a duplicate of the Hillsdale wagon, of the best material and workmanship, for the sum of $260.00. Moved and supported that report be accepted. Carried.

Chairman Heesen, of the Health Committee, reported that he had examined the place on T. T. Kneeland's land, where the Marshall had buried two horses, and that the same was a suitable place. Report accepted.

The Marshall made verbal report that there had been 73 tramps lodged in the village look-up during the month of March and that numerous complaints had been made to him concerning the condition of sidewalks about the village. Marshall ordered to inspect all walks and to report at the next meeting.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were read and referred to the finance committee:

Tecumseh Electric Co., lights for March $156.40; Albert Hyde, Street Commissioner $13.00; Wm. Mellen, labor on streets, $6.50; Jehiel Davidson $15.00; E. N. Satterthwaite, expense to Hillsdale, $0.85; W. J. Ingersoll freight paid, 67cts.

WATER WORKS.

C. J. & M. Ry., freight on coal $47.69; Telephone Co. $7.50; C. F. Field, printing, $3.00; A Park, labor, $1.35; C. A. Hooten, engineer, month of March $40; Cun. Patterson, labor, $3.45; Mich. Supply Co., pipe, 19.80;

Finance committee reporting favorably on all of above, the Recorder was instructed to draw his orders on the treasurer for the said sums.

A communication from the Secretary of the State Board of Health, requiring the appointment of a health officer for the ensuing year, was read. Thereupon Dr. F. O. Tefft was appointed health officer for the ensuing year.

A letter from the Chase National Bank, of New York, was read, requesting the remittance of a commission of one-fourth of one per cent for the payment of the Water Works Bond coupons. Recorder instructed to draw order for the same.

The druggist bond of Charles A. Wright, in the sum of two thousand dollars, with Lucius Lilley and Francisco Davidson as surities, was presented, approved, sureties approved and bond ordered placed on file.

On motion moved and supported, the penalty of the saloon bonds for the ensuing year was placed at the sum of $3500.00.

The matter of building a fence on water works pumping station grounds, was placed in the hands of the Committee on public Grounds and Building.

James H. Aten was appointed Deputy Marshal for the ensuing year.

Moved and supported that the street committee make report at next meeting of the condition of the bridges of the village and the probable cost of repairing the same.

Moved and supported that a two-horse hose carriage be procured for the fire department; that the contract for the same be given to Thomas Elliott and W. H. Smith, at the sum of $260.00 and that the committee of Fire and Fire Limits have charge of said contract.

Moved and supported that the Council adjourn. Carried.

W. J. INGERSOLL, Recorder.

EXCHANGE COLUMN.

This column is designed as a medium of exchange. It will afford an admirable scheme through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming uteasils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents.

A VICTOR SAFETY.—A first-class Victor cushioned wheel, price $125, can be had for $1.00. One hundred and twenty shares at one dollar each. For full particulars call at the HERALD OFFICE.

We supposed a tax on a necessity was to keep up prices. At the price of eggs at present, Uncle Sam must be discouraged with the revenue.—Ridgeway Cor. Herald.

Well, you see it works this way:—when our hen lays plenty, she lays eggs to ship, and the tariff don't help, and when she is 'short' and the Canadian hen is 'long' in the market, our consumers pay the tariff, and it don't help the American hen, because she has no eggs to sell. See?—Adrian Press.

Remember the L. C. S. will be held at the home of Charles Underwood, on Friday evening of this week. Program for the evening is "A Night in Germany.

There was a large attendance of neighbors and friends at the funeral of Lida Smith, held at the church, Saturday morning. The casket that held the remains of the much loved schoolmate and friend, was a white brocaded plush. A beautiful pillow, and a collection of fragrant and handsome cut roses, a gift from the Epworth League, were placed at the head and in the casket; at the foot a bouquet of elegant cut roses, a gift from Postmaster Santus. A basket of choice flowers from Jennie Allen, helped to beautify the resting place of the departed. Six young men acted as bearers, and the same number of young ladies as honorary bearers, being school mates. The members of the Epworth League, attending in a body, to pay their last respect to a respected and loved member. Rev. Cansfield, assisted by Rev. Mudge, in an affecting manner spoke words of comfort and hope to the bereived family. The choir's selections were unusually appropiate for such a sad mission. The remains were laid at rest in the family lot of the village cemetery. The grave was lined with white flannel, evergreens and flowers. The bereaved family have the deep heartfelt sympathy of the community in their sad affliction. Although the family circle has twice been broken and two vacant chairs are in the home, they have the comforting assurance that their precious children are with Jesus, where all is well, and where the family circle may some day be reunited.

CARD OF THANKS.

With hearts overflowing with gratitude we desire to express our appreciations to the neighbors and friends who were so kind and willing to lend such valuable assistance during the sickness and death, and at the funeral services of our dear Lida. To the members of Epworth League, we would especialy tender our sincere thanks for the beautiful floral gifts, also to Mr. Santus for the handsome bouquet of cut roses, and to Jennie Allen for the basket of flowers, and to the choir for their choice selections. Very Respectfully,

MR. AND MRS. S. P. SMITH AND FAMILY.

A CORRECTION.

In behalf of the patrons of the village school, I wish to correct a gross misrepresentation made in a recent issue of the HERALD. The statement concerning the "few who now attend school playing foot-ball," is destitute of truth. We have the largest spring term attendance enrolled for the past five years. As to playing foot-ball, there is one very prominent feature I have noticed connected therewith: We have encroached upon no one's business other than our own. The statement being entirely uncalled for, the character of the correspondent, "Rambles," shows how poverty stricken he was for items. He should have sighed his name to his communication, and not endangered the HERALD. Lastly, foot-ball when moderately indulged in as at Ridgeway, is a vastly more profitable engagement than doing nothing. L. M. DRAKE.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Orange blossoms in the near future.

Our weather is very fine and farmers are all busy.

House cleaning is the rush of the sea- at present.

Regular meetings of Hendershot Tent No. 467, first and third Tuesdays of each month.

Quite a number attended the entertainment "The Temple of Fame," at Tecumseh, last Tuesday evening.

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet at the home of Dr. Hardy on Wednesday, April 25th, at 2 o'clock p. m. All are invited.

The play given by the Holloway Dramatic Club was well attended last Saturday evening. All members of the club did themselves credit.

Wednesday evening next week there will be a meeting held at Exelby Hall for the purpose of organizing a base ball team in our village for this season. All interested, please be present as officers and committees will be elected and appointed. Remember we have the timber for a first-class team.

The Ladies' Aid Society will hold a "Hard Times" social at the hotel Exelby on Friday evening, April 27th, and propose to make it a very interesting occasion; refreshments will be served. Aunt Ann's house is large and there will be room for all. Several interesting features will be introduced. Everybody come and enjoy themselves and look out for breakers. A recruiting office will be opened for all who wish to join Coxey's army,

About one year ago a man came to our quiet little village, and being pleased with the location and weather he settled down. For many months he could be found sitting on some dry goods box telling of his past life which had been spent in every quarter of the globe. He had been on the Pinkerton detective force, on the police force, a dancing master, a pugilist, and an Associated Press reporter for most of the leading papers of America and Europe. He had also been a "dead game sport" and a monied man in his day. Nevertheless, he is with us at present and any one wishing to hear him tell a good story call at his office "42 Midway Plaisance," up stairs. He is always there. He has hosts of friends, for we know of one or two. He makes friends with the citizens of our village by abusing and sneering at them through the columns of the Adrian Press for which he is the correspondent from this place. Last week he showed us his poetical ability by giving some of the boys of the town a "roast," as he would term it. He always walks straight (except when he comes home from Adrian), then he tries to walk through the wire fence on the railroad grounds, which one of our citizens has on exhibition.

CATARRH OF PELVIC ORGANS.

A Class of Diseases Not Generally Understood.

It is a popular impression that catarrh is a disease confined to the mucous membranes lining the nose, throat and bronchial tubes and other of the respiratory organs. The real fact is, that all mucous membranes, wherever located, are subject to catarrh, and unless recognized and properly treated chronic ailments are sure to follow. No organ of the whole body is more frequently affected than the bladder. The symptoms of catarrh of the bladder are: frequent voiding, which is generally scant in quantity and highly colored, with a thick, white or slightly pinkish sediment. Catarrh of the bladder is also liable to extend downwards to the pelvic organs. This will soon cause smarting, and sometimes difficulty and pain. In females the extension of the catarrhal disease is certain to involve the female pelvic organs, and produces leucorrhoea, painful periods, and bear-down pains.

In taking Pe-ru-na for catarrhal affections of these organs a tablespoonful four times each day is sufficient for cases of ordinary severity, but there are acute cases for which it is necessary to take six doses each day to get the full benefit of the treatment. Old persons who are annoyed by frequent calls and burning pains, day or night, never fail to find complete cure by a few months' faithful use of Pe-ru-na.

Send for free copy of Family Physician No. 2, in which these subjects are fully explained. Address The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Risbridger, of Norvell, spent the Sabbath at Pentecost.

Miss Hattie Joseph, Miss Minnie Vanderpool, Arno Daniels and Forest Tyson are "enjoying" the mumps this week.

Miss Fannie Warner is a fearless and graceful horsewomen, and few can rein a high spirited horse better than this lady.

It is said that the farm bought by W. Vanderpool, last week, has again changed hands, and is now the property of R. L. Rogers.

What has become of the tariff bill? Coxey's army and Colonel Breckinridge seem to monopolize public notice, to the exclusion of everything else.

A letter from Paola, Kansas, date of April 8th, states the pear and cherry trees are in blossom, the corn planted and they had just had a fifteen hours rain, which revived the farmer's courage, as well as the drooping vegetation.

Now spade around your pie-plant, tie up the raspberry canes, set some shade trees if you have none, ditto grape vines and a strawberry bed, and above all don't forget to clean the mud off your shoes, you lubber, when you come in the house.

Why do not the farmers keep up the practice of speaking and writing of each farm home by the name bestowed on it by the "Naming Committee" of the Farmer's Club? "Oak Grove" "Maple-Wood," Sunny Side," "Maple Farm," "Locust Grove," "Dell Farm," "Stony Hill," etc., we hear no more of them, yet many of these names are pretty and very appropriate.

A Sabbath School was organized at Pentecost hall las Sunday, with Rev. Williams, Superintendent; Mrs. L. Daniels, Assistant Supt; Miss Susie Vanderpool, Secretary; Miss Ida Buck, Treasurer. There will be preaching every two weeks. The society have a fine chapel organ, and hope to interest many in the School. All are cordially invited to come. Services begin at 3 p. m. sharp.

We heard a funny story the other day, about a boy, who wanted to see how patient his father was, so he dug a hole several feet deep in the hay mow, then covered it lighty with hay, and when the "pater familias" went up with his pitchfork, to throw down fodder there was a sudden and mysterious disappearance for a few seconds, but as the youngster did not take a phonograph along, he was unable to record the exact remarks made on the occasion. But they were impressive no doubt.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gamber, a girl.

Dr. Nixon left Wednesday morning for his home in Canada to be gone the balance of the week.

Examine those buggies at F. G. Florence's. They will suit you at hard pan and hard time prices.

Chas. Macham, of Whitmore Lake, is rusticating with his brother Allen at this place for a few days.

Joe Billmeyer, of Ann Arbor, is spending his vacation this week at the home of his parents. Joe will soon be a full-fledged dentist.

The many friends of Dr. Begel formerly of this place, will be pleased to learn that he contemplates returning to Holloway in the near future to permanently reside.

The ladies wish to thank the Britton audience for the appreciation shown by their enthusiastic attention at the play "Out in the Streets" given there last Saturday evening.

Dame rumor says we are to have a new butter maker to take the place of Mr. McKillup, who has served the company here for something over a year. Economy is the cause.

Eugene Droulliard moved last Monday from James Lane's where he has been a faithful worker for six years, into Robert Boyd's house in East Raisin, where he will endeavor to keep the wolf from the door by what odd jobs he can pick up.

Rothfuss & Brown have received a consignment of straw hats and gasoline stoves, thus opening the spring season with a rush; there will be more rush when the hats go up with the wind and the stoves go up because they didn't know it was loaded.

The L. O. T. M., of Holloway, are greatly pleased with the success of their play at Britton last Saturday evening, and say that every one seemed well pleased with the rendition of it. Palmyra and Blissfield are now talked of as the next camps to take.

MACON MUSIC.

Miss Grace Collins began the spring term of school in the Mills district last week.

Prof. Bailey, of Cleary's business college, Ypsilanti, was in our village last Friday in the interest of the school.

Mr. and Mrs. George Harmon returned last week from their extended visit among friends at Bedford, Detroit and Bay City.

Dr. Arthur Ovens and daughter, Zoe, of Petoskey, visited among friends several days, and returned to their home last week.

Frank O'Dell visited his brother George, at Flint, last week. The many friends of Mrs. George O'Dell will be sorry to learn that she is suffering with that dread disease, consumption.

The W. C. T. U. held a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Edwin Howell last Friday afternoon. Delegates were elected to attend the district convention held in Tecumseh next Wednesday and Thursday.

A TRIP TO TIPTON.

We paid Tipton a short visit last Monday afternoon and found the town booming right along. The holding of the Congregational Conference this week is bringing many visitors from abroad, and the village is livlier than usual in consequence.

W. J. Hampton is working up a good trade at his store. He is very nicely situated now with the store and residence in the same building, and has evidently become a fixture in Tipton. In addition to his general store he is selling agricultural implements.

John Conlin also holds forth on the old corner, and seems to have a good trade in general merchandise, boots and shoes.

The churches here are both prospering. Rev. Pierce, pastor of the M. E. church is now on the second year of his second term, or the fifth year in all. He has charge of a circuit consisting of Tipton and Springville. The recent revival meetings at the latter place have been very successful, about fifty converts in all having embraced the Gospel.

Rev. Williams will complete his first year as pastor of the Congregational church in May. There is more interest manifested than in a number of years before. The Ladies Aid Society have recently expended about $100 in papering and carpeting the church, which adds very much to its appearance. Many of the younger people are taking an active interest in church affairs and they have a flourishing Christian Endeavor Society. M. D. Alexander runs the musical end of the church as of yore. He has served as chorister forty-three years and has acted as superintendent of the Sunday school twenty-five years. They could hardly dispense with his services.

THE CONFERENCE.

The annual meeting of the Southern Michigan Association began on Monday evening and the sessions continued through Tuesday and until Wednesday noon. Below is the program which was prepared beforehand and which was given substantially as arranged. The weather was beautiful, the attendance was large and the meetings throughout were interesting and profitable:

TECUMSEH, MICH., APRIL 19, 1894

WHEN the new House rules are adopted, as doubtless they will be, Czar Reed's occupation as a filibusterer will be gone.

COXEY'S commonweal army is marching on. They are having a rather tough time of it getting over the Blue Ridge mountains.

THE jury in the Pollard-Breckinridge case gave the plaintiff a verdict of $15,000. Public sentiment will very generally approve of the verdict.

THE women of Washington have enlisted in the Pollard-Breckinridge controversy, and will make an effort to induce the House to expel Col. Breckinridge from that body.

IS DAVID B. HILL posing for the Republican nomination in 1896? The HERALD made that prophesy three months ago, and political events in New York are certainly shaping in that direction now.

THERE are too many Breckinridge's in public life at Washington, and too many willing Madeline Pollards. The result of the trial ought to decrease the number of both of these interesting classes.

THE Angel of Death gathered in two distinguished victims last week—David Dudley Field and Gen. Henry W. Slocum. One had a most eventful career in civil life and the other was no less renowned in war.

THE closing scenes in the Breckinridge trial were highly dramatic at times, but all the eloquence of the Colonel's attorneys could not change the FACTS as brought out upon the trial. Breckinridge was guilty and the jury said so.

DAVID B. HILL is the most perfect counterpart of Aaron Burr that recent politics have produced. He possesses the same duplicity and treachery and the same want of political principle, only he lacks Burr's social prominence and intellectual ability.

THE jury in the Jochim case disagreed, as was generally anticipated. They were out twelve hours and stood exactly "'alf and 'alf," six for conviction and six for acquittal. The case will probably end here as the chances for a second trial are very slim.

DAVID B. HILL has finally thrown off the mask and he will be regarded hereafter at his actual worth. His ambition to be President can never be realized. He must see that himself now. His future ambition will be to wreck Cleveland's administration, and he is shaping his political action to that end.

THE resolution approving Senator Hill's course on the tariff, passed by a coalition of Tom Platt Republicans and Tammany Hall Democrats in the New York legislature, must be an edifying spectacle to honest tariff reformers. Can the treachery of Hill and Murphy prevent the final triumph of the Wilson bill? Possibly so, but we doubt it.

THE Democratic House caucus formulated a new rule last week which ought to stop the evil of filibustering. The rule provides that a member actually present and neglecting to vote, shall be requested to do so, and in the event of his refusal, he shall then be counted as a part of a quorum. The Speaker will not assume the right to count hats and canes and reflections in mirrors, after the Tom Reed style, but when a member is actually present and refuses to vote, the House will then authorize the Speaker to count him. It is an excellent rule and will doubtless be adopted.

THE Chicago Herald takes off the Napoleon business in this genteel fashion: "The Napoleon business has been overdone. Most of the Napoleons of late years have wound up in the bankruptcy courts or in the penitentiary. Napoleon of Finance Ward has just got out of Sing Sing prison. Napoleon of Politics McKane has just entered that institution. Napoleon of Speculation Harper is in the Ohio Penitentiary. Napoleon of Business Erastus Wyman is under indictment for forgery. Napoleon McKinley is booming along on a wave of temporary and fictitious popularity, but he will come down with a bump long before he attains the throne. None of the Napoleons are safe to depend on. The family is brilliant, but unreliable."

TELLER ON SILVER.

False Promises That Have Disappeared—England Laughing at Our Calamity.

Pending debate on the Bland seignorage bill in the senate Senator Teller, of Colorado, spoke in advocacy of free coinage in part as follows:

"We were told when the Sherman repeal bill was before the senate: 'Just let this go; let silver fall, and when silver falls and things get bad, then everybody will come to your relief. Great Britain will be there and we will be there, and we will all do the best we can. We will put things in such a condition that your later state will be very much better than your first.' We have got to the condition in which they wanted us to get. We have got where silver cannot longer be mined with profit in one mine in one hundred, which every intelligent mining man knows now that he is standing in front and close by the complete extinction of silver mining on this continent. I predict here that in six months from this time, if silver continues to fall, and I believe it will, not a silver mine on the American continent will be worked and I predict then that when Great Britain is appealed to she will not come to our relief."

To the remark of Senator Peffer that England would laugh at our calamity Senator Teller replied:

"As the senator from Kansas says, she will laugh at our calamity. She prefers to buy wheat at 70 cents in Liverpool rather than to pay $1.40. She prefers that her dollars shall bring great amounts of our produce and not a little; and she is not coming to our relief, and those who believe she will know little of English character and English greed. We have reached the condition where we may now determine for ourselves what we are to do. We have practically abandoned silver as money. We have it in circulation, but we insist upon treating it as subordinate to gold and putting all prices upon the gold standard and the gold standard alone. I have heard for fifteen years in this chamber that if we would only let silver get low enough we would have all the world back of the silver question. It seems to me when silver struck 58 cents it had got low enough, yet I do not hear of any rush of anybody to our relief, neither at home nor abroad.

"All the promises of future silver legislation that were held up to us when the Sherman repealing bill was before this body have disappeared. They have not materialized, and they will not. There will be for a long time to come, as there are now, distress, want and crime, the result of this legislation. No tariff legislation that you can enact will save us from the baleful blight that you put upon the country by the monetary system now in force. No tariff that has been enacted if left in force will save the country from the baleful blight and curse that was put upon us by that legislation, and put upon the country in the interest of a few men only; put upon the country in the interest of a small percentage of the men, and they the least worthy of all men, because they are not the producers of wealth; they are the men who through inheritance or fortunate operations have become the possessors of money and the representatives of money in this country. That has been the interest that has dominated and controlled the financial legislation of this country for many years."

ANOTHER EXPLANATION.

More Light as to What the Seigniorage Really Is—A Scrap of Coinage History.

We have been asked to explain what "seigniorage" really is and what amount of silver bullion now in the vaults of the treasury the Bland bill proposes to coin. The discussion of the seigniorage bill which has been going on for months is well calculated to confuse and bewilder the public. Seigniorage is nothing more nor less than the charge made at the government mint for the work it performs in transforming the bullion that is brought to it into coin of the legal weight and fineness. Originally seigniorage was charged only to the extent of the actual cost of the work of the mints. While that was the case, and it is the case with our gold coinage today, the value of the bullion in a particular coin always equalled the value of the coin itself minus only the cost of minting it. Where, however, the government has an exclusive monopoly of the coinage of the country it becomes able to charge more as seigniorage than the cost of transforming the bullion into coin and thus to deprive a profit from the operation of its mint. While it would be profitable, for example, for outsiders to coin silver dollars of the requisite weight and fineness, they are forbidden under penalties of counterfeiting, from doing so. It is because the government assumes the monopoly of coinage and limits the output of its mints that it is able to secure large profits from the seigniorage and to maintain the coins issued at their face value.

The Bland law of 1878 provided for the purchase and coinage by the United States treasury of not less than $2,000,000 nor more than $4,000,000 in silver per month. Of this money a great deal was later stored in the treasury and put into circulation by means of the silver certificate, which is merely a certificate of the deposit of a certain number of silver dollars in the treasury, payable upon its presentation. For every silver certificate that is in circulation there are actually coined silver dollars in the treasury to redeem it. The Bland law was repealed and superseded by the Sherman law in 1890, which put an end to the coinage of silver dollars. Instead of purchasing and coining silver sufficient to make at least $2,000,000 monthly, the secretary of the treasury was now directed to purchase 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly and to pay for it with new silver treasury notes at the current market prices. The new treasury notes do not represent any specific amount of coin or bullion in the treasury, but are payable at the option of the secretary of the treasury in either gold or silver coin of the United States, while the whole amount of bullion bought is held as security for the whole amount of treasury notes issued. But the same law of 1890 proclaims it to be the established policy of the government to maintain the parity of value of all the money issued by its authority, and, in order to carry out this policy, the secretary of the treasury has taken it to be his duty to redeem the treasury notes in gold if the holder so demands, since, otherwise, gold coin, being the more difficult to obtain, would immediately jump to a premium. Under the Bland law there were coined $346,000,000 and under the Sherman law, previous to its repeal, there were purchased 168,000,000 ounces in silver, in exchange for which treasury notes to the amount $156,000,000 were issued.

If the bullion purchased under the Sherman law had been coined and put into circulation, either as coin or by means of silver certificates, instead of being held against treasury notes to the extent of the purchase price, the government would have issued some $55,000,000 more money than it has issued. This $55,000,000 would have represented the profit on buying bullion at the market price and paying it out after coinage at the legal ratio of 16 to 1 as compared with gold. The seigniorage to which the new Bland bill then refers is only an estimated seigniorage, or profit, upon work that has not yet been performed. Mr. Bland's proposition was to coin this $55,000,000 representing the government's profit, first, because the treasury is in need of money to tide over its deficit. This would leave in the treasury, bullion which, if coined into standard silver dollars, would equal in face value the treasury notes outstanding. If Mr. Bland had his way he would then coin the remainder of this bullion and call in the treasury notes, replacing them with the coined dollars either as coin or in the form of silver certificates. Were this process completed, we would in time have eliminated the treasury note from our supply of money. The result would be to have all the silver purchased under both the Bland law of 1878 and the Sherman law of 1890 represented in circulation by coin or its equivalent, the silver certificate. The country would then be in the same position as it would if the Sherman law had provided for the purchase and also the coinage of 4,500,000 ounces of silver monthly while it was in force. This is what Mr. Bland hopes to attain.—Omaha Bee.

Intrinsic Value Sophistry.

Gluten is an intrinsic property which attaches to starch, but there is no intrinsic value in gold or in silver. Just now they each have a commercial value, but those values would be changed in twenty-four hours by a little legislation. A year ago to-day the gold dollar had a value which was equal to five pecks of wheat. To-day it has a value which is equal to eight pecks of wheat. The intrinsic properties of the wheat were the same a year ago to-day as they are to-day. A bushel would make just as many pounds of flour out of which could be made just as many biscuits, and no more can be made to-day. But the relative value between the two has changed. The wheat itself has not changed; the gold dollar itself has not changed. All their intrinsic properties are just the same, but they have drawn apart, and there has been no over-production of wheat. Hence we take it that the change has come solely from the fact that the uses for gold have increased, hence its price has increased.—Salt Lake Tribune.

Looks Hopeful.

There is much encouragement for bimetallists, in the views recently expressed by Senator Allison, of Iowa, upon the new bimetallic movement in Germany. Mr. Allison is one of the ablest and best of our public men. He is a bimetallist in fact and was one of the members of the late Brussels monetary conference. There is further encouragement in the more recent news that the German empire is preparing for an additional coinage of silver. The bimetallic sentiment is also growing in England. Mr. Balfour's agitation is helping it, and Lord Rosebery, the new prime minister, is believed to be much less hostile to silver than Mr. Gladstone has proved himself to be.—Charlotte (N. C.) Observer.

Good Bimetallists in All Parties.

There are good bimetallists in all parties, and on this question we must unite. We cannot force a voter, who honestly advocates and votes for silver, into any particular party, no matter where he lives. Bimetallism is more likely to lose than gain by doing that. I am of those who believe the reinstatement of silver to be the paramount issue in American politics. But I cannot afford to drive from the support of bimetallism the man who believes in it and who will work and vote for it, although not willing to take the radical steps that to me appear to be plainly my duty, because he does consider the question as vital to national prosperity—even human freedom—as I do.—Congressman Sweet.

No Argument Against Bimetallism.

The panic may have resulted from the fear of a change in the money standard, but that is not the logical conclusion of arguments against bimetallism. It is generally urged that the use of silver as a standard with gold will result in inflation which produces an opposite result from that of a panic. If inflation is anticipated prices of staples would rise, while the panic caused a remarkable decrease in the value of everything except gold. Panics are always the result of too little currency. It is the fear of the gold standard which produced the panic.—Topeka Press.

It Will Rise Again.

They told you that they had 'destroyed silver, they told you they had laid the free coinage of silver away in a sepulcher newly made. But, my friends, there never was a tomb so strong that it could imprison a righteous cause, for, if bimetallism is right, as I believe it is, silver will yet lay aside its shroud; it will rise, and with its rise and reign will bless mankind.—Congressman Bryan.

To Cure Hard Times.

The fundamental cause of the present hard times is the fact that speculation in land has run so high that business cannot prosper and bear the burdens of land values. The whole civilized world practically has been a "boom town" on a large scale. The boom has reached the bursting point. The strain of land values on business is too great to be borne. Hence the hard times. Now there is one or two things, or perhaps something of both, that must occur before the hard times end. Either the boom must burst, so that business can resume upon a lower level as to charges for land; or else some tremendous impetus must be given to business which will enable it to go on and prosper upon the present high plane of land values. The Wilson bill might give the impetus. If there is free trade enough in it it will. Free trade would make business spring into activity for a time, perhaps a long time. But if that bill does not give us enough free trade it will give to business the necessary impetus, and, in that case, we shall have to wait for the end of hard times until we see in our daily real estate reports a very marked decline in the value of land.—Louis F. Post.

Pass The Revenue Bill.

It will not surprise any intelligent person to hear that Senator Hill, of New York, intends to lead the opposition to revenue reform in the Senate. Senator Hill has only one ambition, apart from his own advancement, and that is the ruin of the Democratic party. He has nearly achieved his ambition in New York and his energies are now directed against the national policy of the party, especially as it is represented by President Cleveland.

It has been expected that he would antagonize the Wilson bill, as his New York organ has done from the first. What has not been and is not now expected is that any democratic senators will follow his lead. A few of them have been training with him in his opposition to the President's appointments, but even they will think twice before ranging themselves distinctly against the platform and principles of their party.

The Republican Senators expect to avail themselves of the assistance of these men to delay the passage of the revenue bill, but that ought not to terrify its friends. After the bill has been reported in the Senate the lines will be so clearly drawn that the country will understand exactly where to place the responsibilities for the obstruction. Mr. Voorhees should press it forward fearlessly.—Philadelphia Times.

AT THE ARCH OF TITUS—TOURIST AND GUIDE.

"Good sir, the guide me order
To lead the through this border
To view this very place,
But through this archway Roman
With free will passeth no man
Of all my suffering race.

"See! with its decoration,
This arch derides my nation,
By Titus scourged and slain!
It pictures his achievements
And all of our bereavements.
Its sight fills me with pain.

"Then, sir, do not command me—
Indeed I would withstand thee,
As all of Israel must!
Alone go through the gateway,
While I around and straightway
Will meet thee, safe, I trust."

"My faithful guide, know thy way
Is parallel with my way,"
I forthwith made remark.
"I hate the chariots gory,
But love Judea's glory,
The candlestick and ark."

Whereat he gazed in wonder
Upon my face, and under
His eyelids teardrops stole.
He touched my hand then quickly,
Half doubtfully, half meekly,
And said, "Sch'ma Yisroel!"

Of course my tears descended,
While I the greeting ended,
"Adonai Echod!"
Around the archway turning,
The past within us burning;
"Jehovah is our God."

CATCHING A TRAIN.

It was my first day on the wheat prairie of North Dakota. I had left Fargo at 5 o'clock in the morning on one of the two daily trains westward and had stopped at Castleton, 220 miles from the "Phenix City of the Northwest." Thence I had tramped back across the prairie two miles to see the Dalrymple farm, the greatest in the world, 30,000 acres under cultivation. By 9 o'clock in the morning I had seen all there was to be seen in the process of thrashing and so retraced my steps to Castleton.

At the station I was informed that the next means of getting back to Fargo was by a freight train leaving at about 2 o'clock.

There are no art galleries or cathedrals in Castleton. There are a dozen or two stores and a hotel. I entered the hotel with the air of abandon and general superintendence usually ascribed to commercial travelers, sat down in the office and picked up day before yesterday's St. Paul paper. An old man with white whiskers sat in the sun reading the day before that's paper. He was evidently a pioneer, who had so long been away from the more civilized regions that he lagged a little in the history of the world. However, I was glad to see one guest at least in the hotel among the wheatfields.

By way of introducing myself to the old gentleman I cracked a few jokes on the bleepiness of the town and the dinginess of the hotel, but a little later realized that my remarks were ill directed, by finding that he was proprietor of the establishment. "Never mind," thought I, "it will be all right if I take dinner here." The old gentleman's face showed an animated interest as he informed me, in response to a question, that dinner would be served at half past 12.

I was now wearied of reading stale news, so went out and took a five minutes' walk to the end of the main street and back. Next I bought a novel and went out upon the prairie and spent a couple of hours reading. Killing time in a Dakota town I found not to be so exciting as the same occupation in Chicago or London. About noon I wandered back to town and got stranded on some California fruit at a store. I filled myself so completely with grapes and peaches that I never once thought of dinner at the hotel. The old landlord must have been grievously disappointed, but I did not see him again.

I talked with the clerk in the store, read some more and cursed the Northern Pacific until nearly 2 o'clock. Then I sauntered over to the station, and after waiting a half hour for the train inquired of the station agent as to what time I could get away.

He replied, "Not until the 4 o'clock through freight comes." The 2 o'clock was a way freight and had been delayed, he explained.

I moralized on the inconveniences of travel in a new section of the country and set about using up another two hours. I found that I had somehow got some spots of wheel grease on my clothes and managed to spend a comparatively pleasant hour scrubbing out the spots with naphtha at the town drug store. Then I read some more.

At 4 o'clock I went over to the station again and finally plucked up courage to ask the rather irritable agent about the train. He deigned to tell me, as if tired of seeing me around, that the train wouldn't be along until 5. Now I had a companion in my misery, for a lady, with two little girls, was waiting for the next train to Fargo.

Our common annoyances served to introduce us, and we talked of the harvesting and so on, I deriving some information, as she was a resident of the region. At 5 o'clock the train was not in sight, and the station man positively refused to know anything or to have any opinion as to the prospect of our getting away. I offered the lady my book and sat and reflected on the happiness of life in that section, getting up occasionally to look out upon the flat prairie to see if the train had yet risen above the horizon. There was nothing but the two rails stretching away till they converged into one, and then that was lost to the eye.

Once in awhile the lady and the little girls got up to look. Finally she announced that she could see see smoke in the distance. My eyes were not so good, but we watched eagerly, and after some minutes I acknowledged with great pleasure that she was right. We watched the smoke solidify into a train, which grew larger and larger until at last it rolled along, and at precisely 6 o'clock the engine came to a standstill a few feet beyond the station on a side track. The caboose intended for passengers was, of course, at the rear end of the train and seemingly a quarter of a mile away.

By this time several men and boys had gathered on the scene, apparently wishing to go to Fargo. No one seemed to want to walk away back to the caboose, and every one was very anxious not to get left. At this moment another freight train, hitherto unnoticed, came booming along on the main track. Things were getting muddled. Would the second train stop? Would the first pull up to the station to accommodate those who wished to enter the caboose?

I interrogated the engineer of train No. 1. "Ask the conductor. I don't know," he yelled. Then he relented and said, "The other train is the one you want." Train No. 2 had rolled along by the station and was now coming to a standstill a hundred yards away.

I found the lady with the little girls. Said I, "We must take the other train."

Some of the men and boys now started briskly to walk in the direction of the train, which was away beyond on the main line.

"Let me take a satchel," said I chivalrously as I grabbed one of her two enormous traveling bags and started for the train, followed by the lady, the little girls and the remaining men and boys. The train, as I said, was a hundred yards away. We thought of the nine long hours we had waited for that train, and goaded by the fear of a longer stay in Castleton we struck out at a lively pace toward the caboose.

Two-thirds of the distance had been accomplished, and I was striding along with the great piece of luggage banging against my legs at every step, when the train commenced to move away, slowly now.

"Run!" I shouted. The men ahead of us were already on the run.

The lady began to scamper, holding the 5-year-old by one hand, carrying in the other her satchel and followed by the 11-year-old, who brought up the rear.

We gained, but not fast enough, thought I.

"Let me have the child," I cried, and grabbing up the little one under my arm I began the chase anew, with the big satchel still in one hand and, making me go hippity hop by its joltings.

Women were not made to run. Yet the lady was doing well. The train was getting some headway. I dashed along with my awkward burdens and in a few moments reached the steps of the moving caboose, swung the child up into the arms of one of the men who had caught the train, threw my other charge, the strange lady's satchel, upon the platform and jumped aboard.

Glory! I was on my way to Fargo at last. But how about the lady? She was now 20 feet behind and only holding her own.

"Hurry!"

But she was puffing—out of breath—and began to lag behind. The 5-year-old on the caboose was dazed. The 11-year-old back with her mother on the railroad ties took in the situation and set up a howl to see me, the strange man, on board an eastern bound train with her little sister and her mother's luggage.

The train was moving even faster. There was but one thing to do. I leaped to the ground, caught the little girl as she was almost thrown to me by a kindly passenger, set her on the ground, then ran for the train, clutched the huge satchel, planted that on the ties and finally by good sprinting caught up with the caboose and swung myself aboard.

I had done all I could for the poor lady. It was sad to see her left behind after waiting all day for the train. She must now take her chances of getting into Fargo tonight by means of the way freight now standing at Castleton. Thus I reflected as I stood on the rear end of the caboose and looked at the forlorn trio standing on the track in the midst of their luggage, gazing after the receding train.

Then came jolt, jolt, jolt! It was down brakes! I clung to the guard rail to prevent myself from being thrown off. Quickly the train came to a full stop and didn't move for five minutes, during which time the lady and the little girls got aboard, together with a little fat man and two boys, who had also been distanced in the race. Then the train steamed back to the station and waited a half hour.

I wiped the perspiration from my flushed face, inwardly damned the railroad and rode the 20 miles on the outside platform of the caboose. We got to Fargo at a quarter past 7.—Charles Taylor Tatman in Budget.

"The Lamb Gourd."

The Duke of Holstein, in his "Travels In Muscovy and Persia" (1636), gives a full account of a wonderful vegetable growing in the neighborhood of the city of Samara, Russia, and known as the "lamb or sheep gourd." The duke says: "It most resembles a lamb in all its members and on that account is called 'the lamb gourd.' It changes place in growing as far as the vine or stalk will reach, and wherever it turns the grass withers. When it ripens, the stalk withers, and the outward rind is covered with a kind of hair, which the Muscovites use instead of fur. They showed us some of these skins, which were covered with soft wool, not unlike that of a lamb newly weaned."

Scaliger also speaks of the "lamb gourd" in his works. In one chapter he says that the queer vegetable continues to grow as long as grass is plentiful, but that when the grass falls the "pore creetyr dyes from e lac of nourishment." He also says that the wolf is the only animal that will feed upon it.—St. Louis Republic.

The Old Novel and the New.

"What is the difference between the old novel and the new?" I am asked. Here is a sentence which will just answer the question: In the old fiction they marry in the last chapter and live happily ever afterward; in the new they marry in the first chapter and live unhappily ever afterward.—London Million.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE TEMPLE OF FAME.

A Unique Performance Most Successfully Given to a Large and Enthusiastic Audience.

The fame of the "Temple of Fame" had preceded the coming of the drama itself, and when the announcement was made that the ladies of the Baptist Church and other ladies of Tecumseh, had decided to present it to a Tecumseh audience, everybody knew that a good thing was coming.

The play resembles in character the trade carnivals that have been given in many cities recently. It is somewhat similar to the Dickens Carnival given here three years ago. The leading character, who represents the Goddess of Fame, after a brief address, ascends her throne and the remaining characters are introduced to her in succession to plead their cause. Women, famous in the world's history, in art, literature and government, celebrated and renowned in different walks of life, each recites what she has accomplished to entitle her to be crowned the Queen of Fame. About sixty characters in all are represented, many of them being attired in rich and costly costumes.

Space will permit us to give only a brief outline of the performance. A "great white throne" was placed at the front left corner of the stage reached by five or six steps, where the Goddess sat, while the characters were presenting their claims. Each one was introduced by a Herald, the two heralds vying with each other in performing duty. The two pages sat at the feet when not otherwise needed. The body of the stage back of the drop curtain was fixed with rising seats, upon which each character took her station at the conclusion of her plea. At the close of the drama they were all seated upon this ampitheater, forming a magnificent tableau. Here is a full list of the characters, with the persons assuming them.

Goddess—Mrs. R. S. Moore.
Queen Isabella—Mrs. C. A. Wright.
Harriet Beecher Stowe—Mrs. N. P. Howland.
Topsy—Bessie Bates.

Miriam—Mrs. Libbie Lester. Maidens—Misses Edith Corey, Naomi North, Eva Elliott, Bertha VanValkenberg, Inez Thorp, Florence Hyde.
Music (Quintette)—Faron, Albert, Elona, and Ernistine Anderson.
Mary, Queen of Scotts—Mrs. C. H. Bramble.
Jennie Lind—Mrs. L. M. Kellogg.
Grace Darling—Miss Jessie Millis.
Helen of Troy—Mrs. Levi Hayden.
Queen Esther—Miss Blanche Taylor.
Josiah Allen's Wife—Mrs. Dolph Heesen.
Josiah Allen's Wife's Husband—H. J. Sweet.
Barbara Fritchie—Mrs. A. W. Mills.
Sister of Charity—Miss Ina VanValkenberg.
The Mother—Mrs. Fred Rosacrans.
Xantippe—Miss Mabel Wiley.
Joan of Arc, (with Guards)—Miss Lena VanValkenberg.
Hypatia—Miss Ella Primrose.
Mother Goose—Miss Etta Coddington.
Florence Nightingale, (with Guards)—Miss Ethel Sweet.
Pocahontas—Mrs. Eva Cooley.
Harriet Hosmer—Mrs. L. G. North.
Jeptha's Daughter—Miss Gertrude Fisher. Maidens—Misses Jule A. Hicks, Florence Brewer, Magdalena Arnold, Viola A. Shull, Winnifred DeWolf.
Frances Willard—Mrs. G. B. Garlinghouse.
Tabitha Primrose—Miss Ellen Fisher.
Emma Abbot—Mrs. L. W. Kimball.
Heralds—Capt. Will H. Hayden, Lieut Samuel R. McClure.
Guards—Will Ross, Albert Howard, Comfort Chase, Will Westcott.
Crown Bearer, (with Attendants)—Bessie Smith.
Pages—Fay Burlingame, Percy Slater.
Accompanists—Misses Jennie Root, Dora Grayson and Laura Clark.
Pianist—Miss Mabel F. Smith.
Decorator—Herbert H. Baker.

The exercises opened with two fine selections by the Social Concert Orchestra, and just after the appearance of Miriam the Anderson quintette gave a beautiful violin interlude in their usual pleasing manner.

The name of the person personified will indicate pretty accurately the character of her plea. Most of the parts were in the form of recitations but a few were set to music. The committee who formed the cast were certainly adepts in the work, for a more exactly fitting cast was never framed in Tecumseh. The Goddess acted her part, which was a difficult one, superbly. The historical characters—Queen Isabella, Queen Elizabeth, Martha Washington, Harriet Beecher Stowe and Topsy, Queen Esther, Helen of Troy, Joan of Arc, Mary, Queen of Scotts, were all admirably carried. The sedate characters comprising Sappho, Mrs. Browning, Rosa Bonheur, the Mother, Florence Nightingale, Frances Willard and others were most true to life. The comic characters, such as Mrs. Partington and Ike, Josiah Allen's wife and her husband, Xantippe, Mother Goose, Tabitha Primrose and Bridget O'Flannigan, furnished spice for the more serious parts and kept the audience in good humor. The biblical characters, including Miriam and Jeptha's daughter, with their attending maidens were beautifully rendered. The musical characters were happily personified—Christine Neilson, Jenny Lind, Barbara Fritchie and Emma Abbott. We are tempted to particularize, but when all did so well it would seem invidious to begin comparisons. One thing, however, we can venture to say—no one in all this long list acted her part truer to life than little Bessie Bates. Twenty-eight special costumes were rented from a Detroit firm, all of which were costly and magnificent, and the remaining costumes were gotten up with rare taste and tact.

After Emma Abbott had concluded her plea, the Goddess descended to the platform and in a brief, eloquent address selected the Mother as the most appropriate person to receive the crown.

Nine little girls dressed in white then marched upon the stage from below, singing as they marched, and the crown bearer presented to the Goddess the crown for the Queen of Fame. The exercises closed with a grand tableau, all the actors standing.

Not a hitch occurred in the program from first to last and every one present pronounced it an unqualified success. The committee in charge of the affair, Mesdames W. A. Smith, A. P. Coddington and J. D. Shull, assisted by Mrs. Spencer Lester, of Detroit, performed the task allotted to them, which was no small one, very skillfully, and they found many willing hands to help them. Bert Baker, as decorator, was the man to have charge of that work, and the beautiful setting of the stage showed his skill in that direction.

Acknowledgements.

The committee, having the management of the Temple of Fame, desire, on behalf of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church, to acknowledge their appreciation of the assistance of all those friends in Tecumseh who had part in its presentation, and to extend most hearty thanks for the same. Similar expressions are tendered to Mrs. L. W. Kimball and Misses Louise Van De Mark and Laura Clark, of Clinton, and Mrs. Spencer L. Lester of Detroit.

Our World's Fair coupon will be found on the fourth page hereafter.

The minstrel entertainment to be given by Co. C. has been postponed until after the May party. It will take place about the middle of May.

We call attention to the advertisement elsewhere of the National typewriter. It is one of the best machines made and is sold at a price much below some other makes. Its claims will bear investigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Shepard lost their infant daughter, four months old, last Sunday morning. It will be a sad blow to both, and especially to the young mother. The burial took place Tuesday afternoon.

Harry Lee will return to Virginia next Monday. He is well pleased with the outlook there thus far and expects to raise about ten acres of celery this season. His plantation contains 270 acres of land altogether.

The young men of Tecumseh are arranging for their eighth annual May Party, which will occur Wednesday evening, May 2d, '94. Seats for 100 spectators have been provided. The plan is to close the doors as soon as the 100 tickets have been sold, therefore come early and avoid the rush.

C. A. Slayton has changed the old armory into a carriage repository, putting in an elevator, and now invites the public to visit it and if you leave your order for a job he will show you how easy he can get it down on the ground. It certainly makes a fine show room.

The 18th annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of the second district will be held at the M. E. church, in this village, next week Wednesday and Thursday, April 25th and 26th. The sessions will begin Wednesday morning at 9:00 a. m. and close on Thursday evening. A very fine program has been prepared, and a large attendance is anticipated. Rev. Anna Shaw will deliver a lecture on Thursday evening upon "Woman Suffrage."

THE EARL OF ROSEBERY,

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

COULDN'T AGREE.

A Mistrial in the Case of Ex-Secretary Jochim.

After Deliberating Over the Evidence for Twelve Hours the Jury Reports the Vote Evenly Divided and Is Discharged.

BAIL IS RENEWED.

LANSING, April 15.—The jury in the case of ex-Secretary of State Jochim, charged with making a false public record in connection with the salaries amendment scandal of 1893, was charged by Judge Person Saturday morning and retired to deliberate upon a verdict. It was generally believed that the jury would disagree and this belief was found to be correct. After being out twelve hours until 9 p. m. the jury came into court and announced that it was unable to agree upon a verdict. Foreman Armstrong was asked if there was any probability of a change in the views of the jury and he answered that there was none. The jurors were then discharged. The jury stood six for conviction and six for acquittal. There was no change in the opinions of the jurors from the time they commenced voting in the morning until they were discharged.

The respondent feels considerable disappointment over the result, as he had expected an acquittal. The prosecution was equally chagrined, and the outcome is therefore a victory for no one. Not a little interest was manifested in the outcome of the case, as it was the first case against the indicted state officers to be tried. The failure of the jury to agree does not affect the other cases, and the people will continue to try them as rapidly as possible. Jochim's bail bond was renewed, and as the March term of court ended Saturday nothing further will be done in any of the amendment fraud cases until May.

PAID THE DEBT.

Michigan Banker Grants the Demand of an Irate Farmer.

KALAMAZOO, April 14.—There was an exciting scene in W. C. E. Edsell & Co.'s private bank at Otsego Friday when M. D. Shears, a farmer, compelled Banker Edsell to give up a note to save his life. Two years ago Edsell loaned Shears $400 and the latter with accumulated interest had reached the sum of $493. Monday Shears paid $300, which was indorsed on the note, but his demand for the note was denied. Friday he entered the bank, using violent and abusive language, and threatened to shoot Edsell on the spot or have the note. There were several others in the bank at the time, but no one offered to interfere with Shears, who has the reputation of being a tough customer, and Edsell surrendered the note, but will begin action against Shears.

LABOR IN DETROIT.

Low Wages Prevail, but the Men Hope for an Increase May 1.

DETROIT, April 15.—There is not a strike in progress in this city. It is an exceedingly unfavorable time for such a method of adjusting differences. A lockout and a boycott or two, however, relieve the monotony, and there are signs of future disturbances. The carpenters, stonemasons and bricklayers are especially uneasy at the present time. They are holding mass meetings with the view of enforcing a higher scale of wages on May 1. Since the great strike in the building trades eight years ago the unions have been weakened by personal animosity, and, considering also the small amount of work, they are in poor shape to strike. What will be the outcome of their efforts it is therefore difficult to predict.

Bought Detroit's Street Railways.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Thomas Nevins & Son, contractors of Orange, N. J., have signed a contract for the purchase of the entire street railway system of Detroit, Mich., 80 miles long of which 30 are trolley lines. The contract price is $4,000,000 in bonds and $4,000,000 in stock. Mr Nevins and his son are about to organize a stock company with a capital stock of $10,000,000 to develop the system and equip it throughout with the trolley system and to extend it.

A Narrow Escape.

MANCELONA, April 12.—The house of A. T. Wallace caught fire at midnight. In the house were Mr. Wallace, his son, son's wife and two children, and before any of the family were awakened they were all badly burned. The wife and two children and Mr. Wallace are in a critical condition. Their suffering is terrible. They lost everything, escaping only with their burned bodies. There was no insurance and the loss will fall heavily on the whole family.

Released by Death.

IONIA, April 12.—Daniel Goggins died at the asylum for insane criminals of exhaustion. He was 77 years old and was sent from Grand Rapids as a life convict to Jackson twelve years ago for the murder of his wife. He was transferred to Ionia three years ago.

Death of a Well-Known Navigator.

BAY CITY, April 16.—Capt. John Ryan died at his home here Saturday aged 55 years. He had been engaged in the lake business for many years and in the lumber trade during the latter part of his life. He was well known and highly respected.

Fatally Shot by a Negro.

BENTON HARBOR, April 14.—At a late hour Thursday night a negro named George Bandy, while being ejected from the home of William McKay, shot and fatally wounded Frank Cooper, a G. A. R. man and a resident of Decatur.

Bought a Lansing Block.

LANSING, April 12.—John V. Farwell, of Chicago, has invested $109,000 in Lansing business property, having purchased of Henry L. Hollister the Hollister block, the principal office and business block in the city.

Arbor Day.

LANSING, April 12.—Gov. Rich has issued a proclamation fixing Arbor day on Friday, April 27.

LYNCHING DENOUNCED.

Resolutions Adopted by the Michigan Equal Rights Association.

GRAND RAPIDS, April 13.—The Michigan Equal Rights association, made up of delegates representing a claimed membership of 10,500 colored people in the state, closed its annual convention Wednesday. Resolutions were adopted demanding that political favor be bestowed for fitness, not "pull," also reciting that "we are American citizens, and as such stand by all laws for the security of home and native land, and want law breakers punished when found guilty, but we condemn and brand lynchings as infamous and a relic of barbarism." T. P. Wood, of Tecumseh, was elected president.

His Life Crushed Out.

NILES, April 14.—Frank Leach met a horrible death from accident at noon Wednesday. In company with his brother he sawed a huge log through the center. It was on a steep hill and one of the parts caught Frank on the foot, threw him down and rolled over him full length, crushed his skull and many bones of the body. One eye protruded. He gasped only a few times before death came.

Not a Candidate.

MUSKEGON, April 13.—Congressman John W. Moon, representing the Ninth Michigan district, publishes a card stating that because of his private business he is not a candidate for the republican nomination this fall. J. C. ANOTHER CHARGE.

More Allegations Against Newell B. Parsons, of Saginaw.

He Is Accused Now of Having Stolen Bonds Amounting to $463,000.—The Missing Securities Recovered. However—Placed in Jail.

MORE TROUBLE FOR PARSONS.

SAGINAW, April 13.—Newell B. Parsons, head bookkeeper for Wells, Stone & Co., who is now under $7,000 bonds for the alleged theft of the books of the company from the vault April 5, was served with a warrant Thursday charging him with the theft of $463,000 first mortgage bonds of the Cincinnati, Saginaw & Mackinaw Railroad company. This crime, the complainants aver, was committed April 4, but the particulars the officers refuse to give out. They say, however, they have ample evidence to convict Parsons. Parsons was brought to the police court and after pleading not guilty his bond was fixed at $35,000 and he was taken to the county jail.

Simultaneous with these proceedings came the rumor that the bonds had been found here; also that Parsons had told where they were concealed, and still another story, on slightly better authority, that they had been recovered in Grand Rapids, where an attempt had been made to negotiate them. But it is now definitely known that the bonds were recovered at Grand Rapids, and it is claimed that nearly $70,000 in cash is also missing. It is believed that a confederate took the bonds to Grand Rapids, and becoming scared placed them in a safety-deposit vault instead of trying to sell them, and owing to this fact they were recovered.

CORYDON L. FORD DEAD.

Passes Away at Ann Arbor from the Effects of Apoplexy.

ANN ARBOR, April 15.—Corydon L. Ford, M. D., LL. D., professor of anatomy and physiology in the University of Michigan, died quietly at 3 o'clock Saturday morning. On Friday he completed his fortieth year as professor and delivered his last lecture, having handed in his resignation. On his way home he was stricken with apoplexy and did not regain consciousness.

Dr. Ford was born August 29, 1813, at Lexington, Greene county, N. Y., being descended from William Ford, who came from England in 1621. His early education was received in the district and private schools. At 17 he commenced to teach school, which he followed for seven years and then entered the office of Dr. A. B. Brown, at Somerset, N. Y. He studied the ancient languages in the Canandaigua academy and in 1840 entered the Geneva medical college, where he graduated in 1842 with such high honors that he at once received the appointment of demonstrator of anatomy, which chair he filled for the succeeding seven years, as also the same position at the medical college of Buffalo. The lectures he gave at both colleges fully established his reputation as an expert teacher of anatomy, which resulted in his being called to deliver lectures in the medical college at Castleton, Vt., and other institutions.

In June, 1851, he was appointed professor in the medical department of the University of Michigan, delivering his first lecture October 2, of the same year. As the terms of the department until recently consisted of only six months he was enabled to fill similar chairs at the Berkshire medical college at Pittsfield, Mass., Medical College of Maine, of Bowdoin, and Long Island college hospital, at Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1845 he married Mrs. Nathaniel Messer, a widow, who died about a year ago. He was exceedingly modest and made friends of all who knew him.

A Boy's Tragic Fate.

STANTON, April 12.—The 14-year-old son of Pat Belleau met with a horrible death. He went to the field to catch and bring to the barn a 3-year-old colt that had always been handled by him. After catching the animal the boy carelessly tied the end of the halter strap around his wrist. He was dragged all over the large field, being knocked against stones and pine stumps until, when found by his younger brother soon after, his body was literally crushed to a pulp.

Took Strychnine.

ANN ARBOR, April 13.—The body of Lois H. Janes, who disappeared Tuesday, was found Wednesday morning on the river bank, she having evidently taken a ten-grain dose of strychnine. The empty envelope was lying by her side. Despondency caused by straitened money matters and the disappointment in not getting a school at Battle Creek promised to her are supposed to have caused her suicide.

Embezzler Newkirk Sentenced.

BAY CITY, April 14.—Charles W. Newkirk, the Bay county savings bank bookkeeper, who is alleged to have embezzled $10,000 of the bank's funds, was arraigned Friday. The complaint against him was that he took $900. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to five years at the Detroit house of correction. Newkirk is only 22 years old.

Badly Hurt.

HASTINGS, April 14.—Fred Young, a young man employed by the Electric Light company, was severely injured while on top of one of the poles cutting a wire. The pole was defective and fell over, carrying Mr. Young with it. When picked up he was bleeding at the mouth and was unconscious. His ankles are broken and it is feared he has received severe internal injuries.

Cashier Gregory Taken to an Asylum.

ANN ARBOR, April 14.—Orla C. Gregory, the assistant cashier of the Dexter bank, who robbed the institution recently in an insane freak, has been taken to St. Joseph's retreat, a private asylum at Dearborn. He seems to be a complete wreck.

Gen. Alger Pleads for Heyerman.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—Gen. R. A. Alger, of Michigan, is here to urge President Cleveland and Secretary Herbert to leniency in the case of Commander Heyerman, of the navy, recently held responsible for the wreck of the Kearsarge.

Wood's Successor.

DETROIT, April 14.—John C. Ellsworth has been appointed grand receiver of the Ancient Order of United Workmen to succeed James W. Wood.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. L. W. Kimball and family expect to get settled in their new home this week.

Levi Hayden and wife and Joe Crosby and wife, of Tecumseh, attended the Episcopal church here Sunday evening.

Peter W. Jacobs, of Adrian, was calling on Clinton friends the last of the week.

Art L. Smith, Chas. H. Fabrique, Roy Codding and Fred Koernig each have a fine Sunol wheel.

Lawyers A. F. Freeman, of Manchester, and W. C. Burridge, of Tecumseh, were in town Friday.

Rev. W. R. Blachford was here Tuesday and bought an Acme bicycle of Brown & Kishpaugh.

Several new bicycles have been sold by our dealers lately. There are now 57 wheels in use here.

Will Hamilton and friend, of Detroit, and S. W. Demuth went to Evans Lake Monday to hunt ducks.

The funeral of Mrs. John H. Nelson was held at the family residence in Iron Creek last Sunday.

The body of Mrs. Milton VanAntwerp, (formerly Priscitta Cumming) of Jackson, was brought here for interment.

Rev. W. R. Blachford will celebrate the Holy Eucharist next Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. Evening services as usual.

Mrs. E. R. Smith and Mrs. C. S. Burroughs drove down to Tecumseh Sunday morning to attend St. Peter's church.

The funeral of Mrs. Lot Mills was held at the residence in Bridgewater Saturday last, Rev. D. H. Ramsdell officiating.

Tate, Van Tuyle & Co. contemplate building a new warehouse on the vacant corner. This would be a good scheme.

Mrs. Blanche Kimball, Laura Clark and Louise Van DeMark assisted in the Temple of Fame entertainment at Tecumseh Tuesday evening.

Wm. Marshall and A. C. Brown went to Chicago Saturday with two carloads of fat cattle. Twenty-five head were of Mr. Marshall's own feeding and they were the finest bunch of cattle seen in Clinton in years.

The Supreme Court having sustained the verdict of the circuit court in the Jas. Pykett case, he was taken to Adrian Wednesday of last week to await sentence. Most of our citizens believing Jas. Pykett innocent of the charge upon which he was convicted, a petition to the judge for a light sentence was drawn up and signed by a large portion of our business men and other citizens.

Drs. Hyndman, of Tompkins and Norvell, were here last Saturday to see Mr. S. F. Marsteller in regard to a monument for their family lot in the Norvell cemetery. They closed a bargain with Mr. Marsteller for an elegant monument to cost $1,200, which will be put up within ninety days from this date. It will be the finest piece of marble in the Norvell cemetery, when erected. Mr. Marsteller's business is constantly increasing, as his work advertises itself. He has made several good sales this spring.

The Teachers' and Patrons' Meeting.

The Teacher's Association meeting held at Town Hall, last Saturday, was called to order at 10 a. m. by C. F. Field.

Music by Clinton Male Quartette—Messrs. Fisk, Katner and Alexander Brothers; Mrs. H. D. Niblack, accompanist.

Commissioner Field followed with a few introductory remarks in which he stated the object of the gathering, and that the success of the session depended upon the teachers present, as it was expected that each and every one would assist in making it interesting and instructive. About forty were present when the meeting was called to order.

After music by Male Quartette, Miss Carrie Millspaugh, North Primary of Tecumseh, made some very interesting remarks on primary school work, showing on the board the systems used and showing some fine specimens of pastel work and paper folding by children in her department, closing her remarks by reciting a poem encouraging to a teacher's heart.

Commissioner Field and Prof. Kellogg added some appropriate remarks in the same line.

Singing by High School Choir.

Miss Maud Howell, of Macon, then presented a well written essay on "Love."

C. F. Field then followed with some fine suggestions relating to final examination in country schools, after which an adjournment of one hour was taken.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Song by Male Quartette.

Then followed a musical exercise drill by 16 little girls in Miss Avery's room which was very pretty.

Geo. S. Rawson followed with a well written essay. Subject, "Teacher and Patron, or the relation each holds to the other."

Mrs. Blanche Kimball then rendered a vocal solo in an artistic manner, with Miss Laura Clark accompanist.

President Thomas, of Adrian College, next followed with an admirable address.

Willard Stearns, of Adrian, was then called out and made a strong, stirring plea for a higher standard in teachers in the district schools as nine-tenths of the people receive their entire education in our district or common schools; gave some of the replies by applicants for certificates to questions of board, and criticised somewhat the State Board of Education. His remarks were listened to with close attention.

Music by High School choir.

Commissioner Field then followed with a few well-chosen remarks regarding the qualifications necessary to success as teachers, summing it up in one word—work.

Prof. Drake, of Ridgeway, then followed with some general remarks on schools and school work, giving some illustrations on the board, adding force to his remarks. Prof Drake is of a decidedly scientific turn of mind and his remarks were very interesting.

After a selection by the male quartette the meeting adjourned

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

The county board convened in special session on Monday last, and E. Leroy Mills was elected chairman, receiving the full vote of the Republican members of the board.

The object of the meeting is explained by the following important report which was adopted:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Lenawee county:

Gentlemen.—Your committee appointed to prepare a schedule of prices as a basis of taxation to govern the several supervisors in taking the assessment for the year 1894 (said values to be considered the price of an average article of the different classes) would recommend the following:

Good sound farm horses, $65.
Colts, 3 years old, $45.
Colts, 2 years old, $30.
Colts, 1 year old, $20.
Cows in three grades: 1st grade, $30; 2nd grade, $25; 3rd grade, $20.
Fat cattle, per pound, 3c.
Stockers, per head, $15.
Sheep per head, $1.50.
Swine per pound, 4c.
Wheat per bushel, 50c.
Carriages and buggies kept for pleasure, 1-2 to 3-4 per cent.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Arbor Day Proclamation.

In compliance with an honored custom and with public sentiment I hereby designate Friday, April 27, 1894, as Arbor day.

The proper observance of this day in the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers will result in beautifying and adorning our homes and highways and is most earnestly recommended.

To inculcate a love of the beautiful in nature, should be a pleasant duty for the teachers in our public schools and it is further recommended that the exercises in our schools upon that day be of such a character as will impress its beneficent object upon the minds of the pupils.

Given under my hand, and the great seal of the State, at the Capitol in Lansing, this eleventh day of April in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and eighteenth.

JOHN T. RICH, Governor.
WASHINGTON GARDNER, Secy of State.

Albion College Notes.

The spring term opens with an increase in the number of students over all preceding terms.

This is the term in which the base ball and tennis enthusiasts delight and on the very first day of the term real work on the tennis courts and the diamond commenced. In the beginning of the term the most interest is manifested in the direction of base ball and each pleasant afternoon scores of ardent lovers of the sport may be seen on the campus watching closely the various players and calculating the chances of the applicants for positions on the first team. On Friday last the members of team were chosen, and on Saturday afternoon the first match game of the season was played. The visiting team was the team from the Michigan Agricultural College of Lansing, and the game resulted in a victory for M. A. C., with a score of 14 to 11. Thus the first game of the season ended in a defeat for Albion, but the defeat will only stimulate the Albion team to harder and more effective practice and much is expected of them in the future.

The new term ushers in the first number of a new college paper. The paper is a newsy little bi-weekly and altho' laboring under the somewhat inexpressive name of the "Boomerang," it has evidently come to stay. W. B.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich., }
Council Room, April 10, 1894. }

Present, the President, Recorder, Trustees Boyd, Satterthwaite, Heesen, Smith and Wright.

The petition of Mrs. M. J. Wright and six others was presented, asking that a sidewalk be constructed along the west line of Van Buren street, between Chicago and Killbuck street: on motion, supported, that Marshal be instructed to notify property owners along said line to construct a sidewalk within sixty days. Carried.

The chairman of the street committee asked for an extension of time in which to report cost of repairing bridges in village; given until next meeting to investigate.

Low Excursion Rates South.

March and April are the most unhealthful and unpleasant months in the North while in the South they are among the pleasantest. All nature is decked with bloom. Now is the time to come South. Very low round trip rates can be secured on excursions leaving St. Louis at 8:35 p. m., March 20th, April 9th, 10th, and 24th, May 5th, and 22nd, and June 5th, 1894 over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. It will only cost you a trifle to visit the best and most healthful section of the South where you can find cheap homes with as fine a climate as that of Italy.

Full descriptions of the South sent free by E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent M. & O. R. R., Mobile, Ala.

EXCHANGE COLUMN.

This column is designed as a medium of exchange. It will afford an admirable scheme through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents.

WORK HORSE—Seven year old work horse for sale cheap. MIKE ECKERT.

BRITTON BUDGET.

C. L. Haines, of Adrian, was in town last Tuesday.

L. A. Brown has constructed about 200 rods of his wire fence already.

Eugene Cheever has treated his house to a new coat of paint. E. Swick did the work.

Meeting of K. O. T. M. Lodge, No. 467, the first and third Tuesdays of each month.

A. Gogelin has constructed a new barn on the lot where the blacksmith shop stood.

Another new sign appeared in town last Saturday. It is on L. C. Hoagland's buggy repository.

Joe Sage is in our vicinity building a wire fence which seems to be very durable as well as cheap.

The law suit before Justice Oliver between Geo. Exelby and A. Gogelin was adjourned until Saturday, May 5th, at 10 o'clock.

At the "Hard Times" social next Friday evening no one will be allowed to wear good clothes. It will just strike some of us, you bet.

Grant Osterhout's colt thought the road was not wide enough and so tipped Grant into the ditch just west of our village last Saturday.

The Ladies Christian Union Aid Society will meet in the church parlors Wednesday, May 2nd. Supper from 5 to 7, served by Mrs. Dr. Hendershot and committee.

Remember the "hard times" social of the Christrian Union church to be held at Exelby House, Friday evening, April 29th. Everybody come, and woe unto the dude who has the audacity to appear in a "biled" shirt.

Road district No. 6 commencing at the corners in our village and running north, is worthy of credit for the way in which they have improved their road. It was the worst road into our village and now it ranks among the best.

Britton will probably have a Masonic lodge. She feels like needing one and has made herself believe she does. They have the goat, the back yard, and the old oyster cans for his diet, but no lodge. A move for one is on.—Adrian Press.

One of our young men undertook to master a cigar last Tuesday. After smoking about one-half of it he was seen walking up aud down the railroad track to get fresh air. He is around again and says his mother does not know anything about it.

We understand that our village will get a little boom in the near future in the way of a brick and tile mill to be erected on Chas. Kniffen's land north east of the village. We hope the prospect will be pushed right along and success to the parties who undertake it. The Wabash railway is making preparations to put in a sidetrack as soon as possible.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Darius Smith is slowly on the gain.

There are no new cases of measles in town.

Clara Temple is recovering from the measles.

Dr. Rhode's father who is with him is quite sick at this writing.

Addie Sherman was under the care of the doctor the first of the week.

Eugene and Grace Herrington, of Blissfield, called on friends Saturday.

Mrs. Rhinebold is the happy possessor of a very fine piano of the Sterling make.

Geo. Dibble, wife and daughter, of North Adrian, visited at C. M. Gove's last Sunday.

Earnest Goodrich, of Ypsilanti, visited at Mrs. Hall's Thursday and Friday of last week.

Theodore Mead and daughter Bertha, of Biglow, Kansas, visited at E. W. Rappleye's over Sunday.

Quite a number of the ladies of the village interested in the W. C. T. U. work are in Tecumseh this week attending the district convention.

Beginning with May 1st the library will be closed afternoons, but open evenings from 6:30 until 9:00 and on Saturdays from 3:00 until 9:00 o'clock.

F. E. Pocklington has secured the contract to do the mason work, and George Kempf the contract for the carpenter work for the masonic temple to be built at Tecumseh.

There was a large attendance at the L. C. S. held at Chas. Underwood's on Friday evening and those present report it one of the best the society has held. The little German boys took the audience by surprise in their German selections.

At the annual election of officers for the W. C. T. U. the following were elected:

Presiden —Mrs. M. A. Lowe.
1st Vice President.—Mrs. F. E. Pocklington.
2nd Vice President—Mrs. James Curry.
Recording Sec'y—Sarah Pocklington.
Corresponding Sec'y—Mrs. Elizabeth Linn.
Treasurer—Mrs. John Arner.
Supt. Mother Meetings—Mrs. S. L. Rappleye.
Supt. of Franchise—Mrs. Ada Kelley.
Supt. of Flower Mission—Mrs. Jacob Arner.
Supt. of the Needy.—Mrs. M. A. Lowe.

Low rates to Mississippi and Alabama on March 20th, and April 24th. Tickets sold by C. & A. R. R. at one fare for the round trip.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Finley Harriott, of Constantine, Mich., is spending a few days among relatives and old friends.

Miss Lazalere, who has been spending the past few months with her aunt, Mrs. Chas. Burleson, returned to her home in California last week.

Misses Grace Sage and Emma Cotton are attending delegates at the County Convention of the Christian Endeavor Society, held in Clinton this week.

The members of Glen Hive, Order of the Maccabees, met at the home of Mrs. Emma Allen last Thursday afternoon, for a social visit and a sewing bee. A pleasant time was reported by all.

Peter Snauble's barn and most of the contents was destroyed by fire last Thursday about midnight, four very nice horses, one cow and fifty-seven sheep perished in the flames, he also lost 500 bushels of wheat, 100 bushels of oats and several tons of bailed hay. It is a very great loss to him. No cause is known for the fire, but is supposed to be the work of a tramp.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

"If April be cool and wet, they say, there will be plenty of oats and hay."

Miss Ida Buck has recovered from her late illness and has been visiting friends in Monroe county.

Fifty persons received the rite of baptism at the Springville M. E. church last Sunday, and several more are to be baptised by immersion later.

Mrs. Will Pentecost and daughters, Bessie and Veda, Miss Julia Daniels and Mr. Will Fellers are the latest victims of the mumps in this vicinity.

A house on the premises of John Randall, burned down last Friday night. It is supposed to have caught fire by accident, a family having just moved out. The owner lives in Milan.

If your fowls do not thrive or if they show signs of cholera, take a peck of lime slightly air-slacked, and with a small shovel throw it into every nook and corner of the hen-roost, first having cleaned the roost, and repeat this once each month and you will lose no more fowls with cholera. We have tried this and proved it good.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Our last week's letter failed to make connections.

Newell Wisner drove to Ypsilanti Monday returning Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Skeese visited at Aunt Anna Allen's Sunday.

Mrs. Bert Billington, who was very much worse last week, is better now.

The Bradley school has a vacation. Miss Holenbeck, the teacher, has the mumps.

Miss Irene Allen and Carl Wisner have returned to their duties at the Normal.

The three children of August Creigo, who were down with scarlet fever, are getting well.

George Ward has hired to Wm. Bradley by the month. Sam Tripp is indispensible to the same as a day hand.

Oscar Whelan, of Isabella county, visited his many old Franklin friends last week. Very many years ago he was resident here.

Ed Wisner has discontinued publishing The Pressette, (daily) at Delhi, La., for the present, and has started a weekly paper called The Enterprise, at the same place.

Owing to the rain, the Lyceum was postponed for a week and will occur next Saturday night at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's. The long delayed bebate on the equalities of the sexes will occur.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Ed. Dixon moved with his family to Willis last Monday.

Wm. Gordon is at Jasper this week learning cheese making.

Albert Towner, of Petersburg, was in town the first of the week.

F. G. Florence and Chas. Rothfuss made a business trip to Blissfield last Monday.

Several young people from here attended the C. E. convention at Clinton last Tuesday.

Willis Chatfield and Maurice Nay reviewed the Blissfield fire ruins Tuesday. They report that the blame is not laid upon the two merchants from this place who were there the day before.

Mesdames E. J. McIntyre, James Ash, Albert Lewis, and F. G. Florence, attended the L. O. T. M. school of instruction at Dundee last Wednesday afternoon and evening as delegates from Osgood Hive L. O. T. M., of Holloway.

Six young men met and organized a society for mutual improvement and the acquisition of wisdom and knowledge of the scriptural teachings of Christ by interchange of ideas and Bible readings together. It is to be known as the Young Men's Solomonic Society of Holloway, with Maurice Nay, president; Joe Hartman, vice-president; Harvey Hartman, secretary; Levi Carpenter, treasurer. Their first meeting was held at Holloway public hall last Tuesday evening. Mr. Mosebar, of Battle Creek, gave them a talk from the bible on the relative position of God and man.

OBITUARY.

Died, at Tecumseh, Mich., on Saturday morning, April 21st, 1894, Mrs. Adeline Frances Baxter, wife of B. L. Baxter, aged 71 years. Adaline Frances Cheever was born at Mt. Vernon, New Hampshire, June 10, 1822. In 1834 her father, Rev. Ebenezer Cheever, D. D., was called to the charge of the Second Presbyterian church, Newark, N. J., where he continued until 1845. In Jan. 1846 he came with his family to Tecumseh, to fill the position of pastor of the Presbyterian church of this place. At that time there was a circle of bright educated young persons here, who now are advanced in years or have passed from earth. Among them was Mr. Benjamin L. Baxter, of the firm of Bills & Baxter. On the 21st of Oct. 1846 Mr. Baxter and Miss Cheever were united in marriage. The ceremony took place in the old church building. The young couple began their married life in the home they have occupied ever since. Here their children, Hattie and Frank, were born, both of whom were present at the mother's bedside before she died, and the one with husband and children, the other with his wife when the funeral services were held. Had Mrs. Baxter survived a little more than two years longer the golden wedding anniversary might have been celebrated. The cause of her last illness was a cold, taken at a church social; pneumonia set in, and there was not vitality sufficient to overcome the attack of the disease. On Saturday morning surrounded by those she held dear, and trying to tell them of her happiness, her spirit found a glad release. Besides husband and children, Mrs. Baxter has left to mourn her loss, an only sister, Mrs. E. C. Falboute, of Newark, N. J., and an only surviving brother, Henry M. Cheever, Esq., the well known lawyer, of Detroit. She was educated in part at least, at the Young Ladies' Seminary, of Mrs. B. Cook, of Bloomfield, N. J. At the age of sixteen she professed conversion and united with her father's church. In intellect she was keen and bright; in affection she was tender and true. Her ready sympathies were ever going out toward those in trouble and prompting her to give them succor. In her religious life she never wavered. The honor of the Lord's cause held a foremost place in her thoughts, and her pastors found in her a loyal helper and friend. We will not search to see if she had not faults, but frame this little tribute to help recall the many virtues which stood forth so prominently, and so brightly adorned her life. Her experience was no exception to the rule, "whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth", but she recognized the Lord's hand in her chastenings and met them with a brave, submissive spirit, never murmering or complaining. Walking with firm step amid the trials that befel her, she could say:

"But I shall share a noble part,
When grace has well refined my heart."

The refining process has ended now. The refiner has taken the crucible from the fire. To be able to say, 'I am satisfied' is a great thing for one endowed with God given faculties and power. A few days ago and our dear friend could only say, "I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness;" this she said with her last breath. But now has she not awaked, and is it not in the likeness of God?

A REMARKABLE CURE.

A Case of Piles of Eighteen Years' Standing, cured by the Pyramid Pile Cure.

There are plenty of pile cures which give relief and sometimes cure of piles, but there is only one which can be depended upon with certainty to cure obstinate long standing cases, and that is the Pyramid Pile Cure.

Endorsements and testimonials are received daily from men and women whose integrity and reliability are above question and in this connection a letter received from the Rev. Jas. H. Wesbrook of Bowne, Mich., may be of interest to pile sufferers who have sought in vain for a cure. He says:

I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and I know it is all that is claimed for it. I had been troubled with piles more or less for about eighteen years and I had tried other remedies, but the piles grew worse until about ten years ago I used the Pyramid Pile Cure. It gave almost instant relief and I have been free from piles ever since. Rev. Jas. H. Wesbrook.

The remedy seems to act equally well in every form of piles, blind, bleeding, protruding or itching. It stops all pain almost immediately, allays irritation and removes constipation, and anyone who has suffered the annoyance and pain of a rectal trouble will appreciate the excellent results which invariably follow the first application of the Pyramid.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co., of Albion, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere at one dollar per package.

THE EVOLUTION

Of medicinal agents is gradually relegating the old-time herbs, pills, draughts and vegetable extracts to the rear and bringing into general use the pleasant and effective liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs. To get the true remedy see that it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only. For sale by all leading druggists.

A populist views the situation as follows: "The chinch bug eats the farmer's grain, the bee moth spoils his honey, the bed-bugs fill him full of pain but the humbug scoops his money." To which his brother adds: "The lightning bug can thunder much, the big bug has no fame, the gold bug has no argument, but gets there just the same."

"What makes you look so uncomfortable?" said one young writer to another. "I'm thinking about what I shall put in my next article." "Thinking!" "Yes." "Good gracious man! You mustn't do that. You'll spoil your style."

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

W. C. VanAntwerp has a fine new awning in front of his harness shop.

Mr. Chester Haines and family, of Adrian, came over to attend the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Dibble, last Sunday.

Mrs. H. C. Snedicor and son Fred, of Ypsilanti, visited friends part of last week and attended the Temple of Fame.

A. G. Nicholson, of Saline, who was in the photo business here several years ago, spent last Sunday with Mr. Fowler's family.

The lot around the new Armory is being cleaned up and neatly graded. Everything will be in apple pie order for the May party.

Rev. Jesse Boswell, of Weston, will speak before the B. Y. P. U. at the chapel of the Baptist church on Friday evening of this week.

The regular monthly social of the Baptist church will be held at the chapel parlor on Thursday May 3rd. Supper at half past five.

Will Hurlbut has sold his interest in the steam mill to his partner, Chas. Heck. Mr. Hurlbut intends to move his family back to Adrian.

Claude VanTyne returned to his University duties last Monday. He is thinking seriously of taking a trip to Denver during July and August on a bicycle.

Mrs. Wm. Bresie, who has been spending the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Crowell, in Cleveland, has returned and will spend the summer at her old home.

Lyman H. Aldrich, a farmer living near Morenci, took his own life last Monday by swallowing the contents of a bottle that continued morphine and laudanum.

A letter received the other day, from Chas. H. Beneway, who is now living at Alpena, indicates that he is doing well. His old Tecumseh friends will be glad to hear it.

A new floor is being laid in the store purchased by Ed. Kirchgessner and he will also put in plate glass windows. The extra width of this store will make it a superior room for his use.

Ed Kirchgessner is moving into the second story of the store purchased of J. S. Kinney and Mr. Kinney is moving into his own residence on Adrian street, which has been rented for some time.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, was at home a couple of days last week. In a short talk with him we learned a peculiar coincidence in his family affairs, which but few men can boast of. He has the honor of being grandfather to five grandsons, all of whom have been born within two years, the oldest being a little more than eighteen months and the youngest ten days old. "Uncle George" is evidently doing his best to recruit the ranks of the Democracy.

Tomorrow Dr. C. M. Woodward, wife and two daughters, start on a Southern trip, first going to Washington via Cincinnati. The Doctor goes to Washington to attend the meeting of the "Association of Military Surgeons of the United States" of which he is a charter member, ex-vice president and chairman of several committees, and at which meeting he will read a paper on a military surgical subject. The daughters will remain in Washington a little time for a visit with friends, while the doctor and his wife return to Cincinnati and take a special train on the Queen and Crescent line on May 5th for New Orleans and Galveston to attend the meeting of the National Association of Railway Surgeons, of which the doctor is also a member and where he will read a paper on a topic connected with railway surgery. Excursions have been arranged for the members of this Association and their wives, to Austin, San Antonio and other points of interest, and possibly into Old Mexico. As free passes are furnished for the round trip from the point of starting, it will make a delightful and inexpensive trip.

Card of Thanks.

Not being able to meet each one personally, we take this method of acknowledging the debt of gratitude we owe our friends and neighbors, especially the pastor, choir and bearers, who so kindly assisted us during our recent bereavement.

DAVID B. HILL and Colonel Breckinridge should set up housekeeping together now. They are both adepts at cooking their own goose.

THE New York World aptly says: In the controversy between Senator Hill's heels and the Democratic dashboard, the worst damage will not be sustained by the dashboard.

The fate of the income tax feature of the tariff bill is somewhat problematical. Whether it is retained in the bill or not may depend on the votes of a few western Republicans.

HERE is an exemplification of New York politics in a nut shell: "I am a Democrat."—David B. Hill. "I hereby cordially certify to the correctness of this assertion."—Thomas C. Platt.

SENATOR HILL'S cant phrase, "I am a Democrat," will be accepted hereafter at its real value. It has the same significance at present that the same dictum would have had from the lips of Aaron Burr.

THE Senate closed the general debate on the tariff bill Tuesday and it will now begin the consideration of it by items. This talk will continue—until the judgment day, if "senatorial courtesy" could have its way.

THE Senate committee on territories has agreed to report favorably a bill for the admission of Utah as a state. It is a satisfaction to know that even a fraction of the U. S. Senate is trying to do something except talk.

SENATOR BRICE has frequently been spoken of as a Senator from two states. His present attitude on the tariff question, acting in the role of an assistant republican, is not endorsed by the Democrats of either New York or Ohio.

THE new rule to prevent filibustering was adopted by the House last week, and that body can transact a little legislative business occasionally. The greatest obstacle now to effective legislation is "senatorial courtesy."

SENATOR VOORHEES wrote to a newspaper correspondent who had sent in a card asking his opinion of Hill's speech: "Nobody but a fool would ask my opinion of Hill's speech." Great Scott! What is becoming of "senatorial courtesy."

THE factional warfare waged by the Hill guerillas against Cleveland's administration may have one good effect; it will eliminate New York from national politics hereafter. A western candidate will lead the party in 1896, and, if placed on the right kind of a platform, will lead it to victory

THE St. Louis Republic says: "Mr. Breckinridge has determined to stay in the Congressional race, and expresses his confidence of a return to the next House. This is faith everlasting. Nothing but Mr. Breckenridge's Calvinism can lead him to feel his calling and election sure.

TROUBLE is brewing in Washington for Coxey and his army, and those persons who have enough pocket money to take care of themselves had better think twice before joining him. The mysterious daily conferences between the civil and military authorities of Washington bode no good for the commonweal army.

THE resolution of Congressman Bryan proposing an amendment to the Constitution providing for the popular election of Senators, will be favorably reported to the House. The resolution favors leaving it optional with each state to adopt or reject popular elections of United States Senator. This is a much needed reform. But will "senatorial courtesy" permit the Senate to pass such a resolution?

WE have received a copy of Congressman Gorman's speech on the tariff, delivered in the House during the discussion of the Wilson bill. It is a very creditable speech and presents some facts on the wool question which every voter should know. He shows conclusively that the higher the tariff is on wool, the lower is the price which the farmer gets for his product. This is the FACT, whatever one's theory may be.

NO MAN of the century has been made to feel so keenly as Col. Breckinridge that the way of the transgressor is hard. Not only has his sin found him out, but on every hand he is condemned and his social as well as his public life has been ruined. It does not seem possible that he can be returned to Congress, and there is nothing for him to do but to live with his own unhappy memories and do works meet for repentance.—Detroit Free Press.

MEXICO PROSPERS.

The Silver Standard a Success in Our Neighboring Republic.

The report of President W. G. Raoul, of the Mexican National railway, gives in an indirect way some very interesting facts concerning the effects which the single silver standard has on the business prosperity of a nation that is next door neighbor to a country where the single gold standard is in operation. These facts show beyond all question that, as between the two standards, the silver standard is the one which affords the greatest stimulus to the industrial progress of a people, and gives them the largest prosperity.

In Mexico we see an actual demonstration of the facts which the Atlanta Constitution has from time to time put forth in the shape of arguments. The Constitution employed these facts as arguments, not to show that the single silver standard is preferable or even desirable as compared with the joint standard of gold and silver; but to show that there is nothing whatever in the threat of the gold-bugs that the free coinage of silver here will throw us upon the singe silver standard. It stated the facts in order to show that even if free coinage by the United States did result in the single silver standard the people would be far more prosperous under it than they ever have been or ever can be under the single gold standard.

The report of President Raoul shows, in the first place, that the Mexican National railway has had a tolerably prosperous year, compared with the high average of prosperity in Mexico, and a most remarkably prosperous year when compared with the low average of railway prosperity in this country. The net income of the road over cost of working was $1,638,427 in Mexican currency—the equivalent of $1,310,750 in gold.

The road was built with foreign capital, and the interest on its bonds is payable in gold. The loss in exchange for the payment of this interest in gold amounts to $482,242. The New York Financial Chronicle, however, with a famous disregard of facts altogether laughable, turns the whole net income of the company into gold, and figures out that one-half of it has been lost through the depreciation of silver. As this conversion occurred in the office of the Financial Chronicle and nowhere else, it is not supposed that President Raoul and his prosperous railway will be bothered by the accompanying loss. Give the editor of the Chronicle a pencil, a piece of paper and a ten-cent cigar and he can upset the whole status in Mexico, and bring the National railway down to the level of our own roads that are now in the hands of receivers, or barely escaping receiverships by the skin of their teeth.

As a matter of fact, argues the Constitution, only enough of the net revenue to pay the interest on the bonded debt of President Raoul's road is converted into gold, and that transaction is accompanied by far less loss and embarrassment than the efforts of our own roads to pay the interest on their bonds in the face of the low prices and depression caused by the single gold standard. For President Raoul expressly states that silver has not depreciated in Mexico. Its purchasing power remains the same. In other words, the testimony of this eminent railway manager is to the effect that the silver standard is a stable standard. In Mexico the purchasing power of the silver dollar remains the same, neither increasing nor diminishing. Consequently there is stability in prices, in wages, and in prosperity; and the high premium on gold—or, to put the situation in commercial language—the high rate of foreign exchange is a constant stimulus to domestic trade and to domestic enterprise. Thus, while President Raoul's road has a decreased amount of through traffic which would have to be carried at low rates, it has a heavily increased volume of local freights which are hauled at higher rates. In addition to this, the rapid development of local industries, stimulated by the high rates of exchange (the gold premium), enables the company to purchase many of its supplies at home.

"One cannot help reflecting," remarks the Financial Chronicle, "how vastly different would be the position of the Mexican National to-day if the Mexican dollar was on a parity with gold instead of being so greatly depreciated." Bearing in mind the fact that the Mexican dollar will purchase as much in Mexico as it would twenty years ago, the reflection of the Chronical is worth reflecting on. If the single gold standard were to go into operation in Mexico to-morrow, every interest in the country, including the Mexican National, would promptly go into bankruptcy.

Let us all bear in mind the fact the Constitution concludes, that at the Brussells conference the Mexican delegates declared that they were satisfied with the status of their own country. They were willing to agree to international bimetallism,—that will-o-the-wisp invented by the Shylocks—but they did not urge it.

STRONG TALK.

Jay Cooke, the Great Eastern Financier, Declares for Bimetallism.

The Philadelphia American is authority for the statement that Jay Cooke, one of the most successful of American financiers, is an advocate of free silver, and has declared himself very strongly on that subject, expressing regret that the subject was so little understood by the people in the east.

"The demonetization of silver," he said, "was a national crime, because at one blow it cut off one-half of the basis of value, and that, after all, lies at the root of the money question. I am a bimetallist from head to foot," said Mr. Cooke, "and I believe much of our troubles may be traced to the blow at our silver. The fight against silver has been carried on for more than fifteen years, and it has been aided by official antagonism on the part of the secretaries of the treasury as much as anything else. One of the things we need is the remonetization of silver. We need it, too, without any cowardly makeshift, without Sherman bills or any other kind of bills. I know the objection will be raised that the United States cannot act independently in a matter of this kind; but I beg leave to dissent. It would not be long before most of the countries of Europe would be with us. This I consider real protection to American industry. One thing the gold advocates forget, and that is the army of men that would be set to work digging for silver would at the same time discover considerable gold. I know that I am speaking for an unpopular cause, and that the manufactured sentiment of the country is against it, but I believe what I say, and I think the time will come when the country will be educated up to the same ideas. A man that talks for silver in these days is accused of either having interest in silver mines or of being a crank. I have not to-day a single dollar invested in a silver mine, and I respectfully disclaim the distinction of being a crank."

COMING TO IT.

The United States May Finally Come to Bimetallism Without the Aid of Europe.

Mr. Charles Francis Adams wrote last December a letter to Judge Carey, of Wyoming, which the congressman read during his speech on the seigniorage bill. Like Gen. Walker's efforts, it may accelerate the campaign of education by confusing the gold standard snobs. Snobbery always treats a millionaire with respect.

Mr. Adams used this language: "When the silver discussion began I was a gold monometallist." "I have since seen occasion to revise this conclusion." "The financial troubles of last summer have satisfied me that a monometallic basis is altogether dangerous." "The withdrawal of any considerable quantity of that metal—gold—not only produces the natural amount of disturbance, but it produces probably nearly twenty times as much, owing to the superstructure of credit which necessarily in modern communities exists on a basis of precious metal."

These few sentences from the letter are so southwestern in flavor that we can almost imagine that Silver Dick himself wrote them.

Mr. Adams follows Gen. Walker. He believes that bimetallism can be secured only by co-operation among the great commercial nations.

But Mr. Adams' conclusion is not as important as his premises. In the course of the letter he assents to nearly all the propositions upon which the southwest has founded its free coinage crusade of the past twenty years. If Massachusetts had favored those propositions in 1878 a free coinage bill would have been passed when gold and silver were so nearly together in price that no disturbing effect on contracts would have been felt.

There are very few men in America who have had wider experience in business than Charles Francis Adams. He controls investments in several western cities, has been president of the Union Pacific and is the trusted adviser of very large investing interests in new England and Europe. His position has required him to study finance and production. When he says that he has "seen occasion to revise his conclusion," it means that bitter experience has taught him what it has taught the producing classes of the southwest.

Gold monometallism is uncertainty in finance and depression in trade. That much Mr. Adams is convinced of, since his conversion.

We could not ask much more of him yet. A little later, if Europe will not come to a bimetallist agreement, we should not wonder if Mr. Adams writes a letter in favor of bimetallism in the United States.—St. Louis Republic

The World's Gold Output.

A production of gold throughout the world of $150,000,000 for 1893 is the latest estimate of the bureau of the mint, and the figures which have recently been received verify the estimates made early in the year. The gold production of 1892, as revised in the last report of the mint bureau, was $138 861,000. The increase of $11,000,000 will be mainly furnished by the United States, South Africa and Russia. The figures for the United States, although not yet quite complete, indicate an increase of $4,000,000 over those for 1892; the increase in South Africa will be about $4,000,000, in Russia about $500,000 and in Australia also about $500,000. There will be small gains in other countries, including China and Japan, but they may be offset by small losses elsewhere. The returns from Russia and Australia are not yet complete and may show an even larger increase than has been estimated by Mint Director Preston.

Bland's Triumph.

The overwhelming triumph of that grand old man, Richard P. Bland, in finally passing over the protests of gold-dolaters of the east the seigniorage coinage bill, is the turning point which marks the advance of the cause of the people which has been so long stayed by the money power of the east. The majority in the senate in favor of the measure is really astonishing in view of the recent attitude of that body upon the silver question. It is altogether probable that they have been forced to change their course by the voice of the sturdy yeomanry of the country which has so forcibly expressed itself in language which could not be mistaken even by those senators who have in the past shown themselves to have been so blinded by the glitter of gold and deaf to the voice of the great toiling masses whom they represent in congress.—Topeka Press.

Georgia Advice.

The poorest business a man ever engaged in is talking of hard times. If your pants had holes in them as big as a barn door and not enough money on hand to purchase a beef liver for dinner, hold up your head and talk like a millionaire.—Telfair (Ga.) Enterprise.

Stop crying hard times and talk about the good times coming, and you will feel better and make others feel better.—Franklin (Ga.) News.

Senate and Tariff.

The people are taking very little interest in the proposed action of the Senate on the tariff bill. After our house of lords have tinkered it to death, as is proposed by pseudo-democrats, of whom Brice, of Ohio, is a type, it must go back to the House of Representatives, and those who still entertain a lingering impression that they voted for tariff reform in 1892 have confidence in the members of the popular branch. If the Wilson bill, when it gets back to the House, if it ever does, is greatly changed, the bad work of the Senate will be swiftly undone. The sugar speculators who fancy that the Louisiana senators will have the last word in imposing a tax on sugar for the benefit of a few planters will find that they do not control the house. That body deliberately refused to sanction a duty of even less than a cent a pound when it had the bill under consideration, and by a strong vote declared against any tax whatever on sugar. No food of the people should ever be taxed. If the senate insists on taxing it that irresponsible branch of the government may become as odious here as is the house of lords in England. Both ought to be abolished.—Jackson Patriot.

The U. S Senate.

Despite the efforts to keep it down there intermittently arises an opposition to the United States Senate. While we are in sympathy with this demand and believe that it cannot be brought about too soon, still we recognize that there are very grave obstacles in the way of doing it, the principal one of which is that the change cannot be made without amendments to the constitution. In the first place, the Senate itself would bar the way to anything that would lead in the direction of allowing the people to vote on the amendment, and even if they should it would be ten years before that body could be eliminated. But the people are gradually awakening to the idea that even if that body cannot be dissolved it can be made more useful. The plan was begun in Illinois when the members of the legislature were pledged before election, in their party conventions, that they would vote for so and so for United States Senator. The Democratic legislators were pledged to Mr. Palmer, who now represents his state in the Senate. The Democrats of Georgia have taken the cue from Illinois. Already three gentlemen, not including Mr. Colquitt, are stumping that state with a view to securing the nomination of legislators, who will, if elected, give them their votes for the United States Senate. Leading men of both parties in other states have the matter under consideration; so we think within the next three or four years the idea of naming the United States senatorial candidate before the legislative candidates are elected will become popular. This does not directly bear on the proposition to dissolve the senate, but it points a way by which greater life can be infused into what is now a moribund body, and it may in the end, place matters in such a position that it will be possible one of these days to elect a majority of United States Senators who will be pledged to the abolition of that body. We think it would be wise to work on this line, with the idea, in future, of getting rid altogether of what is now a very expensive and very aristocratic, and therefore very useless, lawmaking body.—National Economist.

PHARAOH'S DAUGHTER AND MOSES.

Whin Pharaoh's daughter
Wint down to the water
Shure there was young Moses a-swimmin around,
Wid his basket all handy
And a stick of swate candy
To kape him from cryin until he was found.

Sez she to a maiden;
"Bring here the young haythen.
Your trotters be shakin, ye lazy colleen.
If the water once wets him,
Or the alligators gets him,
It's no crocodile's tears you'll be sheddin, I ween."

So whin from his swimmin
He was brought to the wimmin,
Faith it shows how the blarney's a female's chief joy.
A nate bow he was makin,
Just as shure as I'm spakin,
"Begorra," says she, "he's the broth of a boy."
—Jack Haven in University Courier.

I SMELL SMOKE.

Mr. Snoodle is an inveterate smoker and has a most reprehensible habit of smoking in bed, but Mrs. Snoodle, though she allows him to smoke anywhere else, very properly forbids him to indulge in such a dangerous practice. However, as Mrs. Snoodle is a remarkably sound sleeper Mr. Snoodle frequently manages to enjoy a few stolen whiffs.

One night when in bed Mr. Snoodle had an irresistible desire for a pipe, which he in vain endeavored to combat. His wife was fast asleep, so he cautiously stretched out his hand for his pipe, which lay on a little table by the bedside. Then with equal caution he filled it, lighted up and was puffing away with intense relish when Mrs. Snoodle turned over and gave two or three snorts.

"I believe she's going to wake up," thought Mr. Snoodle and hastily took his pipe from his mouth and placed it on the table.

Mrs. Snoodle gave a few more snorts and woke up. Then she gave a series a sniffs, and Mr. Snoodle trembled, for the room was pregnant with tobacco smoke.

"John, are you smoking?" asked his wife sternly.

"Certainly not, my dear. Whatever makes you think so?" he innocently inquired.

"Because I can smell tobacco," she replied. "Phew, how strong it is! Don't you smell it, John?"

"Can't say I do, Martha. I've got a bit of a cold."

"Open your eyes, man, and then you will," snapped Mrs. Shoodle.

"I don't smell with my eyes," giggled Mr. Snoodle.

"What I mean is wake up properly and sniff hard. Now, can't you smell it?"

"Well—er—I think there is a faint odor of tobacco," admitted the culprit.

"Think—faint odor! Why, the place reeks with it! I tell you what it is, John, there's somebody smoking in the house," declared his wife.

"Do you think Jane indulges in a pipe on the sly?" suggested Mr. Snoodle.

"Nonsense!"

"Well, my dear, the only other living thing in the house is the cat, and I never heard of cats smoking."

"Don't talk rubbish, John. It's a serious matter. It's my firm belief there's a burglar smoking in the house." And Mrs. Snoodle shivered.

"Ah, very likely," replied Mr. Snoodle, thankful for his lucky escape and preparing to go to sleep again.

"John, are you going to sleep and let the house be ransacked?" asked his wife indignantly.

"Certainly not, my dear."

"Then why don't you go down stairs and catch the burglar?"

Mr. Snoodle very reluctantly got out of the warm bed into the cold air, sleepily lighted a candle and moved toward the door.

"Aren't you going to take some weapon of defense?" asked his wife. "Do you want to be killed? I never saw such a man!"

Mr. Snoodle rather sulkily seized the poker and muttered that "if he found a burglar he'd make it smoking hot for him."

He had got half way down stairs and was thinking of anything but burglars when he suddenly saw a man dart out of the dining room and bolt down the kitchen stairs. Mr. Snoodle's first impulse was instant flight, for he was an arrant coward, but he was so astounded and petrified with fear that he was utterly unable to either move or speak. He simply stood still, holding the candle nearly upside down, with his mouth wide open. Then he heard the back door bang and knew that the burglar was gone, so thought it was about time for action and to earn a little cheap glory.

So he roared out: "You villains! I'll murder you! I'll scalp you as clean as a whistle!" and rushed down stairs. He had never before felt so heroic in his life. He bounded into the dining room and fought fiercely with the furniture, especially the fender, as he could bang into that without injuring it much until he was quite exhausted.

"John, John, come up stairs!" screamed Mrs. Snoodle. "You'll be killed!"

"It's all right, Martha!" shouted back Mr. Snoodle.

"Have you got the rascals safely bound then?"

"No, they've got away. But I've nearly killed 'em!"

"Thank heaven! Come up stairs and let me dress your wounds, dear," said Mrs. Snoodle solicitously.

Mr. Snoodle, after securing the back door, which the servant had omitted to lock, and undoing the bundle of plate that the burglar had left behind in his hurry to escape, went up stairs.

"Oh, John," exclaimed Mrs. Snoodle on beholding him, "then you're not dead?"

"No, dear," he said, mopping his brow. "But it was a terrible fight."

"I'm sure it was. I never heard such an awful row. Did they take anything?"

"Only their hook," grinned Mr. Snoodle. "I was just in time to prevent 'em carrying off the best part of our plate. It was all tied up ready. That idiot of a Jane forgot to lock the back door. I'll give it to her in the morning!"

"The silly girl! How many burglars were there, John?"

"Two. One great fellow over 6 feet, and another bigger, if anything, but I caught one a crack on the head that must have pretty well smashed it, and I'm sure I've broken the other one's leg," declared the mendacious Mr. Snoodle.

"Then I wonder he could run away," remarked his wife.

"He doesn't run with his arms, Martha."

"No, but you said you'd broken his leg, John."

"Oh, I meant arm."

"I suppose the place is covered with blood?" queried Mrs. Snoodle.

"No, they took that away with 'em—I mean they ran away so quickly that I don't think it had time to drop."

"I'm glad of that. I hope you haven't got any internal injuries, John?" asked Mrs. Snoodle anxiously.

"Well, dear," he laughed, "I have a strange empty feeling about the stomach, but I dare say a little whisky and water will put that all right."

"John," exclaimed his wife, gazing at him admiringly, "I never felt so proud of you as I do at this moment. Fancy you tackling two great burglars and putting them to flight without getting a scratch yourself! I always thought you were rather a coward. Forgive me, darling, for having thought so, for now I know you are the bravest of the brave!"

"I don't know about that, Martha, but I think I have my share of courage," said Mr. Snoodle modestly.

"You're a perfect hero!" exclaimed Mrs. Snoodle enthusiastically. "Would you not like a pipe, dearest? You haven't had a smoke since supper time, and I'm sure you deserve one after your terrible exertions. As you know, John, I never object to your smoking anywhere, except in bed. That I will not allow."

"Quite right, Martha. There's no telling what such a practice might lead to," remarked Mr. Snoodle thoughtfully, lighting his pipe.

"Fancy, John," said Mrs. Snoodle, "fancy me smelling those burglars smoking! What impudence they've got! However, if I hadn't smelled the smoke, we shouldn't have discovered the burglars. So we may say our property was saved by a pipe, may we not?"

"We may indeed, Martha," replied Mr. Snoodle, and he meant it.—London Tit-Bits.

Gold Digging.

Perhaps it was not an old "forty-niner" who gave the following description, but it was a man who knew the work in question. Like most enthusiasts, however, he underrates the trial and disappointment involved:

It's the prettiest work I ever did. It's the fascination of it, when you've struck it pretty rich and see your gold right in front of you, when you're piling it up every half hour of the day, with a nugget now and again as big as a bullet to cheer you.

And then when the evening comes and you count it up and find it a hundred odd dollars just picked out o' the earth that day—well, there's nothing like it!

Then when you don't strike it you always think you're going to next day, and it's just as exciting hearing other men tell in the evening what they've pulled out as it is counting over your own. Why, I've been three or four months at a time without making a dollar and without a cent in my pocket; but, gee whittaker, the excitement of it don't give a man time to think how hard up he is!—Youth's Companion.

A Creed of Love.

Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with sweetness. Speak approving, cheering words while their ears can hear them and while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them. The kind things you mean to say when they are gone say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster boxes laid away full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Post mortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way.—George W. Childs.

The Designing Woman.

It is true that we read a good deal about "the designing woman" in novels written by ladies. It gives them pleasure to describe these dexterous and wily creatures doing such mischief among the other sex. Mothers, too, believe that their pure and innocent sons are always in danger from these unprincipled young persons. And yet the fact is that at 27 none of them can hold a candle for evil intention to any ordinary youth of 17. The hypocrisy with which for their own ends men affect to fall in with the female view of flirtation and "the designing woman" is contemptible. Even the most impudent of them seldom venture to adopt it among themselves. The tongue in their cheek is too obvious.—James Payn in London Illustrated News.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 46 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages, has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 19 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you. It will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE.

A Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Southern Michigan Association Held at Tipton Last Week.

Monday, April 16th, the Southern Michigan Association met with the Tipton Congregational church at 7:30 p. m.

The sermon was preached by the Moderator, Rev. F. M. Coddington, of Litchfield, from Isaiah 6: 5, 6, 7:

Theme: The prophet's vision of himself and his people, a type of the modern prophet and his people.

Text: Isaiah 6; 5, 6 and 7.

"Then said I, woe is me, For I am undone; because I am a man of unclean lips and I dwelt in the midst of a people of unclean lips: for mine eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts. Then flew one of the seraphims unto me, having a live coal in his hand which he had taken with the tongs from off the altar, and he laid it upon my mouth, and said: Lo, this hath touched thy lips and thine iniquity is taken away and thy sin is purged.

Isaiah was a prophet because 1st, his desire was unto God. 2nd. He saw existing facts. 3rd. He saw what was to be. What he saw was, that he was unclean; that his people were unclean; that someone must bear a message to the unsaved. Isaiah 6:8. He saw and felt this because he had seen the King, the Lord of Hosts. God asked of Adam: "Who told thee thou art naked?" The face of God, the great search-light. The pure are not annoyed when looked through. When do mother's searching eyes annoy us? Isaiah's vision brought despair—a leper, dwelling among lepers—hopelessly unclean.

When we find one whose desire is unto God, who has a just conception of the now and here and whose gaze can penetrate the future, we have found a prophet, great in proportion as these qualifications exist and predominate.

The Spirit turns man's desire unto God. Who has not felt this wooing? Then God speaks; we see God, or see of him. We see what we are and what the future may and ought to be. In such a presence our first cry is "unclean;" humanly speaking, hopelessly so—our human environment cannot cleanse us. Notice the prophet's help was superhuman. Verse 6.

So with the modern prophet. Successful activities must be preceeded by a time of refreshing from on high.

No matter how well the garden is fitted, it is useless until the seed is deposited. Something within the seed which the gardner did not put there. And the garden and the seed are without use until the sunlight and shower fall upon them as they are together. Do we hear the voice asking: "Whom shall I send and who will go for us?" Do our hearts break because we are unclean? Not hopelessly so! Wait one moment for seraphim.

This was followed by the communion service which was led by Rev. J. H. Butler, of Somerset, and Rev. Thos. Warner, of Clinton. The Association was then warmly welcomed by the pastor of the church, Rev. W. Tyrer Williams, to the best of good things in the church, and in the homes of the community. The session then closed with the benediction from Rev. W. G. Roberts, of Hudson.

TUESDAY MORNING.

The morning session opened with a devotional service led by Dea. Childs, of Hudson, after which the Association was then organized with Rev. Robert Gordon, of North Adams, as Moderator, and Rev. James E. Butler, of Churches Corners, Scribe and Treasurer. The roll being called the churches were found to be represented by the following delegates:

Addison, Legrant Smith.

West Adrian, Jackson Hood and wife.
Wheatland, Rev. James E. Butler, Elias Robbins, Grant Wirt.

Ministers at Large, Rev. W. G. Roberts, Hudson.

Received into the Association, Rev. H. A. Putnam, Hudson; Rev. S. F. Blomfeld, Morenci; Rev. Thos. Warner, Clinton.

The following persons sat as corresponding members, A. Overton, Morenci, Rev. J. H. Butler, Somerset, Rev. Wm. Ewing, Lansing; Rev. John H. Chaplin, Olympia Wash; Rev. W. E. C. Wright and Rev. Theo. Y. Gardiner, of Cleveland; Rev. J. L. Maile, Addison; Rev. C. W. Baldwin, M. E. Church, Addison; Rev. E. P. Pierce, M. E. Church, Tipton; and Rev. W. S. McDivitt, of the Free Methodist Church.

Rev. Theo. Y. Gardiner, of Cleveland, then presented the work of the American College and Educational Society, which was followed by an address on the Sunday School work by Rev. Wm. Ewing, of Lansing, State Supt. of Sunday Schools. Oral reports followed from the Churches, indicating a religious state of prosperity, and despite the hard times, a larger amount than usual has been given to benevolences. This closed the forenoon session.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 1:30 p. m. Rev. W. E. C. Wright told of the American Missionary Association, and its work especially among the colored population of the south, followed by a very business-like paper by Mr. W. S. Kimball, of Clinton, on Business Methods in our Churches. The Y. P. S. C. E. then reported through their delegates, Endeavor Societies being connected with all the churches. The afternoon closed with a paper from Rev. N. D. Lanphear, of Kinderhook, on Requirements for Church Membership.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was given to the Woman's Missionary Societies. Miss Tyrell, of Litchfield, acted as president. The choir opened with an anthem, which was finely rendered. The singing of the evening was one of the features of the session. The organ being assisted by an orchestra of five pieces. A recitation from Miss Hollis Lanphear, Kinderhook, entitled Two Cents a week and a Prayer. Mrs. Edwards, of Adrian, read a paper on Home Influence for Missions and Mrs. Lanphear, of Kinderhook, on Faithful Stewardship. Rev. J. L. Maile spoke of the work in Utah, and impressed every one with his earnestness and a desire to help. Several contributions were given him for the work.

Miss Mary P. Wright, Missionary from Marsovan, Turkey, gave an eloquent address on the state of affairs in Turkey, especially in relation to the women. A collection was taken of $13.25 for the work.

The following resolutions were then adopted:

Resolved: That we tender our sincere thanks to Bro. Williams and his church, and all who have in any way aided in the entertainment of this Association. Also that our thanks are especially due to the choir and orchestra for the singing and music rendered.

Signed T. H. Warner,
Ira Bell,
W. G. Roberts,
Committee.

This closed the session for the evening.

WEDNESDAY FORENOON.

Wednesday, 8:30 a. m. Devotional service led by Rev. James E. Butler, Wheatland, and a business session followed by an address from Rev. W. H. Warren, the State Supt. of Home Missionss, on Our work in Michigan. This address was a fitting close to an exceptionally interesting conference. It was filled with hope and good cheer for the future work of the state.

Nearly 100 were in attendance from away and were well paid for coming, and all adjourned to meet at Morenci the third week in October.

OUR WORLD'S FAIR ALBUM.

Number Thirteen of our World's Fair Portfolio will be ready for distribution to-morrow and it contains a fine table of contents. A few persons taking the series have not called for the last few numbers. They are requested to do so soon as the accumulation of back numbers cause us trouble and annoyance. We have a few sets of the first ten numbers on hand. These will be sold WITHOUT COUPONS for one dollar. People who would like the same and have neglected to save their coupons should avail themselves of this opportunity. See the contents of No. 13:

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

May party, May 2d.

Read the Exchange column.

The farmers have got enough rain for present.

Wm. C. Rogers, of Clinton, was in town Monday.

The April term of the circuit court begins last Monday.

Remember the May party on Wednesday evening, May 2d.

Carr & Temple have just added to their stock a fine lot of new shelf bottles.

Twenty-five people in the first-part of the Minstrels at the Opera House, May 9th.

Percy Fitzsimmons took a business trip to Cleveland last week, returning on Monday.

D. Shull has built a fine new sidewalk on the Chicago street front of his residence lot.

Magnificent first-part setting at the Light Guard Minstrels at the Opera House, May 9th.

C. T. Hall attended the annual meeting of the Royal Arcanum, held last week at Kalamazoo.

The Baptist ladies took $170 at the Temple of Fame entertainment and netted $114 over expenses.

The National Educational Association will meet at Asbury Park, N. J., July 6th, to 13th, 1894.

Hear the latest comic song of the day, "I'll We Ever Be Able To Fly," sung by the minstrels, May 9th.

Mr. C. S. Lester, of Eaton Rapids, is visiting his parents and other friends in Raisin last week.

The Tecumseh Chapter, No. 51, O. E. S. will hold a special meeting on Thursday evening, May 3d. for the instillation of candidates.

Have you invited your girl to the May Party? In this case promptness will prove to be the better part of valor. Or delay.

The prospects are that Messrs. Darrow & Marsden will move into the store soon to be vacated by Ed. Kirchgessner. At event the telephone office will remain where it is.

There are rumors and rumors, but the most interesting rumor of all is that the Lake Shore officials are seriously considering the project of erecting a new depot in this town.

The contents of the April issue of Electric Power maintain their standard of excellence, and both electricians and the lay public will find much between the covers to interest them.

Water rates for the season of 1894 are now payable. All rates must be paid on or before May 1st., or water will be shut off. W. J. INGERSOLL, Clerk of Water Board.

The kitchen annex to the Armory, which was a part of the original plan, has been finished and will be found a great convenience for parties and receptions which may be held there.

The new male choir at St. Peter's church consists of nine members, as follows: C. F. Field, W. D. Ross, Levi Green, Geo. Schreder, Mont Rowland, Will Spalding, Will McGlashen, Leon Steele and Ralph Bidwell.

A pamphlet on Fruit Culture offered HERALD patrons by the authorities of the Agricultural College, is a very valuable and practical book. No space is thrown away on a nice cover but the pages are full of meat from cover to last.

Mr. Dibble, a teacher at present in Gratiot county schools, was called here Thursday, the event being the death of his young wife Hattie. The funeral services were held at the residence of her father, Mr. Thos. Boyd, Sunday at 3 o'clock p. m. A suitable obituary will appear later.

Farmers who did not apply lime on their land in the fall should do so early in the spring as possible. The advantages of lime are almost innumerable, as the beneficial results are dependent upon any circumstances. It is the cheapest of all plant foods compared with the benefits it imparts to soils and crops.

Harry Jones has put in a fine assortment of fruits and confectionery, and he intends to keep a supply of soft drinks during the hot season. Mr. Jones has conducted such a business before and knows how to cater to the public taste. He will doubtless receive his share of patronage in that line, and he can attend to it without interfering in the least with his express business.

Read the Exchange column.

Go to the May party, May 2d.

John Hicks will start out next Monday on his spring campaign.

Mrs. A. W. Slayton is visiting Mrs. Judge Powell in Jackson this week.

Henry Hall, of Bellvue, Mich., a cousin of A. D. Hall, was visiting the latter last week.

Mrs. F. J. Dean, of Reed City, who has been stopping at her father's, A. D. Hall's, for a year, has returned home.

The minstrel show, to be given by Co. C. has been fixed for Wednesday evening, May 9th. Look out for a rattling entertainment.

Several members of I. O. O. F. Lodge of Tecumseh have gone to Dundee today to take in the Odd Fellows celebration in that village.

We are indebted to Fred McNair for valuable assistance in preparing our report of the Christian Endeavor meeting at Clinton on Tuesday.

H. H. Chapin is getting up some new hotel registers for the two Clinton hotels, the Exelby House at Britton, and Putnam's hotel at Sand Lake.

Mrs. Henry Taylor has returned from the North to this place to visit her sick sister, Mrs Pennock. She expects to remain in Tecumseh some time.

Among the former Tecumseh residents who are attending the W. C. T. U. convention are Mrs. M. P. Brown of Adrian, and Mrs. C. H. Gainsley of Dundee.

Tecumseh is invaded by an army of strong minded women this week in attendance upon the W. C. T. U. Convention, and they are a very intelligent, earnest and good looking lot of women too.

The ladies of the Eastern Star have started a subscription paper, the object of which is to raise funds to buy furnishings for the new Masonic Temple. They will undoubtedly succeed in their efforts.

The Tecumseh Christian Endeavor's took the Clinton convention by storm Tuesday last. Our delegation numbered about fifty persons, counting those who were present both afternoon and evening.

Co. C. had an inspection last Friday evening. The inspecting officer, Gen. Haines, was much pleased with the efficiency in drill which the boys displayed and with the condition of the company property.

The Tecumseh botany class explored the woods on a cold day last week, and now exhibit several full-blown specimens of hard colds. The music for the commencement exercises will be interspersed mayhap, with a symphony of sneezes.—Adrian Press.

Frank Baxter holds the position of General Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Georgia, and has been in business at Athens for sometime past. The South is also suffering from business depression at present and it is doubtful whether Frank will return there.

James E. Merritt, a former resident of Tecumseh, was in town a few days last week, the guest of Geo. Merritt. He once kept the National Hotel, a big frame block that stood just east of the present HERALD building. He left Tecumseh in 1869 and now lives at Jettersville, Va.

The eighteenth annual convention of the W. C. T. U. for the second district is in session this week at the M. E. church. The meetings began yesterday forenoon and will close this evening. The sessions have been well attended and the exercises of more than ordinary interest. A report of the proceedings will appear in next week's HERALD.

The corner where the new Masonic Temple will stand originally had three frame buildings upon it, two of which fronted on Chicago street and one on railroad. These were burned Aug. 7, 1856. The building lately removed was put up with a rush; being occupied by Alfred James on the 9th of Sept. 1856, exactly thirty-two days after the fire.

Those who had not gumption enough to go to the Opera House last Friday evening, missed a very Cute show. Those who had 'L-gree with us that it was a very creditable performance. As is sometimes the case, the company were not all Marks, and consequently did not Harrass the entire audience. We might rehearse the merits of this show at greater length if personal safety did not compel us to "hold on——." The company were greeted with a fair house.

Blissfield had a big scorch last Monday night, and the business portion of the east side was threatened with destruction. The fire caught in the Phillips Hardware Co's store, located in the middle of a brick row and three large stores were burned out before it was subdued. The steamer was soon on the ground but before it had been used five minutes a piston snapped and then the fire had its own way. An engine was sent from Adrian, which checked the conflagration soon after its arrival.

The funeral of Mrs. B. L. Baxter, which was held at the residence Monday afternoon, was attended by a large concourse of her old neighbors and acquaintances. Among those present from abroad were H. M. Cheever of Detroit; H. G. Selfridge and Mrs. L. F. Selfridge of Chicago; Mrs. E. S. Newberry of Jackson; Mrs. W. S. Carey of Adrian. Her only children, Mr. Frank Baxter of Athens, Ga., and Mrs. Jas. Winans of Toledo, both arrived here before their mother's demise and were present at the funeral obsequies.

May party on May 2d.

Read the Exchange column.

Mrs. Geo. Fisher, of Clinton, was in town Saturday.

E. C. Kennedy went to Adrian Monday on busines.

Mrs. R. R. Hall went to Clinton Tuesday on business.

This is the season to clean door yards and plant gardens.

Chas. Ward is in town this week shaking hands with old friends.

S. S. Chatfield is the new postmaster at Canandaigua in this county.

Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Smith were calling on friends in Clinton one day last week.

Joe Eaton has gone to Berrien Springs where he has secured a clerkship in a grocery store.

Misses Stella and Nina Anthony were the guests of Milo Dole's family at Adrian, over Sunday.

During the month of May the W. C. T. U. meetings will be held on Friday afternoons with Mrs. O. Q. Jones.

Rev. J. M. Getchell, formerly the pastor of the Universalist church here, has received a call from Waterloo, Ind.

Wesley & Sons have a new card this week calling attention to their cut price sale on hats and clothing. Don't miss it.

Abner Wilson has got more hot beds than ever this spring. He is raising plants by the million and for the million now.

Lenardson Bros. of Britton, have a new annoucement this week on the subject of wall paper. They are bound to keep in the swim.

Sample copies of the twice-a-week Free Press and Michigan Farmer can be had bycalling at this office. Both of these papers ought to be in every farmer's family.

James Kingan, who left the Addison mill, intending to return to Tecumseh, has finally concluded to remain there this summer and engage in the butter and egg business.

Mr. Wm. H. Swick, of London, Monroe county., who is attending the W. C. T. U. Convention this week, gave the HERALD a call yesterday. He lived in Tecumseh prior to 1880.

Mrs. J. F. Hicks has made a liberal offer to donate to the Masonic Temple committee a mantel and grate, valued at $50.00, for the parlor. The offer will of course be accepted with thanks.

Rev. C. M. Brown headed a large delegation to the Christian Endeavor meeting at Clinton last Tuesday. Mr. Brown gave an address at the evening session, which made a most excellent impression.

L. D. Randell, the grand secretary of the Royal Templars of Temperance, whose headquarters are at Grand Rapids was in town last week, gathering recruits for the Tecumseh council. He went from here to Battle Creek Tuesday morning.

C. L. Albaugh has purchased a jewelry stock in Hillsdale and will go into business there with his son Ernest. Mr. Albaugh has been a fixture here for some years and we regret to have him leave, but sincerely wish him success in his new venture.

We have received a copy of Len Hock's address on the Single Tax delivered before the farmers' institute at Morenci in January last. It is an able and lucid exposition of that subject and ought to be read by every farmer. The address shows that Mr. Hoch is thoroughly posted on the taxation question.

We clip the following from the Homer Vidette: Mr. E. R. Albaugh, formerly of Tecumseh, has severed his connection with C. R. Church. He will soon engage in the jewelry business for himself, and is at present looking up a good location. Mr. Albaugh by his gentlemanly ways has made warm friends here who will wish him success.

Miss Mary Anderson's pupils gave a piano recital at her residence last Friday evening. A fine program of instrumental music was presented; a better one, no doubt, than people frequently pay twenty-five cents for the privilege of hearing. She better hold the next recital in the opera house and charge an admisson fee.

Married at the Parsonage of the Reformed Church at South Macon, Mich., on April 4th, 1894, Mr. Otis L. Sisson and Miss Mary Tilton, by Rev. J. I. Gulick, all of Lenawee county, Mich. Mr. Sisson had prepared his house for the reception of his bride, and together they at once face the stern realities of life in the honorable employment of the agriculturist. We unite with their many friends in wishing for them a prosperous and happy life in the home of their choice, where his parents have long resided surrounded by numerous friends.

The M. E. Church at Springville, on Sunday evening last, was filled, gallery and all. The Epworth League devotional meeting was led by Mr. Charles Reed—Subject, the 4th Psalm; a paper by Mrs. Carrie Rogers, followed by a number of earnest prayers, mostly by converts, and then a testimony meeting. After which the pastor, Rev. E. P. Peirce, called the class of probation forward, 48 in number, baptizing 22; 14 had previously been baptized and 12 will be immersed hereafter. An enthusiastic Epworth League is being organized with Marion A. Ladd as president.

Attend the May party.

There will be a teachers' rally at Addison next Saturday. April 28th.

Mrs. H. C. Lowe, of Colorado Springs, is making an extended visit at her father's, Wm. H. Osborn's.

Miss Mary Burridge was at home from Ann Arbor last week for the spring vacation. She returned Monday.

H. E. Stout is going to build a new residence this summer and he is now getting the material on the ground for that purpose.

The firm of Stacy, Bement & Sedgewick, Live Stock Dealers, of East Buffalo, are continually increasing their business. Last week they purchased a 200 acre farm in Lapeer county for the use of the firm.

On Saturday last, Samuel McClure, a son of Wilson McClure, while making a box for his harp at Temple, McClure & Co's plaining mill, accidently run his fingers against a buzz-saw, cutting off three of them, and severely lacerating the little finger. The index, middle and third finger were amputated at the second joint by Dr. Jenkins, assisted Dr. North. The hand is doing well.

In our report of the Temple of Fame entertainment last week, a typographical error made bad work with Mrs. Smith's name. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. H. A. Smith, wife of the pastor, and Mrs. A. P. Coddington with Mrs. Spencer Lester of Detroit to assist them. Many others who were requested to lend a helping hand did so freely, but it would be impossible to name them all.

Three bids were received for furnishing the work and materials on the Masonic Temple, as follows: Kemp & Pocklington, $8134.37; Henry Mensing, $8285.20; Beck & Vogt, $8660.24; Mitchell & Lowry made a bid on mason work by the piece. The contract was awarded to Kemp & Pocklington, as they were the lowest bidders. The basement and foundation walls are not included in their contract. Adding these, it will make the total cost of the building about $8700.00.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

BLOOD WAS SHED.

Polish Strikers and a Sheriff's Posse Fight at Detroit.

A Short But Desperate Battle in Which the Deputies Were Driven from the Field—Three Men Killed and a Score or More Wounded.

STORY OF THE RIOT.

DETROIT, April 19.—A riot at noon Wednesday, precipitated by striking Poles who had been in the employ of the Detroit water board, led to an attack on the sheriff and six deputies. Two men were killed and eighteen injured. John Pilat was shot in the head at the first volley and instantly killed; Andrea Karnotski was shot three times and died soon after. Andrew Hernak has also died of his wounds.

Sheriff Charles P. Collins was terribly pounded about the head and a blood vessel in his right leg was severed. About twenty others were injured. For a time Sheriff Collins' life and that of four others was despaired of, but it is now thought all will recover.

The trouble was caused by the Detroit water board's refusal to pay the wages demanded by 500 Polish laborers who were working on the water-pipe extensions at Conner's creek, 1 mile beyond the city limits. Sheriff Collins and six deputies were on hand at noon to protect the water board employes while they removed their tools from an excavation.

Foreman Cathey jumped down into the pit to take up a pump, when there was a cry in Polish from the leader of the strikers and a forward rush of hundreds who held their spades and pick-axes aloft. Then somebody struck Cathey a blow on the head which felled him to the bottom of the excavation. Sheriff Collins drew his revolver and aimed it point blank at the crowd.

One, two, three, the shots rang out from his weapon as rapidly as he could pull the trigger. But a long-handled shovel upraised behind him descended swiftly and a corner of it pierced his skull. As he fell another shovel struck him on the calf of his right leg and a stream of blood spurted out. A dozen rioters gathered round the sheriff's prostrate form and were aiming fresh blows at him when a man rushed in under the uplifted shovels and cried out: "He is dead! Leave him alone!" Foreman Cathey did not escape with that first blow. Again and again did sharp shovels fall on his head and his uplifted hands until consciousness left him.

When the sheriff fired his deputies quickly followed suit, and for a few moments there was a shower of bullets, all fired at short range into the dense crowd. There was no time to discriminate. Anybody who happened to be in the way of a bullet was struck, whether he was taking any part in the riot or not.

This did not deter the infuriated laborers. Though several of their number fell they pressed on until the muzzles of the officers' revolvers were at their very breasts. The deputies then fled and after being pursued for short distances and receiving painful wounds they were allowed to escape.

By the time a squad of 100 police and a big posse under Deputy Sheriff Archer arrived on the ground not a striker who was able to walk was in sight. Ambulances soon arrived and the wounded were brought to town. The police arrested a great many strikers.

In Prison Out West.

BENTON HARBOR, April 21.—In response to circulars sent to officers throughout the country, word has been received here by wire that Lewis Robb, a fugitive from justice, was in prison at San Quentin, Cal., where he is serving a two years' term for robbing a stage coach. Robb's bondsmen in this city were recently compelled to pay $3,500 forfeited bail. He is wanted here for complicity in the attempt to assassinate Mayor Hobbs on the night of December 23, 1891.

Dragged Between the Rollers.

MUSKEGON, April 20.—A fatal accident occurred Thursday morning in Torrent & Co.'s sawmill. This was the first day's run of the season and shortly before noon Eugene Bush attempted to remove a slab from the roller bed. His clothing was caught by the spike rollers and he was dragged in between them. He was shockingly mangled. His left arm was twisted from its socket, his legs broken in several places and his head a mass of wounds. He will die.

Held on a Serious Charge.

ROGERS CITY, April 21.—The wife of Francis Crawford, one of the best-known business men in Presque Isle county, who died recently under suspicious circumstances, has been held to the grand jury, the coroner's jury having brought in a verdict charging her with having caused his death by poisoning.

Tuite's Examination Begun.

DETROIT, April 21.—The examination of ex-City Treasurer Tuite, who was recently brought back from New York, charged with the embezzlement of city funds, is in progress. The testimony tends to show his admissions as to shortage, but that the settlement has been put off on various pretexts.

The Royal Arcanum.

KALAMAZOO, April 19.—The grand council of the Royal Arcanum will hold its next session in Flint. Reports show that the grand treasurer has a cash balance of $3,054.95 in his hands. The membership in Michigan numbers 6,005.

Alger Sells Out.

SAGINAW, April 20.—Gen. R. A. Alger and Col. A. T. Bliss sold to L. C. Slade, of this city, 1,500,000 feet of lumber on the docks at the Zilwaukee mill. This deal closes Gen. Alger's lumber interests in the Saginaw valley.

Both Legs Cut Off.

NESTORIA, April 21.—Robert Dery, a South Shore freight conductor, was run over by a train here. Both legs below the knee and his left arm were cut off. Hopes are entertained of his recovery.

FULL OF INTEREST.

Bits of Information Gathered from Many Points in the State.

The assessed valuation of Detroit will be between $203,000,000 and $208,000,000. The rate of taxation for the ensuing year will be from $16.03 to $16.07 per $1,000.

Ex-United States Senator Dorsey is trying to buy the Detroit street railway system. He is acting in the interest of a syndicate of Rocky mountain capitalists.

While trying to rescue an old family horse from his burning stable at Grand Rapids H. McClure was overcome by smoke and perished in the flames. He was 67 years of age.

In a row in Detroit John Lane was shot in the breast and abdomen by Alexander Martz, who in turn was stabbed several times. John Nicholson received a stray bullet in the leg.

A jury at Grand Rapids acquitted Ardelle Carmel, a domestic accused of setting fire to the residence of her employer to cover a robbery. It was the second trial, the first having resulted in a disagreement.

The Michigan Methodist Women's Missionary conference met at Kalamazoo. Reports showed the work of the past year to be prosperous in a high degree. Mrs. M. D. Moors, of Greenville, was elected president.

Ephraim Hollenbeck, of Florence, aged 80 years, recently extracted a needle from one of his limbs below the knee. The eye was gone and the needle was dark colored. It must have been swallowed in infancy.

Charles Wright, the wealthy lumberman of Benzonia, Benzonia county, who is undergoing life sentence in the Jackson prison, for the killing of two deputy sheriffs, who came to his mill to levy on some lumber to satisfy an execution, is seeking a pardon.

Michigan Division Refused to Vote.

DETROIT, April 19.—The special election of officers of the Michigan division, League of American Wheelmen, resulted: Chief consul, E. G. Steel, St. Johns; vice consul, F. S. Pines, Detroit; secretary-treasurer, F. H. Escott, Grand Rapids. Few of the Detroit members voted, and only one-third of the full vote was cast. The election was conducted by national officers.

Skeletons Found in a Garbage Pile.

MENOMINEE, April 22.—Two human skeletons were found Saturday in a garbage pile, about 3 miles north of the city, by a farmer named Beatty. One skull is that of a woman. It has a cut in the top as if made by an ax. A few feet from this was a smaller skeleton, also with a cut in the skull. The coroner and police are investigating.

To Build a Big Lumber Vessel.

BAY CITY, April 20.—Wheeler & Co. have closed a contract with a local syndicate to build a steamer 182 feet long and with a carrying capacity of 750,000 feet of lumber. The engines of the new boat will be compound, and she is to be completed September 1. This is the first contract made by a lake yard in four months.

No Shipments of Lumber.

SAGINAW, April 20.—Not a lumber charter has been made here as yet. Shippers are manifesting but little anxiety to move lumber forward by lake. There is, indeed, but a small quantity of lumber at this end of the river to be moved by water, nearly all of the mill firms handling their stock by rail.

Buys 12,000,000 Feet of Canadian Logs.

BAY CITY, April 23.—S. O. Fisher has purchased 12,000,000 feet of logs from Canadian people, which will be rafted here from Spanish rivers. This makes 17,000,000 feet already purchased, and negotiations are being made for more.

Demand That Bonds Be Issued.

IRONWOOD, April 23.—Workingmen and merchants of this place will march to Bessemer to demand submission to vote by the county board of a proposition to issue bonds for building roads to furnish work to the unemployed.

A Noted Woman Dead.

BATTLE CREEK, April 20.—Frances W. Titus died here Thursday aged 75. She was the woman who brought the world-famous Sojourner Truth to public notice and wrote the life of the celebrated colored woman.

STILL FREE.

Beveridge and Redpath, Alleged Murderers, Not Yet Arrested.

MARQUETTE, April 22.—"Dunk" Beveridge and James Redpath have not been arrested here, as reported in a telegram from Menominee. The wife or mistress of Redpath has made affidavit that Redpath and Beveridge did the shooting for which James McDonald was convicted and sentenced for life. That affidavit has been submitted to the state board of pardons as the basis of an application for McDonald's release.

[Beveridge, Redpath, McDonald and the two women lived in one house near Matchwood, Ontonagon county, in the winter of 1889-90. Shots were fired from the outer room, where McDonald slept. The Beveridge woman was fatally wounded, and died before morning. The Redpath woman was so badly wounded that she was unable to testify at the trial, which took place here in the spring of 1891. Beveridge was also dangerously wounded, but Redpath was uninjured. The Redpath woman's story is generally regarded here as absurd, because she charges Beveridge, who was himself badly hurt, with participating in the crime. The general belief here is that Beveridge, Redpath and the two women were plotting to get McDonald's homestead, and to that end kept him dosed with liquor and assisted him in vicious practices of all kinds, and that their dupe and victim turned upon them and, in his desire for revenge, got hold of Redpath's rifle that winter night and fired the fatal shots.]

LABOR STATISTICS.

Extracts from the Interesting Report of the Commissioner.

LANSING, April 20.—The annual report of the commissioner of labor will be issued in a few days. The inspectors visited 2,115 factories and ordered 1,426 changes. In 2,066 factories inspected it was found that 1,1.7 were running full time, while 377 were idle. At the time of inspection there were employed 60,773 males and 10,630 females, and if running to full capacity 48,752 more would be employed. At the same time those employed lose 26 per cent. of their time by working only part time, and to this can be added a reduction of 9.5 per cent. in wages since April 1, 1893.

It is hard to comprehend what this immense loss of time means to the factory laborers of this state. It means, besides a reduction in wages, a total loss of 1,763,060 days in five months (from September 1, 1893, to February 1, 1894), which is equivalent to 67,811 months, in about two-thirds of the factories of the state.

MAY HAVE TO PAY.

State Auditors Said to Be Responsible for a Clerk's Shortage.

LANSING, April 20.—The case of the state vs. ex-Secretary of State Osmun, ex-State Treasurer Maltz and ex-Land Commissioner Dix, brought to recover the $1,600 of state funds alleged to have been embezzled by Thomas M. Wilson, ex-clerk of the board of state auditors, has been noticed for trial in the circuit court at Mason next month. Attorney General Ellis claims that as there is no such office as clerk of the board of state auditors known to the law, the members of the board who employed Wilson are responsible for his acts. The embezzlement case against Wilson has been discontinued.

Sold His Washington Home.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23.—Ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer, of Michigan, has disposed of the fine residence which he built and occupied in this city during his senatorial term. It fronts on McPherson square in a fashionable quarter of the city and cost the ex-senator about $150,000. The purchaser is W. E. Schneider, of this city, and it is said that he pays for it in cash and other property about $200,000. The cash payment was $52,000, and the property which Mr. Palmer received in addition consists of four residences on Q street, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets, in the north western part of the city.

Returns Doctored.

BATTLE CREEK, April 20.—It now transpires that the returns of Calhoun county on the constitutional amendment increasing the state official salaries were juggled in the office of the late secretary of state. The correct figures were given as 1,066 in favor of a raise of salaries and 2,034 against it. In the figures as returned they had been changed so that they were 1,421 for and 1,447 against it.

Went Ashore.

PORT HURON, April 23.—The Western Transit liner Hudson, Chicago to Buffalo with grain and flour, ran ashore at 4 o'clock Sunday morning about three miles above Fort Gratiot light, on the Canadian shore. A dense fog covered the lake at the time, and the steamer was running about half speed when the disaster occurred.

Michigan Railroad Sold.

KALAMAZOO, April 22.—The Toledo & South Haven railroad, which runs from Lawton to South Haven, was sold Saturday to Howard Mansfield for $100,000. The sale was made by John S. Lawrence, master in chancery in the United States court. The Farmers' Loan & Trust were complainants and the claim was over $300,000.

A Successful Enterprise.

BUCHANAN, April 20.—The skunk farm near here is booming. It is impossible to say how many animals are now in the side hill burrows, but it can't be much less than 5,000. Their hides are worth from $1.25 to $1.90.

To Meet in Detroit.

DETROIT, April 21.—The supreme council of the Royal Arcanum meets here June 6. As this occasion will be of national importance, great efforts will be made by the order of this state to make it a grand occasion.

Two Men Killed.

VASSAR, April 21.—A train on the Michigan Central road jumped the track near here Friday morning early. Two tramps who were stealing a ride were killed and a third badly injured.

Made Musical Director.

BATTLE CREEK, April 23.—Prof. John Martin, of this city, has accepted the position of musical director of Olivet college.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years it was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

The Lenawee District Union of Christian Endeavor held their second semi-annual meeting at the Congregational Church in this village last Tuesday. There were afternoon and evening sessions, and a good program was presented at each session. Delegates were present from the different societies in the county, and there was a liberal attendance also on the part of our citizens. A brief synopsis of the proceedings appears elsewhere.

"Prof." Fink who has so lately "flowered out" into an orator—a veritable forensic oriflamme, declaimed at Clinton on the "Social Evil," amid a haze of tobacco smoke that made the hall seem like a caucus room. Nothing daunted him however, and he closed by singing several entertaining songs. Prof Fink's future looks as bright and shiny as the dome of a college student's pantaloons. —Adrian Press.

H. E. Fink, of Tecumseh, who lately "busted" into full flower as an orator and lecturer, was induced to fire off his "Cure for Social Evils," at Clinton. The thing was done for a joke and the jokers paid for it at 15 cents a head. Fink does not care what is thought of him as a lecturer, so long as his lectures bring him cash. It is easier to handle his jaw than a spade.—Adrian Press.

FOR CHRIST AND THE CHURCH.

The Second Semi-Annual Meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E.—A Large and Enthusiastic Gathering.

The semi-annual convention of the Young People's society of Christian Endeavor was held at Clinton last Tuesday afternoon and evening, April 24th, and was a most successful and enjoyable affair. There were perhaps 200 delegates present from the various societies througout the county, and together with the interested visitors, they filled the Congregational church to overflowing. Tecumseh and Adrian had the largest delegations outside of Clinton, Tecumseh being represented by about fifty members, and Adrian by about twenty-five. All of the delegates were very enthusiastic in the work and program was a success from beginning to end.

The afternoon meeting was opened with a song service which was followed by scripture reading and prayer by Rev. T. H. Warner, of Clinton. Then after some more music, Mr. O. A. Barnes, of Clinton, delivered an address of welcome. He welcomed the delegates because this convention was to be for their mutual good, and he said that in so far as this was the result, the convention would be a success. He spoke of the inter-denominational features of the organization and of the great growth and activity of the society and urged the Christian Endeavorers to be more earnest in carrying out the work for which the society was intended.

Dr. Nixon, of Holloway was not present so Rev. W. K. Spencer, of Adrian, responded to the address of welcome. He said that the reason the Christian Endeavor is so prosperous and enthusiastic is because they so thoroughly believe in the bible teachings and in the work laid down for the society, and are so thoroughly bound together by their pledge. He spoke of the large number of denominations included in the organization and showed how the denominations can work together for the kingdom of God through this society. He spoke in terms of the high praise of Father Endeavor Clark.

After this address, Mrs. Clark, of Clinton, sang a solo, and then came the roll-call of societies. Societies from Adrian, Clinton, Raisin, Rollin, Medina, Macon, Riga, Raisin Center, Ogden and Tecumseh responded and all gave good reports showing that the work is growing very rapidly in all directions throughout the county. Junior societies were reported from Tecumseh, Adrian and Clinton and they are evidently as hard at work as work as their seniors.

Mr. Bates, of Blissfield, spoke on the "Relation of the Y. P. S. C. E. to the Sunday School" He thought that the Y. P. S. C. E. and the Sunday School should be closely related and work hand in hand. He said that if the Endeavor is properly managed it will be of great assistance to the Sunday School. It is the province of the Endeavor to provide supply teachers for the Sunday School when called upon to do so, and thus relieve the superintendent. They should also appoint committees to look after strangers in the Sunday School and look up new members for the school, for this is one of the way to get outsiders interested in the C. E. Society. This paper was discussed by the convention.

Mr. Tabor, of Adrian, then spoke of proportionate giving. He urged every church member to tithe his income and gave figures to show what the result would be if this were done. This paper was discussed and Rev. Spencer told his experience in tithing his income while he was going through college. He said that he tithed his income all the time that he was working his way through college and he believed that he received a blessing for so doing.

The afternoon meeting was closed with a business meeting. Mr. H. W. Strong, of Detroit, president of the state executive committee, urged the forming of a district organization to be composed of Lenawee, Washtenaw Jackson and Hillsdale counties. This, he explained, was principally to keep them in closer touch with the state organization.

The evening meeting was crowned and was very enthusiastic. After music and prayer the Junior Society, of Clinton, came in about fifty strong with banners flying and united in a chorus. After an address of welcome by one of their members, they retired.

Rev. C. M. Brown, of Tecumseh, then conducted an open parliament, the subject being, "What is your Society doing for Missions?" Several societies reported liberal sums sent to home and foreign missions, and several methods were suggested for doing syclematic work in this line, one of them being the two cent a week plan by the members, and another, the envelope system.

After a solo by Mr. Balsley, of Detroit, the address of the evening was delivered by Mr. Strong, of Detroit. He was greeted with cheers, the whole house rising to their feet, and saluting him with the Christian Endeavor salute. He spoke of the church work in general, and said that while some might think that they were being called on too much to attend conventions, mass meetings, etc. The great trouble was that we were doing to little, and that too few are interested and active in the work. He spoke of the pledge of the Christian Endeavor and of the good result it has in binding the workers together and giving them some definite system of work. Our opportunities for work may seem very small in our homes, but we must remember that as one of the most useful metals, aluminum, is made from common clay, so the Christian spirit may be developed in the every day surroundings of our homes. He said that while the churches and Sunday Schools, and almost all the the other religous denominations had fallen behind in their collections, during the last six months the Christain Endeavor had gained nearly fifty per cent.

A sun-rise prayer meeting was held Wednesday morning. There were about fifty present, and a very interesting and profitable meeting was held.

Mr. H. H. Chapin of Adrian, who is compiling the new directory of Tecumseh, Hudson and Adrian, is in town this week prosecuting the canvass. The book will be a complete general directory of each town, giving a list of all the inhabitants, business firms, churches, schools, societies, city officers, etc., and also a classified business directory. This is his fifth Adrian Directory and he has compiled similar works for Ann Arbor and other cities. He expects to complete his canvass in June and the book will then go to press. His experience in this line of work, as well as in that of a practical printer, gives assurance that his latest venture will be a very complete and desirable book. He is meeting with good encouragement thus far.

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Dr. Price's Baking Powder Receives it.

(Chicago Tribune.)

For leavening power, keeping qualities, purity and general excellence the World's Fair jury decided that Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder had no equal. On each of its claims it was awarded a first prize or a diploma. All the baking powders entered for prizes were subjected to a most exhaustive examination, and the jury was the best equipped to make the decision of any ever got together. The verdict was supported by the testimony of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the United States Department of agriculture at Washington. Dr. Wiley is an expert on food products and the highest authority on such matters in America. This verdict settles a long debated question as to which among the many baking powders is the best.

The Addison Courier says: "Rumor says the Lake Shore authorities contemplate the erection of a new depot at Tecumseh." Correct, neighbor. This makes the fourth time we have heard the story since New Years.—Tecumseh Herald.

The Herald's attitude seems to be that of the gentleman who heard one minister preach three times in succession from the text: "and Simon Peter's wife's mother lay sick, of a fever" and who afterward, being asked by the minister what the tolling of a certain bell meant, explained that he thought Simon Peter's wife's mother must be dead, as he had heard three times lately that she was sick.—Adrian Press.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE OF KIDNEYS.

One of the Disguised Forms of Chronic Catarrh.

Mr. J. Brake, Petrolea, Ont., writes: Four years ago I had a severe attack of Bright's disease which brought me so low my doctor said that nothing more could be done for me. When one of your lectures of the above disease was read to me I took Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin, and found it acted just as represented. In three months I was a well man, and have continued well ever since.

SYMPTOMS—Dull pain in the back; scanty, high colored urine, containing albumen and various sediments; nausea, and sometimes vomiting; puffiness of the face and feet; dropsy of the legs; shortness of breath and general weakness; palor and dryness of the skin; chilly feelings, alternating with fever and sleeplessness.

TREATMENT.—A tablespoonful of Pe-ru-na should be taken before each meal, between meals, and at bedtime, and enough Man-a-lin at night to produce one natural action of the bowels each day. When the disease is of long standing heated Pe-ru-na should be applied to the back in addition to the above treatment, and the diet consist principally of milk and dry toast. Avoid liquors and tobacco.

EXCHANGE COLUMN.

This column is designed as a medium of exchange. It will afford an admirable scheme through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents.

HOUSE TO RENT.—One dollar per week, cheap. For sale, 1-inch Oak Lumber $8.00 per M., also some 1 1-2 inch Dry Hickory at $10.00 per M.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Fruit trees have put forth their mantle of blossoms.

Mrs. J. W. Baker is very sick with pneumonia.

Mrs. Wm. Larkins is under the doctor's care at this writing.

The recent rains make wheat and grass look fresh and thrifty.

Postmaster Santus was at the county seat on business last Monday.

Mrs. Lizzie Wakeman, of Jackson, is visiting her sister, Mrs. James Curry.

The hail storm Saturday afternoon did some damage to grapes and strawberries.

Miss S. A. Van Vleet, visited relatives near Dundee, from Friday until Monday.

Dr. Rhodes' father who is stopping with him is very sick, with no hopes of recovery.

Lou Arner who has been spending several weeks in Hudson returned home Tuesday.

Measles have made their appearance in the families of T. H. Temple and Chas. Foote.

S. F. Marsteller and Uncle Ned Broadbent, of Clinton, were in the village Monday.

Mrs. Lavina Jackson, of Macon village, is visiting relatives in this village this week.

Those who went to Tecumseh Thursday night speak in the highest terms of Rev. Anna Shaw's lecture.

Mrs. Geo. Osgood who has been spending several weeks with relatives in New York state returned last week.

Mrs. F. E. Pocklington was elected president of the W. C. T. U. instead of Mrs. M. A. Lowe, as reported in last week's issue.

Miss Florence Thompson was in Adrian last Monday for an invoice of millinery from the firm of Foote, Read & Co., of Cleveland, O.

Lawrence Rappleye is spending his time between housecleaning and selling papers, besides nursing a very large boil on the back of his neck.

May Wilkerson, of Ann Arbor, is visiting her old Normal friend, Mrs. C. E. Staats, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Smith, this week.

Floyd Smith plays a new Bruno guitar, recently purchased of W. L. Thompson & Co's music house, of East Liverpool, O. It is a very fine instrument.

BRITTON BUDGET.

The farmers are commencing to plant corn.

Our village will have a ball team this season.

Quite a number of our citizens visited Adrian last Monday.

The first ball game of the season will be played next Saturday as a practice game.

The fence of L. A. Brown's must be a hummer as he has two gangs of men working at present.

We saw about a column of foolish talk in the Adrian Press composed by their correspondent from our village. He delights to roast somebody. But anybody trying to roast him has nothing to roast. It is like shooting and no mark to shoot at.

The "Hard Times" social given at the Exelby House last Friday evening was a success in every respect. The receipts were about $10. Coxey and his army, consisting of about twenty-five of the village boys, were about as ragged a set as we have seen for some time.

—150 second growth fence posts for sale by L. A. BROWN, Britton, Mich.

—A limited quantity of pure Silver Laced Wyandotte eggs for sale by Rev. E. Mudge, 13 for 25 cents.

ONSTED ODDS.

Oats coming up very nicely.

Wheat and grass are on a boom.

Some farmers will plant their corn this week.

Supervisor Gibbs finished taking the assessment on Tuesday.

Three or four new residences are being erected at present in town.

Wade Waring is now clerking for L. D. Palmer. Ed Freer has gone on the lakes for the season.

The gude housewives are in the mysteries of house cleaning, and meals are eaten on a run.

County school commissioner C. F. Field was in town a part of last week and visited the school.

The L. O. T. M. indulged in an entertainment recently which added quite a sum to their treasuary.

Parties from Prattville are buying and cutting timber in this vicinity at present, and shipping the logs.

Cherry trees are blossoming very full around here this spring, and the outlook for a full crop is very promising.

Quite a large acreage of oats was sown in this locality this spring. Some flock masters have already sheared their sheep.

After a three weeks visit with relatives in this vicinity, Mrs. Syrene Taylor returned last Saturday, to her home at Napoleon.

J. F. Brooks is putting up a small building just south of his hardware store to be occupied by Mr. Fish as a barber shop.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Jas. Gordon of Morenci, spent Sunday with his parents.

Mrs. C. C. Robison, of Adrian, spent a few days with friends here the first of the week.

Mrs. Campbell, who since the decease of her husband, has been staying with her children at St. Johns, arrived home last Thursday. Her son Joe accompanied her here and remained over Sunday.

Robt. McWilliams has moved his saw mill to Seneca. This leaves L. C. Winship monarch of all he surveys in the timber line as there is now no competition in lumber sawing nearer than Adrian.

Albert Lewis is painting and papering the house of Mrs. Jas. Lane in Holloway, preparatory to its occupancy by Will Holt, our worthy station agent, who will move today or tomorrow, the weather permitting. Dr. Begel will then occupy his own residence, and Dr. Nixon—well don't worry about Doc, he has come to stay.

Our creamery is now infested by rats, that being the name by which our new butter maker is known among his circle of acquaintance. He came here last Thursday, and must be a hustling Ratt or he would not have, ere Sunday arrived, broken a bone in his right fore arm. Dexter Still will assist in the creamery until Mr. Ratts is able to be himself.

When Geo. Carleton arose Sunday morning last, and had performed the necessary chores around the house, he took up his milk pails and started for the barn; arriving at the barn, a change took place immediately and Geo. was not as mild as when he first arose, for behold, some miscreant had come forth in the night and sheared the hair from the tails of three of his cows.

Raisin Valley Seminary.

The May-basket season is upon us.

Mr. Frank Hill has a serious pappous development on the upper lip.

Mr. John Hill and sons, have been shearing their sheep this week.

There is no school this week Saturday, on account of quarterly meeting.

Miss Edwards spent Sunday at the home of Edwin Walker, in Adrian.

Miss Alice Woodard attended the W. C. T. U. convention at Tecumseh, last week.

The quarterly meeting of friends will be held at Ypsilanti next Saturday and Sunday.

The next lecture in the course will occur Thursday evening, at 7:30. It will be given by Dr. Leslie, of Adrian.

THE MAY ARENA.

The May Arena closes the ninth volume of this leader among the progressive and reformative reviews of the English-speaking world. The table of contents is very strong and inviting to those interested in live questions and advanced thought. Among the important social and economic problems discussed and ably handled in a brave and fundamental manner, characteristic of this review, are 'The First Steps in the Land Question,' by Louis F. Post, the eminent Single-Tax leader; 'The Philosophy of Mutualism,' by Professor Frank Parsons of the Boston University Law School; 'Emergency Measures for Maintaining Self-Respected Manhood,' by the Editor of the Arena. The Saloon Evil is also discussed in a symposium. One of the strongest papers on Heredity that has appeared in recent years is found in this issue from the pen of Helen H. Gardner. Rev. M. J. Savage appears in a very thoughtful paper on 'The Religion of Lowell's Poems;' a fine portrait of Lowell appears as a frontispiece. Dr. James R. Cocke contributes a striking paper on 'The Power of the Mind in the Cure of Diseases.' A strong feature of this number is a brief character sketch by Steven Crane entitled 'An Ominous Baby.' Stinson Jarvis' series of brilliant papers on 'The Ascent of Life' closes with this issue.

A fine 2-color Map of Cleveland for 2-cent stamp. Address, A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Lake Shore Ry., Cleveland, O.

THE MAY PARTY.

"It was a splendid party" was the remark of every one who attended the hop at the Armory last evening. The May party is commonly regarded as THE SOCIAL EVENT of the season here, and our young people who are inclined to trip the light fantastic, always take a more than ordinary interest in the affair.

The party last evening was not as largely attended as some former ones have been, but it was a very enjoyable one. About thirty couples participated. Adrian, Hudson and Clinton being represented as well as Tecumseh. No special effort was made in the line of decorations. The new walls of the Armory, brightened by the double row of electric lights in the ceiling, produced a brilliant effect. A goodly number of spectators was present, and the music by the Columbian orchestra was all that the most fastidious musical critic could ask for. The refreshments were served in the room below, which is a very commodious one for that purpose, and Mrs. R. C. VanAntwerp acted as caterer. It is needless to say that the menu was served in elegant style, and that all were sumptuously provided for. Taken altogether it was a most enjoyable affair, and the May party of '94 will rank among the best of the series.

The following visitors from out of town were present: John Henry, Robt. Mitchell, of Cleveland; Ed Frensdorf, of Hudson; Whitney L. Watkins, of Manchester; Will Carleton, Herb Aldrich, of Adrian; Miss Kelsey, of Elgin, Ill.; Miss Van DeMark, Miss Marsteller, of Clinton.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

John Vanderpool has bought a place near Wolf Creek, and moved his family there.

Geo. W. Fuller is grading up about his store, and making quite an improvement in the appearance of his place.

Harry Vanderpool is very sick with mumps, we are sorry to hear. He took cold, and is severely ill at this writing.

J. S. Pentecost has a new roof over his head, and a new furnace under his feet. John is bound to keep up with the procession.

Pentecost and Tipton played a game of base ball, last Saturday. Rev. W. T. Williams quite won the hearts of the young men by his interest in the manly sport.

A farmer of this vicinity offers his flock of about fifty valuable sheep, to any one who will furnish shoes for his family of eight persons for a year. Who bids?

Pick up the rusty nails around the place, and thrust them into the soil around your house-plants, and they (the plants, not the nails) will blossom more freely.

Monday afternoon a little daughter of Seward Mapes was burned quite severely about the feet and legs, by hot water spilled upon them. It is hoped her injuries will not prove lasting. Both the little sufferer and her parents have the sympathy of every one.

During the severe storm of last Sat. evening, the barn of H. C. Daniels was struck by lightning. Mr. Daniels was milking in the barn, and was slightly shocked, and a horse fell to the ground, but soon recovered, but as no fire was set Mr. Daniels considers himself quite fortunate to escape as he did.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mrs. Bert Billington is about the same.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. George Martin, a girl.

Kimball's machine was bailing hay at E. C. Wisner's Monday.

T. M. Camburn, our supervisor, was in this vicinity last week.

The Bradley school reopened Monday after a vacation of two weeks.

Nina Allen has more than 20,000 stamps collected for her charitable work.

Green writing paper has been introduced in the Normal for the benefit of the students eyes.

Wm. Camborn was in this vicinity last week in the interest of his duties as road commissioner.

Again did the elements get into a passion and shed such copious tears Saturday night that people refrained from going to the Lyceum; but now, "no preventing Providence" as the preachers say, the Lyceum will occur at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's May 12.

E. J. Whelan wishes to say for the benefit of his friends who have been so solicitious in regard to the oats that he sowed March 16, that the oats are up and doing well. It will be remembered that after several warm days when the oats presumably sprouted, the mercury dropped to nearly zero and remained there so long that many thought them killed; now they are beautifully green as we can see from our window one-half mile away.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia: land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Walter Burridge was at Adrian Tuesday.

Mrs. S. Erskine is visiting friends in Detroit this week.

Mrs. James Elliott is visiting friends in Homer this week.

W. J. Arnold is going to build a new house this season on his Logan Street lot.

Mrs J. D. Shull and Mrs. W. C. Fisher spent last Friday calling on their Clinton friends.

That queen of comedies "Jane" will be given at the opera house on Saturday evening, May 12th.

Harry McClure has organized a class in short hand, which will take lessons three evenings each week.

The masons began work yesterday upon the foundation walls of the new Masonic Temple block.

The Wilson Bros. are putting out an acre of mammoth Spanish onions on their celery farm this spring.

Philip Totten, of Petoskey, is in town and will remain a few days with his brothers, Jacob and William.

Thos. Elliott is putting up another large lot of threehorse whiffletrees. James Potter is doing the wood work at his shop.

According to the command of a city ordinance Adrian bicyclists must ride in the streets from the first of May until the first of November.

Wm. Smith is building three new delivery wagons, which will be used to cart groceries about town for Kennedy & Rogers, James Lowry and Avery & Co.

On Wednesday last Dr. Morden assisted by Dr. Jenkins operated on Mrs. Wells Goheen for strangulated hernia. Mrs. Goheen is in a very critical condition.

James Potter Jr. is putting up a Peerless sectional quarter rack for Shurtz' meat market. It is a new style rack, and is both neat looking and much more convenient than the old style.

Tickets for the Co. C Minstrel performance are on sale at the following places: Lilley House, W. B. Darling's, McCann Bros., Kennedy & Rogers, Macham's shop and Rude's Laundry.

We have received the second annual report of the Y. M. C. A. of Adrian, which indicates that the institution is a very lively youngster. Here's our good wishes for its continued prosperity.

W. W. Shurtz has bought the Dickinson meat market. He will keep a full stock of fresh and salt meats on hand and will use his best efforts to run a gilt-edged market. We bespeak for him success in his new venture.

Jackson's new library is now open and is said to be in point of finish and convenience one of the finest in the state. Miss Waldo, a niece of J. C. Rowley, of Adrian, is the librarian. One feature is the children's reading room.

Orr & Temple's Drug Journal for May is on our table and is filled to the brim with matters of interest to their patrons. It is a neat little three column folio, gotten up to advertise their business and designed for gratuitous circulation.

A grand educational council and rally for Branch, Hillsdale and Lenawee counties will be held at Hillsdale, May 11th and 12th. It will be conducted by State Superintendent Henry R. Pattingill. Commissioner C. F. Field of this county will attend.

The Deering Harvesting Co., will be represented in Tecumseh this season by Geo. W. Kay. He has closed an arrangement for the agency and will open his headquarters soon in the Dewey building, south of Harris & Hitshue's store. Geo. is a hustler and will doubtless sell his share of machines.

The death of U. S. Senator Stockbridge, which occurred last Saturday, was wholly unexpected. He had been quite indisposed for several days but was not considered seriously ill. A special train passed through Detroit Tuesday conveying the remains to Kalamazoo, and the funeral services will be held there this afternoon at four o'clock. The state departments at Lansing will be closed during the funeral and State officers generally will attend.

Tecumseh expects to have a boom this year. Never having had one she is most certainly entitled to one if she can secure it.—Ann Arbor Courier.

We fail to see what she would do with it. Tecumseh is the Garden of Eden of Michigan and always has been, and we should just as soon expect to hear that Adam and Eve had started a real-estate boom in Paradise, as that dignified, refined, dear old Tecumseh had stooped to press herself into a boomlet.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

Perhaps you are skeptical on this point, but we are going to have one just the same.

What is Gen. Coxey doing with the plutocrats down in New York? He should be at the head of his army, marching on to Washington.

Would'nt it be a good scheme for Col. Breckinridge and Miss Pollard to go on a lecturing tour together? They ought to draw big houses.

While "senatorial courtesy" is doing its level best to defeat the income tax, the English government has taken steps to increase the same tax.

The real tug of war over the tariff bill has now begun in the Senate. In the mean time business revival awaits upon "senatorial courtesy."

Senator Hill's speech was opposed to both income tax and syntax. We doubt whether the speech will be any permanent injury to either of them.

The business boom that was to follow the repeal of the Sherman Act must have got lost in the woods somewhere. Can anyone locate its whereabouts?

Washington is organizing to repel Coxey's army. That was to be expected. They both want their hands in the U. S. treasury—like two dogs after one bone.

The Coxeyites have gone to stealing railroad trains out in Montana. If they undertake tactics of this kind, they may prove the truth of the old saw: "The more haste, the less speed."

Senator Mill's speech on the tariff bill last week in the Senate was one of his best and ablest efforts. He poured the hot shot into the enemies' camp, and favored the Wilson bill, income tax and all.

The decision of the South Carolina Supreme Court, that the dispensary law is unconstitutional, will revive the liquor controversy in that State, and the contest will have to be fought over again.

Gen Coxey, the leader of the Commonweal army, has evidently gone into the movement himself for notoriety. At the horse sale held last week in Madison Square garden, New York, he sold seven animals, taking away with him $2.195.

The coal miners strike is the largest one ever inaugurated in this country. It seems to be a very ill-advised movement. It will simply check the business revival now fairly begun, and cause the suspension of work in many manufacturing concerns.

In forming their opinions of Coxeyism, people should bear in mind, that the Republican filibuster against the tarif bill is one of the creators of the movement. If Congress had finished its work promptly as it could have done, there would be no Coxey army in existence to-day.

Senator Hill's chief ambition at present seems to be to figure as the leader of a little knot of Catalines, who are plotting the destruction of the Democratic party. The next time the Democratic voters get a chance at David B. Hill they will show him how impotent he is, when playing that role.

The new Senator from Georgia, Patrick Walsh, is sound on the issues confronting Congress. In reply to an interviewer, he said: "I am for the Wilson Tariff bill. I am for an income tax. I am for the free coinage of silver, and I am for the repeal of the State bank tax. If I hadn't been I wouldn't have been sent here."

The St. Louis Republic sizes up Senator Hill about right in these words: "Now if Senator Hill will join the Civil Service Reform League he will have the mugwump contingent of New York in exchange for the forfeiture of all the claim he has ever had upon the regard or support of the national Democratic party. We advise him to take the final plunge. He has left the Democratic party, and the Republicans do not want him. Mugwumpery is his only recourse."

Despite its superior cunning, plutocracy will now and then show its teeth. The Washington Post, a mouthpiece of the monied interests, tells us that David Trubee, one of the wealthiest citizens of Bridgeport, Conn., remarked at the Riggs House the other day that he believed United States Senators should be elected for a term of 25 years. Weeping willows! Just suppose we had to endure for a quarter of a century such an affliction as the present lot of political fossils in the Senate!

Senator Roger Q. Mills, of Texas, in his last speech on the tariff bill completely took the wind out of David B. Hill's sails in one single sentence. Mr. Mills said that when Bill was governor of New York for six years, he had never called on the legislature to repeal the income tax of that State, and asked if such a tax was a fair one for the State of New York, why was it not also a fair one for the United States.

The National Economist contains the following sensible suggestion about the Gen. Coxey movement: "From the Commonweal army view, they are right in coming to the legislative head of the nation with their petition. That is the body responsible for limiting opportunities to labor in this country, and it is the only body that can again broaden those opportunities. The common people of our country are not sympathizing with the Coxeys because they want the Government to lay out roads and give them an opportunity to build them. Not at all. They sympathize with the Coxeys because they see that this march of the Commonweal army is attracting, as nothing else has yet attracted, the attention of our governing classes to the outcry of the oppressed masses."

The Chicago Times indulges in this plain talk about the Senatorial oligarchy: "There was never a senate more thoroughly out of touch with the people than the one now existing. It is the stronghold of plutocracy. The scandals which its treatment of economic and financial questions has created are notorious. The senators who own coal lands and want a tariff on coal, the senators who speculate in sugar-trust certificates and demand a tariff on sugar, the senators who have profitable relations with New York millionaires and fight an income tax are well known to the country. They are the agents of the people, but they utilize their agency to plunder their principals. It would be a good thing for the people of the United States if the senatorial nest of mercenaries could be annihilated."

A correspondent of the N. Y. World gives his reasons for an income tax as follows: Let us have an income tax—because: First, There is no tax levied upon property to pay national expenses. Second, The expenses of this Government are now almost entirely borne by the poorer classes. Third, They not only pay the immense expense of running this great Government, but they are also taxed for the purpose of building up and enriching trusts, combinations and monopolies. Fourth, Property is one of the principal beneficiaries under the Government for the protection of life, liberty and property, and should bear the proportionate share of the burden. Fifth, If it be right to tax property to pay the state, county and municipal expenses, it is just as proper that it should receive no exemption in the matter of the national expenditure. Sixth. A tax upon sugar is felt by every family in the land, but an income tax will cause no inconvenience to any one.

The secret political organization called the "A. P. A." is simply a revival of Know Nothingism in a new guise. In the North American Review for May Mr. Lathrop characterizes the movement correctly in these words: From whom has the country most to fear—from Catholics who, as lay folk or religious devotees, mind their own business, abide by the laws, and make every every effort to preserve the peace; or from these singular "protectors" who treat one-sixth of the nation as though they were aliens, foment mutual suspicion and bitterness, threaten religious liberty, break the laws, and stir up armed strife? A few public men, unprejudiced and patriotic non-Catholics, have denounced this incendiary movement with vigor. Many fair-minded Protestant ministers, with clear moral sight, have scored it as cowardly, as opposed to the American idea, and un-Christian. By far the greater number has remained silent, and so has the majority of the daily press: thus indicating tacit approval of a religious proscription which, were it attempted against any Protestant denomination, would arouse a din of remonstrance from every leading journal.

In his letter to Hon. Chauncey F. Black, president of the National Association of Democratic clubs, Grover Cleveland gives his party friends some good advice, which should be heeded. He said: "The important services rendered to the advancement of true Democracy suggests that the National Association of Democratic Clubs and every other Democratic agency should labor unceasingly and earnestly to save our party in this time of its power and responsibility from the degradation and disgrace of a failure to redeem the pledges upon which our fellow countrymen intrusted us with the control of their government. All who are charged, on behalf of the Democratic party, with the redemption of these pledges, should now be impressively reminded, that as we won our way to victory under the banner of tariff reform, so our insistence upon that principle is the condition of our retention of the people's trust; and that fealty to party organization demands the subordination of individual advantages and wishes, and the putting aside of petty and ignoble jealousies and bickerings, when party principles and party integrity and party existence are at stake.

THAT GALT MATTER.

For this tale I offer neither explanation nor apology. Judge it by your own standard.

Naomi Fallingford, the daughter of wealthy Tressel Fallingford of Lippenton Manor, received the attentions of Mr. Leslie Galt.

One night there were stolen from Miss Naomi's sleeping apartment, after she had retired and during a night when she was uncommonly wakeful, jewelry, gems and cash to the value of £10,000. To acquire this plunder a huge family safe had been opened. A heavy mahogany chiffonnier was ransacked, and the very mattresses whereon Miss Fallingford lay were plundered. The thief escaped.

Subsequently Miss Naomi had a falling out with Mr. Galt, and she saw no more of him for several years. The robbery took place in 1876.

In 1884 Tressel Fallingford was dead, and Miss Naomi was living alone, attended by servants, in the manor house. On a cold November evening Mr. Leslie Galt was seen to alight from the mail train at Lippenton. It was about sundown. He was seen to take the road to the manor house. He was seen to reach it. He was seen to mount the porch, from which a view could be had into the sitting room, where Miss Naomi reclined before a crackling fire. He was seen to sit there for an hour. At 7 o'clock he was still on the porch. At 7:05 a knock upon the door brought the butler, who reported to Miss Naomi that a gentleman, who would not give his name, desired to see her.

"You have never seen me before, madam?" The visitor was an entire stranger.

"Never, to my knowledge," answered Miss Naomi, looking full in the man's face as he stood beneath the chandelier.

"You were robbed in this house in 1876?"

"I was."

"You offered a reward and no questions asked if the property was returned?"

"I did."

"Here it is, madam," and the man placed the plunder intact upon the table before Miss Naomi.

Passersby saw her standing by the table, with Mr. Leslie Galt opposite her.

"Where did you get these, sir?" exclaimed the delighted woman.

"Remember, madam, you were not to ask any questions. My reward, please."

Miss Naomi touched a bell. The butler entered. She sent for her money. When he brought it, she counted out the reward and passed it to the stranger. "Madam, will you oblige me by expending this money upon the deserving poor in your parish church? I do not need it." He laid the notes on the table. The next day Miss Naomi caused it to be known she had recovered her valuables. Every one congratulated her, and also spoke of the pleasure she must have derived in a call from Mr. Leslie Galt.

Miss Naomi denied having seen Mr. Galt in eight years. Then people's bewildered brains began to couple the name of Leslie Galt with the original robbery of the Fallingford valuables. This was very hard for Naomi to hear, but she could not account for Mr. Galt's not calling if he had been in town. People told her they saw him on her porch at 7 o'clock. The strange man restored the valuables 10 minutes later. Ten minutes after 7 Mr. Galt had disappeared from the porch. At 8 he was again seen at the station. But the strange restorer of the valuables had been seen by no one in Lippenton, save by Miss Naomi and her butler. Both declared they never saw him before.

In 1889, one very dark night in November, Mr. Leslie Galt called upon Miss Naomi Fallingford and was cordially received.

Mr. Galt stated that he had been for the last few years in Australia.

This brought up the rumor of his visit to Lippenton, current five years before, and they both laughed over it.

Mr. Galt renewed his suit, was accepted, and he and Naomi were married in the parish church at Lippenton.

Among the donations Mr. Galt made on his wedding day was a large sum of money for the poor of the parish. The rector, in accepting it, remarked that the bequest was very opportune, as they were just at the end of the last donation received of a similar amount.

In his exuberance and joyousness Mr. Galt exclaimed:

"Oh, yes! In 1884! Hush money! Reward! I remember!"

When people heard what he had said, they looked scrutinizingly at him, but five years is a long time, and memory undergoes great strains.

Naomi heard what her husband had said.

But she remembered exactly how the stranger looked when he called to restore the valuables. She compared the resemblance. It was too remote for possibility.

Mr. Leslie Galt sat out on the porch a good deal. People passing said to one another, "That is the way I saw him back in 1884."

One thing is very strange. Mr. Galt has always disapproved of his wife's putting valuables between mattresses, or of placing jewels in a chiffonnier, or of keeping bulky safes in the house.

Mr. Galt claims he can exercise such an effect upon one by magnetism he possesses that you would pass him on the street and not recognize him. He occasionally gives exhibitions of this power.

I have never been present.

Neither has Mrs. Galt.—Exchange.

Three Queer Epitaphs.

Addison, the great English writer whose biogr phers say was "a man of exquisite taste and refinement," and whose society possessed an "indescribable charm," is said to have ordered the following lines inscribed upon his wife's tombstone:

Here lies my wife.
Here let her lie.
She's now at rest,
And so am I.

Another tombstone in the same cemetery bears this inscription:

Here lies our Mary Ann at rest,
Pillowed now on Abraham's breast.
It's rather nice for Mary Ann,
But somewhat rough on Abraham.

A Mormon, whose three wives were blown to atoms in a powder explosion, inscribed the following lines upon a board set up at the single grave in which the remains of all three were buried:

Stranger, pause and shed a tear,
For Mary Ann lies buried here,
Mixed in some mysterious manner
With Nancy Jane and probably Hanner.

Deacon Heavyweight—And so you are going to leave us, parson?

Rev. Mr. Thankful—Yes. I have had a call to another parish, where, by the way, the salary is considerably larger. I am sorry to leave my flock, but I must obey the call.

Deacon Heavyweight (dryly)—Waal, it may be what you call a call, but it seems to me a good deal more like a raise.—Life.

Brice's Banter.

Senator Brice was evidently in a bantering mood when interviewed upon the Senate's amendments to the Wilson bill. "Those of us," said he; "who are anxious to see a bill passed which will repeal the McKinley law are greatly encouraged."

Considering that Senator Brice and his "Conservative" associates have been doing their utmost for five weeks to McKinleyize the Wilson bill, his irony is obvious. If the Ohio senator had been able to restore a duty on wool his satisfaction would no doubt have been greater.

Thanks in part to Mr. Brice's labors, the McKinley taxes on iron and coal are but little more than half repealed. "Half a loaf is no better than no bread." But if the senate amendments to the Wilson bill had been proposed to the voters of the west and northwest, how many electoral votes does Senator Brice think Mr. Cleveland would have obtained in those sections?—N. Y. World.

A Pertinent Question.

There is no name better known among the farmers of this country than Studebaker. It appears on thousands of our farm wagons and other farming implements. Mr. Studebaker has come to Washington to point out to Congress that the wagon business will be ruined if the Wilson bill becomes a law. When he started making wagons many years ago he had not a dollar. In those days the farmers were comparatively well off. Now Studebaker is a several times millionaire and the farmers are practically paupers. No wonder, then, that he comes here asking that the industry out of which he has grown so rich shall continue to be protected at the expense of the farmers who have become so poor. Studebaker is just as dishonest as are all the other representatives of protected industries, and he is in favor of anything that will put an additional dollar into his pocket, regardless of resultant suffering. We can hardly blame him for his course, and if the people or their representatives are willing to continue to let him draw unearned dollars for them, we see no reason why he should not do so. But there is one question we would like to ask him. It is this: Why is it he makes wagons in the united States and ships them to South America by way of Great Britain, and then puts them on the market cheaper than he will sell them for here to his next door neighbor? It may not be generally known, but he does this very thing. We would like to know why?—National Economist.

Hood's Sarsaparilla a Godsend to A Whole Family.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen—My mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe, at the age of 72 years, was attacked with a violent form of salt rheum; it spread all over her body, and her hands and limbs were dreadful to look at. At the same time, my little daughter Clara, who was just one year old, was attacked by a similar disease, like scrofula. It appeared in the form of large sores under each side of her neck; had the attendance of the family physician and other doctors for a long time, but seemed to grow worse. A little book fell into my hands, in which were numerous testimonials from people who had been by Hood's Sarsaparilla. As soon as we gave Hood's Sarsaparilla to Clara, she began to get better, and before the first bottle was gone, the sores entirely healed up and there has never

When Pan's Syrinx changed her form
To a reed by river's brim,
Straight he cut that reed and blew
Sounds divinely sweet to him,
For he knew the music fine
Was the soul of her dear shade,
Hour by hour he wooed her well,
That she might not wholly fade,

Kept the reed against his lips,
And so held her spirit near,
If perchance by some strange spell,
She repentant reappear.
Still he calls upon her name,
Counting not his vision gone,
But he may not bring to life
And her living look upon.

Yet he hopes to and so sings,
Here and there by tempest tossed,
What the heart with love pursues
Never can be wholly lost.
Die it cannot while we hope,
Through a shy, elusive gleam,
It must haunt the sunny heights
Near the valleys where we dream.

A BIT OF NEWS.

"Write for The Times! Do you imagine you went to college for that? You can't write."

"Have you ever given me the chance?"

"No. But I know you couldn't. I dare say you've been counting on doing this, eh?" The younger man bowed. "And have been laying in a stock of flowing rhetoric and fine spun theories," the elder continued. "Humph! The Times wouldn't pay in a month's time if we fed the public on stuff of that sort. What it wants is food of another kind."

"What's to prevent my providing it as well as the other writers on the staff? Is my college education to be a drawback to me? If it is"——

The sentence was left unfinished, and the elder man silently returned to his work of glancing over some copy spread on the desk before him. When he had finished the last page, he turned to the first and wrote "m. g." across the top.

"What does that mean?" George Stanton inquired.

"Those letters stand for 'must go.'"

"Then whatever bears them goes?"

His uncle surveyed, him with a grim smile lighting his face.

"It's apt to," he said dryly.

"Then anything I might write would be printed, regardless of its merit, if you so marked it?"

"Certainly. But you must remember that an uncle indulgent to faults and the proprietor of this paper—a sucessful business enterprise—are two distinct personalities"——

"Which you bear, I understand. But surely literary merit cuts some figure?"

"Um—if the name of the writer who possesses it is well known, it does."

"Not otherwise?"

The elder man shook his head emphatically. "I've no use for 'em."

"Why, that makes out the newspaper of today a money making machine of the lowest order," George Stanton exclaimed indignantly. "The brains of the concern are subservient to the business office."

"Exactly."

There was a pause, during which the younger man tipped back his chair against the wall and gazed abstractedly at the ceiling. At length he brought the legs of the chair to the floor with emphasis.

"I still maintain that it isn't fair that I shouldn't be given a trial," he remarked.

"I suppose you've got a batch of manuscripts all ready to fire at me." The nephew's face flushed. "I thought so. Well, I don't want 'em. Now, see here. What this paper wants isn't rhetoric, it isn't eloquence, it isn't philosophy, it isn't literary merit, as you call it. It's just life—plain, everyday life. I wouldn't publish the most beautiful flight of fancy that was ever written. I've no use for that sort. But life—things near, local, personal—give me those. If you keep your eyes and ears open, you'll find more tragedy in one block of San Francisco than in the whole of Shakespeare."

"Then you give me the chance?"

Frederick Stanton hesitated. "It's open to you the same as it is to all," he replied indifferently. "You would be paid for space work at our regular rates, providing we accepted it. Mind you, I don't say I'll take what you write."

"But if it suits you'll 'm. g.' it?"

"If it suits," the other repeated a little sarcastically, with a movement which closed the interview.

A week later the young man again presented himself in his uncle's private office.

"I've followed your advice, Uncle Fred, and taken life for my subject." He threw himself into a chair and gave a twist to his head in the direction of the inner door. It was slightly ajar, and he rose and shut it before he resumed. "You see, what you said about the tragedies of life, and of course I inferred that you meant the comedies as well, being right under our noses, as it were, set me to thinking. Meantime I have found out the true meaning of your mystic letters. Whatever bears them must go in the columns of the next issue, regardless of time, space or other consideration. They are so potent as to require no explanation, no suggestion from the molders of public opinion who preside in the editorial den. Whatever an editor may receive from a proprietor initialed 'm. g.' will be printed, even if it be the death warrant of the entire staff."

"Is this a lecture on the depravity of the press in general, or my own paper in particular?"

"Neither. It is to let you know that I have been further enlightened since we last discussed this subject. I now understand what exists as a mighty factor in the management of a newspaper, and I want you to put it on the top of that." He tossed some sheets of closely written paper on the desk in front of the other.

"Humph!"

"If I listen I may gather the very material he wants,' I said. I listened. Eureka! I flatter myself that I've got something spicy and realistic enough to suit even you!"

"I told you that if you wrote anything fit to set up type for it would be judged impartially and paid for at the regular rates."

"It isn't the pay so much," George Stanton replied contemptuously.

"Want to see yourself in print, I suppose. Well, let's see what you've produced." He took up the sheets before him and began to read them. When he had finished, he turned to his nephew in surprise. His eye beamed with the delight begotten of "scoops."

"Well, my boy, that's a corker!" he said heartily. "Where did you get it?"

"Listened and heard some old gossips tell it, as you told me to do. All I know is that it's the escapade of a woman high in 'local social circles,' just as I've said."

"Escapade?" his uncle repeated. "I should call it pretty near being a crime. She goes to a midnight supper during her husband's absence from town, and after conducting herself in a scandalous manner there she escapes when threatened with discovery by personating Mrs. H——, a prominent woman of well known rapid proclivities, has the supper charged to her account, and—um!—she goes a little too far for safety in that escapade."

"Of course I had to exaggerate it a trifle—touch up the high lights, you know."

"And darken the shadows. Well, that's what we want, and you've hit it the first time. Only, if we could give the name of the woman who did it or those of her relatives, it would be stronger. Don't know it, eh?"

"No."

"Well, the name of the woman she personated is enough for one scoop, and we've got that. Perhaps others may know it, and it'll set 'em to talking." He took up his blue pencil and wrote "m. g." at the top of the page. "Perhaps you'll make a newspaper man, after all, in spite of your college education. Who knows?"

George Stanton seized the manuscript and hurried on with it to the editorial den, where he deposited it gleefully upon the top of a pile of papers on the editor's desk. After that, dinner, the theater, supper, followed in succession, and at midnight he tried to possess himself with patience to await the arrival of the paper which would contain his maiden effort in journalism.

An overwhelming disappointment awaited him, for when he unfolded the sheet not a line of his production could he find. After searching several times through the 16 pages of the paper the conviction was forced upon him it had been omitted.

He hastened to his uncle's office, for, although it was Sunday morning, he knew he should find him there.

"My article has been omitted," he announced.

His uncle surveyed the crestfallen countenance before him.

"Omitted? I haven't had time to glance at the paper yet—there's so much of it, but it can't be possible."

"It is though. Here's the paper. Look for yourself."

The proprietor glanced hastily over the sheet.

"I never knew Bacon to do such a thing before in all the 17 years he's been on the paper."

"Where is he?"

"Home, I suppose. I haven't seen him. Ring up the porter and find out."

The man reported that Mr. Bacon had been in his office all night, "walking up and down, sor, strangelike. I axed him wor any one after him, but he said 'No,' kinder absentmindedlike, and wint on walkin up and down."

Frederick Stanton dismissed the man. His words had deepened the mystery.

"I can't understand this at all. Come, George; we will find out what it means."

At the door of the editorial office a haggard face confronted them. Mr. Bacon silently ushered in his visitors and closed the door.

"I sent you some stuff last night, Bacon," said Frederick Stanton, "and I've come to hear your explanation—if you can give one—as to why you kept it back."

The man addressed began to pace the room nervously.

"It was about—a woman," he said finally.

"Well, what of it?" demanded his superior. "Her name wasn't mentioned, though it ought to have been, and if it had been is that any reason why you should scruple to publish what I send in? You've never hesitated before over such a trifle as a woman's reputation."

There was an ominous pause.

"We may as well understand one another first as last," the speaker continued. "It will never do for an editor to doubt the policy of an owner. You would be asking my reasons next. If you are to presume to dictate to me, we may as well sever our connection at once."

The man addressed staggered slightly. His face paled, and a hunted look came into his eyes.

"It was only a woman's reputation that was at stake," he said quietly, "but the woman was—my wife!"—John How Bargate in Argonaut.

DR. MARSTON'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 48 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Temperance Workers

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION OF THE WOMANS' CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Their Two Days' Session Held Last Week at the M. E. Church.

A FULL SYNOPSIS OF THE MEETING.

The W. C. T. U. district convention met in annual session at the M. E. church, in Tecumseh, Wednesday morning, April 25th, at 9 o'clock, and continued in session until Thursday evening. There were 81 voting delegates present, besides many other delegates who took a great interest in the meeting. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and the greatest interest was shown in the proceedings throughout.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercises led by Mrs. Amy Jones. At 10 o'clock the convention was called to order and the delegates were seated by counties. Misses Grace Bryant and Annie Carpenter were appointed pages. All the general officers were present. The following committees were appointed: Credentials. Mrs. Gainsley and Mrs. Drew; Courtesies, Mrs. Sutton and Mrs. Varner. The committee on resolutions was appointed by the county presidents, one from each county.

Mrs. Amy Jones then talked on "Is our Evangelistic Work so Conducted as to result in the Salvation of Souls?" She gave an instance of conversion seeming to be the result of her earnest prayer. The sentiments expressed by Mrs. Jones were generally accepted.

The county presidents gave very encouraging reports. Flowers were sent to Mrs. Lathrop in honor of her birthday. The noon-tide prayer was conducted by Mrs. Wood.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

After the devotional exercises and some routine business, the question, "How Can the Local Union be Made Effective?" was discussed. Mrs. Lockwood advised education and circulation of literature. Mrs. Dewey urged agitation. Mrs. Cook and others expressed similar ideas.

After reports by the secretary and treasurer and a solo by Mrs. Smith, the question, "What has the W. C. T. U. Done and What is it Doing for the World?" was taken up by Mrs. Warner who showed how much the Union has done in a silent way and told in a very humorous manner that woman was created superior to man.

Mrs. Sutton reported on the work done among the lumbermen and miners. Mrs. Johnson reported on the Y. W. C. T. U. The question "What has the W. C. T. U. done for the Home?" was taken up and discussed. This discussion was entered into by Mrs. French, Mrs. Newton and others, who told of the great help they had received from the organization and how the Union had made women more independent in public assemblies. A male quartette rendered some music during the afternoon.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

The meeting was opened with music by the Baptist choir and devotional exercises by Rev. May. Fistler. Mrs. Fowler delivered the address of welcome. She showed the great encouragement that would be given to the local union by this convention and the great necessity for this encouragement. She showed how important a part the women had played in the performance of all the great deeds of the world and the necessity of making as much of the women as possible. She told how the women are criticised for going to reform conventions and how they are told to keep within their sphere. She criticised the statement that women can find enough to do in her home without going outside. She said that woman is made a slave in the home rather than a co-worker. She spoke of the necessity of prohibition to save the boys and said that the way to accomplish this is to allow the women to vote.

After a selection by the choir the president, Mrs. Stannard, delivered her annual address. She showed the great necessity for prohibition and the effect it has had on crime in other states. She also urged that the age at which women might marry should be raised to 21 years. She recommended that the watch-word should be agitation and organization.

Mrs. Smith sang a solo and then Rev. Fistler gave a very strong prohibition talk and Rev. Brown followed with a warm welcome in behalf of the Presbyterian church. Rev. Varner gave a streng prohibition speech, saying that he believed in preaching it from his pulpit because it is a great moral question and is therefore within the province of the pulpit.

THURSDAY MORNING.

During the business meeting a letter was read from the bi-chloride of gold cure at Blissfield, introducing that institution to the convention and showing the great work it has done. The question box brought forth a number of very interesting questions. A few of them are:

Q. Can our Unions prosper without the weekly prayer meetings? A. The prayer meetings must be a great help.

Q. What is the law in regard to saloon bonds, and can one saloon keeper go the bonds of another? A. I am told that the law has been that a man must be a moral man to go on the bonds of a saloon keeper, but now the law is that one saloon keeper can go on the bonds of another.

Q. In a village where there is no saloon and there are parties selling liquor on the sly what ought the Union in that place to do? A. If you are sure of your proof and have men to swear that they have had liquors, then go ahead, but don't prosecute unless you can prove from taste. Send word to the U. S. Internal Revenue Collector.

Mrs. C. Lamb gave a talk on "Ethical Culture and Kindergarten." She urged the necessity for the early training of children in the right direction. We must increase the self-respect of the children. Our motto should be "Kindness to the children."

Mrs. C. Humphrey's report on "Scientific Temperance Instruction" was read by Mrs. Johnson. Text books in physiology with special reference to the use of narcotics and alcohol were introduced into some of the schools through the effort of this department but there is still a great lack of instruction in this line.

After the report of the credentials committee Rev. Anna Shaw was introduced and was greeted with the Chautauqua salute. She made a few remarks after which the convention proceeded to the election of officers and after the election of a president adjourned for the noon hour.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

After the devotional exercises the election of officers was continued. All the old officers were re-elected as follows: President, Mrs. Julia D. Stannard; Cor. Sec'y, Mrs. Mattie Gainsley; Rec. Sec'y, Mrs. Susan T. Carpenter; Treasurer, Rev. Mary C. Wood.

Mrs. Lucy Morehouse organized the convention into a model union and went through a long routine of business to illustrate how the local unions could save time by having more system to their work.

The committee on resolutions reported as follows: Relying on God and being grateful to him for all that has been accomplished in our work, the W. C. T. U. of the Second District of Michigan do offer these resolutions:

Resolved, That these delegates do return thanks to the citizens of Tecumseh and that we express our gratitude to them for the hospitable manner in which they have entertained us. That we thank the papers for their promised report.

Resolved, That we take a decided stand on the side of prohibition.

Resolved, That we give special thanks to the musicians.

Resolved, That whereas white ribbon is the symbol of the organization, that we recommend the bit of white ribbon to be worn by all of the delegates.

Resolved, That as our organization condemns gambling, that we discountenance the playing of cards.

Resolved, that we emphasize the duty of Sabbath observance.

Resolved, That it is the belief of this convention that men and women should walk side by side in every position of life, and that, believing this, we will work in every way for the uplifting of womanhood and that we will not cease our efforts until every woman is given the ballot.

Believing that the cause of temperance is the cause of God, and that while we are working for this we are doing Christian work, we resolve to push our work more aggressively than we have ever done in the past.

Resolved, that the doing away with the liquor traffic rests with the voters.

Resolved, That we will urge our women to the study of statutory and municipal laws and that these questions be stated and discussed at the local unions and that all ladies be urged to take part in such discussion.

Resolved, That we demand an equal standard for men and women and that we give special teachings to the young people in our homes.

Resolved, that we feel that our daughters' persons are at least as sacred as their property and that they should be protected by law.

Realizing that the future of our country lies in the hands of our children that are given to us, we ask for special attention to the juvenile organizations.

Resolved, that bad effects follow the smoking of cigarettes and that we condemn the laxity in the existing laws.

Rev. Anna Shaw then delivered an address on "What are the Needs of the Hour?" After telling of her early days in Michigan she went right to the heart of the question and made a strong appeal for women suffrage. She compared the question of woman suffrage with that of home rule in Ireland and said that the only way out was to give women the ballot. "My cry is 'On to Washington' and the halls of legislation. We have not a republican form of government but rather an aristocracy. The W. C. T. U. has secured 9-10 of all the temperance legislation that has been passed during the last 21 years. We want a chance to do active work. The Democratic and Republican administrations have been a farce. You could no more get us back into the rut where we were twenty years ago than you could get a full grown hen back into the egg from which it came. We see a country endowed with everything that a nation could desire and capable of taking care of ten times as many people as she now has, compelled to establish soup houses in all the large cities to keep the starving people alive. This is not due to the paralyzed industries. It is due to the great curse against our homes. It is due to the thieves who legislate, not for the people, but for the saloons. Most of the laws passed against the saloons are unconstitutional. We want to elect men who can pass constitutional laws. Do not let the Unions get discouraged but keep on at the same rate and you will win in the end. Women already have the franchise in Kansas, Colorado and Wyoming."

Mrs. Morehouse spoke briefly of the world's petition which they propose to circulate in this district during the next few weeks, and then the meeting adjourned to meet at the opera house in the evening.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The opera house was crowded to hear Rev. Anna Shaw. The meeting was opened with devotional exercises which were followed by a selection of music by Miss Ingersoll, of Dundee.

Rev. Anna Shaw spoke very earnestly and eloquently, revealing many new and startling facts to the audience. She began by telling how she had been criticised for going into the pulpit but she said she knew enough at least to quit when she had preached herself out of a congregation.

"The W. C. T. U. very soon after its organization, saw the folly of trying to secure temperance by the means of pledges alone, so they added prohibition to their platform. When we find out what the liquor men want that is just what we don't want. The liquor men don't want us to vote for fear we will carry prohibition, so we want to vote. We are willing to do what Lyman Abbott is warning us against doing and that is to take up citizenship. He warns us that it is not a privilege to be enjoyed but a duty to be done. That is what we think and that is why we want the franchise. It is not a question of what we want to do. It is a question of what we should do for our country. The saloon has been dominant in the affairs of the world long enough. The saloon is the worst element of society and the church is the best, yet the saloon is enfranchised bodily and three-fourths of the church is disfranchised and politically the saloon comes out ahead. There is only one way in which the church and the home can have an equal chance with the bad ones. You cannot have a true republic until you allow women to vote, for a republic is a government elected by the people and not by the males. In olden times we were the subjects of the king. The first voters of this country were the church members. I wish it were that way now. At the close of the Revolutionary war those paying taxes on $250 worth of property could vote, so that many of the women voted. Women voted in New Jersey as late as 1807 when they were deprived of their vote by a decision of the supreme court. Later the suffrage was extended to all the white males, then the word "white" was stricken from the constitution and all men were allowed to vote. The next step in advance should be to give women the ballot. You have not a republic to-day. It is an aristocracy of sex. Our forefathers opposed taxation without representation. The women have been fooled for a long time but now they are rising up and demanding the application of common sense to the government. We want the men of the United States to do one of two things, either to say what they mean or to mean what they say. There are many women taxed without representation.

"I claim that government exists for three things: The protection of property, the administration of justice and the development of society. When it comes to voting you class women with idiots, paupers, traitors and criminals. You have given a reason why all the others should not vote, but you have never given us a reason why we should not vote. If government is for the protection of property why are not we as much interested in it as men are? Are not women equally interested with men in the development of society? It took the court of Massachusetts to decide that women are persons. What would we have been if it had decided that we were not persons? The law used to be based on the theory that man and wife are one, and that one the husband. She could not hold property. She could not appear as a witness against her husband. She could not sue. By the aid of good men we are beginning to get our rights in this line. The husband used to own even his wife's clothes but now women can go out in her own, not her husband's clothes. In New York state the widow is entitled to a life lease of one-third of the property of her husband. She has a life lease of the cemetery lot but cannot be buried there without her husband's consent, unless she is buried alive. We women tried to get a bill through the Massachusetts legislature to allow women to be buried in the family lot and it took us ten years to get it through. The members hung a big codfish in front of the women's gallery for us to look at while we were waiting to see what became of our bill.

"Are we not interested in the administration of justice? When a woman is tried she is tried before a jury of men. What would men think if they had to be tried before a jury of women? The Massachusetts legislature found time to protect fish, because their protection was wanted by their constituents, but they had no time to provide for the protection of girls because the women could not vote. When we urged a bill for the protection of girls they gave us the privilege of retiring. When we went to the legislature to get abused wives protected they had no time for that, but they passed a law protecting milk cans and a law protecting lobsters. What would you think of the government if, after you had built up a business and accumulated some property, the government should take it all away from you? And yet a woman puts the work and worry of seventeen years into raising a son and then sees him run down to ruin through the influence of the saloon which owes its existence to the indulgence of the state. It requires 100,000 boys every year to fill the ranks of those killed by drink. Whatsoever a man or a nation soweth that shall that man or nation also reap. We want the voters to protect us, and if you can't do it we want you to give us a chance. God said in the beginning that you couldn't go alone and that is why you have made such a bungle of it. We shall continue to cry out until justice is done to the homes. Congress has been busy half the winter discussing protection on wool as if the life of the nation depended upon it, but they have no time to talk protection on girls and boys. Did you ever hear of a nation that went out of existence because they had no protection on wool? But many a republic has gone out of existence because of the ruin of the people who compose it. We must have integrity or we shall be ruined. The men in dealing with the liquor business are like Pilate, who crucified Christ, and then tried to wash his hands of the sin. If they would follow the advice of their wives, as Pilate should have done, the country would be rid of the curse. You cannot think of a reform measure that was not first projected by a woman. When man and woman, created in the image of their creator, come into equal possession of their heritage the country will be a country of God and this will mean the overthrow of the saloon, the death of the liquor traffic and a country whose law is law. When this is done we will have a 'government of the people, by the people and for the people.'"

After the collection the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Anna Shaw.

Ed. Snedicor is moving his family into Lawrence Van Tyne's house.

Mabel Pennington, of Macon, is visiting Tecumseh friends for a few days.

Mrs. Dr. Kimball, of Adrian, was the guest of Mrs. Judge Stacy over Sunday.

Mrs. David Coryell, of Deerfield, was visiting friends in Tecumseh last week.

Mrs. Frank Wallinger, of Clinton, visited friends in this village last Friday.

Dr. L. M. Jones, of Brooklyn, was here Tuesday, the guest of his son, Dr. O. Q. Jones.

James Dunseath has secured a job of sticking type in the office of the Clinton Local.

The plant season has opened up at Ab. Wilson's. Read his notice among the specials.

Roy DeWolf returned to Detroit Monday to resume his position in the store of S. A. James & Co.

Miss Hannah Craig, who has been stopping in Tecumseh for some time, has returned to Detroit.

One of Adrian's lazy citizens made an attempt last week to organize a Coxey contingent, but it proved a fizzle.

The Epworth League will observe its fifth Anniversary on Friday evening, May 11. All members are earnestly requested to respond to the roll call.

People who obtain one of the Co. C programs for the entertainment next Wednesday evening are requested to bring the same with them on that evening.

Jesse Exelby, of Deerfield, drove thro' town Monday with a three story load of wool on his wagon, bound for the Clinton Woolen Mill. The load contained 2400 pounds.

Extensive repairs are being put upon Ed. Kirchgessner's new purchase, and the store will present a very neat appearance when the improvements are all completed.

There will be a celebration of communion next Sunday morning at eight o'clock, at St. Peter's church. The regular services for the month of May will be in the evening.

Where is Prof. Hercules E. Fink? If Tecumseh is to have a contingent in the Coxey army, Prof. Fink is the man to lead it. We are anxiously awaiting Prof. Fink's bugle call.

The Mooreville Universalist social will be held at Jesse Warner's, on Friday evening, May 11. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Bill, including supper and music, 50cts.

Albert Hyde, Sr., went to Detroit Saturday to have a surgical operation performed. He failed to rally as was hoped and died yesterday afternoon. The funeral will be at 2 p. m. Saturday.

Some of our very best male singers and amateur actors have parts in the Co. C Minstrel entertainment. The program will be thoroughly rehearsed and will be worthy of patronage. Let us fill the house.

The price of admission to the Co. C Minstrel entertainment will be only twenty-five cents; children under 12 years old, fifteen cents. Reserved seats without extra charge at Adamson's. Secure your seats early and avoid the rush.

The HERALD Job Rooms issued yesterday a very tasty pamphlet program for the Co. C Minstrel entertainment. In general style it is a duplicate of the Temple of Fame program and is fully equal to that job. Public comment on these two jobs is very flattering to our foreman, Mr. C. H. Reed.

The Catalogue for 1894 of the State University is out, and is a valuable compendium of information. The total registered attendance for the present college year is 2659, of which Michigan supplies 1407. Illinois comes next with 304. The annual fee has been raised $5,00 since last year, which will give the University an additional revenue that is very much needed. This increase, although small for each individual, will aggregate a liberal sum.

Macon Grange will meet in regular session on Wednesday evening, May 9th, at 7:30 o'clock. The following is the program:

Song by the Grange.
Reading—Nelson Skinner.
Recitation—Fannie Miller.
Declamation—R. C. Bailey.
Reading—M. J. Martin.
Recitation—Emma Bailey.
Address—J. I. Gulick.
Question for discussion—The Free delivery of Mail.

Several members of the Tecumseh I. O. O. F. lodge went to Dundee last Thursday to attend the Odd Fellows celebration. There was a big crowd in town and Dundee had on her holiday attire. The parade was a very fine one, the procession containing over three hundred members of the order in full regalia, and three brass bands. An interesting literary program was given in the afternoon and P. G. M. Janes, of Hillsdale, delivered an address in the evening. All the lodges of Monroe county attended as organized bodies, and Tecumseh, Deerfield and Adrian were represented by members of the order.

See Co. C Minstrels.

"Jane" will be here May 12th.

May party at Tecumseh, Wednesday, May 2. Some towns dote on Christmas, others worship the 1st of the new year; still others, the 4th of July, but at Tecumseh the May party is the one big event of the year and is always a triumph.—Adrian Press.

The sixth and last of the series of educational addresses to be given before the B. Y. P. U., of the Baptist church, will be given in the chapel on Friday evening, May 4. Pastor E. R. Curry, of Jackson, will be the speaker of the occasion. These meetings are open to the public and all are cordially invited.

We hope our citizens will give the Co. C boys a rousing benefit at their Minstrel show next Wednesday evening. They certainly deserve it. Their work in fitting up the new Armory has been a prodigious task and they deserve a substantial return, both in good will and financial support.

The minstrel entertainment at Tecumseh to be given by Co. C, has been adjourned to about the middle of May on account of one of the end men swallowing a "gag" he was practicing on. It is thought that a careful course of treatment will bring him around before corn planting time is over.—Adrian Press.

Will Comfort of Raisin, died at St. Mary's hospital in Detroit on Monday. His death was caused by an operation, which he had performed. He was a young man of genial disposition and fine business ability, and his demise will be a severe blow to the family. The funeral has not yet been fixed.

The program for the Co. C. Minstrel show is now in rehearsal and the boys will spare no pains to make it attractive and entertaining. It will be divided into two parts, part first consisting of vocal selections with the usual interlocutions, part second, or the Olio, consisting of various specialties. Turn out and give the boys a rousing house.

Now spade around your pie plant, tie up the raspberry canes, set some shade trees if you have none, ditto grape vines and strawberry bed, and above all don't forget to clean the mud off your shoes, you lubber, when you come in the house. —Herald Pentecost Pointers.

In these times of monetary stringency we have no money to fool away but would risk $10 on a bet that the writer of the above is a woman.—Adrian Press.

You would win the bet, neighbor, and she understands her knitting too, whether keeping house, or writing items for the home paper.

C. L. Albaugh was here Monday packing his household goods, and he left town Tuesday morning for Hillsdale, where he will make his permanent home.

Harry McClure went to Adrian Sunday evening to assist in taking, in shorthand, the annual speeches of the Y. M. C. A. given at the opera house that evening.

The preparations for the Co. C minstrel show are progressing apace, and people can depend upon a rattling good entertainment. Admission 25cts; children under 12 years old, 15cts.

Rev. E. Mudge has completed his first year as pastor of the Christian Union Church, of Britton, and last Sunday he received a unanimous call to remain another year. Mr. Mudge has done a grand work for the church during the past year, and his parishioners evidently appreciate his services.

Last Friday we spent about four hours at Ann Arbor between two trains; made some calls and left others unmade which were intended. Miss E. Cora DeFuy is now in the Democrat office, reading proof and assisting in local editorial work. She has a congenial position and evidently fills it to good acceptance. A call at the Argus office found both Editor Beakes and Prof. Hammond in. Mr. Beakes was receiving congratulations upon his appointment to the Ann Arbor postoffice and Prof. Hammond was up to his ears at editorial work and proof reading. He likes the business so far first rate.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package. also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

ASKED FOR BREAD.

Miners Parade at Iron Mountain and Demand Relief.

They Call on the Poor Commissioners and Are Given Food—A Sad Condition of Affairs Reported from That Section.

TROUBLE IS FEARED.

IRON MOUNTAIN, April 28.—Five hundred miners, carrying a red flag, paraded the streets Friday morning demanding food. They marched to the high school grounds and stopped the men who were working there for the relief committee. They demanded that Mayor Crowell telegraph Gov. Rich to send aid for 500 starving families immediately. They also adopted a resolution asking Poor Commissioner McClintock to aid them or leave the town. For a time the commissioner was undecided which step to take, but after a consideration of the matter the crowd was pacified by an order for two dollars' worth of provisions on the stores to each man and all is quiet now. The situation now is critical, however, and trouble is feared unless relief of a more permanent character comes soon.

A delegation consisting of Chairman McNaughton, of the board of supervisors, Mayor Crowell, President Wood, of the First national bank, and A. W. Wright, a leading merchant of the town, have gone to Lansing to consult with Gov. Rich.

A large number of families have had nothing but flour and water to eat for days and only a scant supply of that. There are, it is said, 500 families in Iron Mountain which are actually starving. It is impossible to paint the situation here too darkly. No relief commissioners have been appointed and citizens have contributed beyond their means, but there is only sufficient to last for a few days. Then, unless relief reaches the city from outside, there are certain to be more demonstrations. A report of the old relief committee shows that over $20,000 worth of supplies have been received and distributed since January, not to mention aid given out by private individuals and city and county authorities, which amounts to as much more.

The sudden demand for aid may be explained by the fact that the Iron Mountain people have been living in hopes that the Chapin mine would resume operations, and the order for the resumption has been expected daily. Many of the men in the demonstration of Friday were employed in the lumber yards during the winter. The camps broke unusually early and the men returned home with but a few dollars, and this money is now gone. The relief store closed only two weeks ago, and the reason appeal has not been made sooner is that the committee considered such an appeal hopeless in view of what had already been done, and that they realized that other communities had all they could do in caring for their own poor.

There is no prospect of the mines resuming this season, and the men have no funds with which to seek work in other places even were there a prospect of securing employment. What the outcome will be can be easily imagined. These men are willing to work at anything for seventy-five cents or less per day, but with an empty treasury the city and county boards are unable either to furnish the men with the employment they demand or provisions. Merchants are already overloaded with city and county paper, and to take more means bankruptcy to them.

LANSING, April 30.—Gov. Rich does not believe it will be necessary to call out the troops to preserve order in the upper peninsula, as some persons have suggested, and is confident that the actual necessities of the miners and their families will be supplied by the generous people of the state.

IRONWOOD, April 30.—The dark clouds of destitution are now rapidly moving away, and a new era of prosperity is dawning upon the hardy miners of the Gogebic iron range. While Coxey, and Kelly, and Hogan and numerous other champions of the idle have been leading vast hosts on to Washington, the workingmen of Ironwood have gone about matters in a more practical way. They made a direct demand upon the county board of supervisors and secured an appropriation of $75,000 toward building country roads and helping the unemployed. In addition to this they made known to the mining companies their willingness to work for next to nothing, and this has resulted in operations being resumed at the great Colby mine, and the force being increased at the Aurora, work thus being given to over 400 men. Poor Commissioner Monroe says that the county is now taking care of the poor without any assistance, but that June 1 the entire poor list will be wiped out. While the miners here are working for the lowest wages in the history of this mining region they do not show any disposition to strike.

MARQUETTE, April 30.—Marquette county has emerged from the trying winter without encountering any severe experience in caring for the poor. Of $50,000 appropriated to the poor fund five months ago $12,000 or $15,000 remains unexpended. Besides this there is $75,000 in the contingent fund that can be drawn upon for the relief of the poor, if necessary, but such contingency is very remote. The commissioners report demands for relief slowly diminishing as the opportunities for summer work open up. Throughout the winter 1,600 men found employment in the iron mines of the county, and the opening of lake shipments gave places at the mines for about 200 more, besides increasing the number employed on the railways and docks. The starting of sawmills can scarcely be said to have increased the number of men employed, as that has been simply a transfer of forces engaged in the woods to the mills. About $6,000 a month is now expended on Marquette county's poor.

LAKE LINDEN, April 30.—Sensational reports concerning destitution in Houghton county are abroad, but they are exaggerated. There are probably 1,000 men out of work, and fully half of these require relief.

ODD FELLOWS DAY.

Michigan Lodges Celebrate an Event Appropriately.

DETROIT, April 27.—The fourteen local lodges of odd fellows were assisted in the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the order in America Thursday by 2,000 visitors from eastern Michigan and Canadian towns.

KALAMAZOO, April 27.—The three odd fellow lodges, with 800 members, celebrated the anniversary Thursday night with a public entertainment. A fine musical and literary programme was given. Rev. George K. McDonald and Mr. Clute, of Bay City, spoke.

CHARLOTTE, April 27.—The odd fellows here celebrated the anniversary by initiating fifty-two new members. They were assisted by the lodges from Olivet, Grand Lodge, Battle Creek, Lansing, North Lansing, Sunfield, Eaton Rapids, Nashville, Bellevue, Dimondale and Albion.

STURGIS, April 27.—The anniversary of odd fellowship was celebrated Thursday with visiting lodges from Bronson, Burr Oaks, White Pigeon and La Grange. An address was made by W. H. Beinpfry, of Three Rivers. A grand banquet was given in the opera house.

COUNTY SEAT WAR IN COURT.

Supreme Judges Appealed To to Settle the Montmorency Case.

LANSING, April 28.—The county seat war in Montmorency county has finally reached the supreme court. That tribunal has granted an order requiring the board of supervisors of the county to show cause on June 5 why it should not reconvene and recanvass the vote cast upon the proposition to remove the county seat from Atlanta to Lewiston. It is alleged that the vote of Alberta township, which gave a majority of about 250 in favor of removal, was illegally and arbitrarily thrown out by the supervisors and the proposition thereby defeated by 100 votes.

NINETEEN YEARS IN PRISON.

A Michigan Convict Set Free and Is Bewildered by the Change.

JACKSON, April 26.—Convict Ripley has just been released from prison, having served a twenty-five-year sentence for assault. Ripley made full good time and was inside the walls a trifle under nineteen years. He had never seen a telephone, electric car, nor brick pavement until he came out. The city, he said, seemed like fairyland to him, and the actions of the people moving about the streets were like unto a picnic when he was a boy. He had saved a few dollars during his confinement, which he was disposed to spend as a boy spends a dollar at Christmas. He is 45 years old.

PARKE TRACED TO CANADA.

His Friends Now Fear That the Missing Detroit Man Has Committed Suicide.

DETROIT, April 30.—A trace of James H. Parke, of this city, who disappeared from New York city April 12 on the eve of his marriage to a Brooklyn woman, has been discovered at Chatham, Ont. The young man feared detectives were after him and he leaped from an express that was under full speed. He was injured but reached a hotel in Chatham. Of the clerk he made a confidant, saying that he had got into a scrape and that it would cost him $2,000 or two years in jail to get out of it. Friday night he disappeared suddenly again and his friends fear that he has committed suicide.

He May Plead Guilty.

GRAND RAPIDS, April 27.—Charles Macard, accused of murdering Mrs. McKendrick, waived further examination Thursday and was bound over. The testimony of John Stevens, a Chicago stevedore, who declared that Macard wanted him to help rob a Michigan woman last summer and who corroborated the story of Henry Prame, the self-confessed accomplice of Macard, broke the prisoner's spirit. Macard is rapidly losing his nerve, and it is probable that he will plead guilty.

Football Men Rebel.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 30.—It is reported that half the football team from the University of Michigan will leave that seat of learning next fall and enter the University of Chicago. Among those who are to go are Villa, the Michigan half-back, Fuerbert and Smith. There will be two or three others besides these. The reason assigned for their departure is rather indefinite, but it is said in a general way that there has been a row in the athletic association, and particularly the football contingent.

Michigan Postmasters Nominated.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.—The president sent the following nominations of postmasters in Michigan to the senate: Edwin H. Page, Union City; Richard S. Breece, Three Oaks; Charles P. Johnson, Pentwater; Charles T. Fletcher, Marshall; William F. Stirling, Eaton Rapids; Milo Lewis, Greenville, and David Matteson, Middleville.

Driven Off by Longshoremen.

LUDINGTON, April 28.—The longshoremen attacked the dock hands Friday who were loading the steamers Schroeder and Campbell and a riot ensued. Many were injured on both sides, and the dock men, who were in the minority, were compelled to flee, pursued by the strikers, who were armed with clubs and stones.

To Offset the Machines.

GRAND RAPIDS, April 30.—At a meeting of the Typographical union a committee was appointed to consider the establishment of a morning paper on the cooperative plan. This step is proposed as a means to furnish employment for printers who will be thrown out of work by typesetting machines.

Tuite Is Held for Trial.

DETROIT, April 28.—Ex-City Treasurer Thomas P. Tuite, accused of embezzling $15,000 city funds, was held for trial Friday on completion of his examination.

WOULD BAR FOREIGNERS.

An Odd Mistake in Phrasing a Constitutional Amendment.

LANSING, April 27.—The last legislature sought to amend the constitutional provision relative to the qualification as electors of foreign-born citizens by extending the time previous to an election day when such person shall have declared his intentions to become a citizen. It has been discovered that the proposed amendment, which will be voted on by the people next November, says that "such intention must have been declared two years and six months previous to November 8, 1884." This would, if adopted, render it impossible for any foreigner who has declared his intentions subsequent to April, 1892, or who shall hereafter declare them, to ever become a qualified elector in Michigan.

KILLED BY HIS SON.

A Sturgis Boy Compelled to Shoot His Father in Self-Defense.

STURGIS, April 30.—Jay Seymour was shot and instantly killed by his son at his home in Burr Oak at 11 o'clock Saturday night. He had been drinking and returned home and began to break up the furniture, kicking out the windows and otherwise destroying things. His 16-year-old son, who was alone with him in the house, tried to pacify him, when he knocked his son down and began to pound him. The boy secured a revolver and shot him, one ball striking him in the mouth and one in the right breast, which produced instant death.

Insurance for Michigan Farmers.

LANSING, April 28.—It appears from Commissioner Giddings' latest report that mutual insurance companies in the state are developing rapidly. The farmers' mutual insurance business has all sprung up since 1870. The fifty-six distinctively farmers' insurance companies of Michigan now carry risks aggregating $188,003,522, an increase of $9,073,881 during the year ending December 31, 1893. The number of policy holders is 118,827, an increase of 7,236. The resources of the companies are $168,700.39, the liabilities $245,044.91.

Think It's a Burlesque.

OWOSSO, April 29.—Fully 600 laboring men organized on the river bank Saturday evening and marched through the streets burning red fire and cheering the name of Coxey. The city band led the parade. The American flag and banners bearing the inscription: "We Are the People" and "On to Washington," were carried in the parade. Whether any of the men will really go to Washington is unknown. It is believed to be a burlesque on the Coxey movement.

Gold at Harbor Springs.

HARBOR SPRINGS, April 27.—This town is in a state of great excitement over the discovery of gold in a field just north of the village. While plowing Mr. Emery struck a hard substance very near the surface of the ground. It proved to be quartz, and when he threw it down it left his hand covered with shiny particles of gold.

Starving Himself to Death.

KALAMAZOO, April 30.—J. Dewright, of Cooper, is starving to death at his home. He lost his house by fire a few months since, and, although well to do, he has brooded over the loss. For twenty-two days nothing except water has passed his lips. He refuses all other nourishment, and is determined to die. He is 80 years old.

Drowned While Asleep.

HOUGHTON, April 30.—Joseph Remillarda, a farmer residing 9 miles from Lake Linden, started for home about 9 o'clock Saturday night. His body was found in a creek Sunday morning near his home with the head under water. The supposition is that he fell out of the buggy while asleep.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Because It is so Pure!

That's the great reason why you should know about our salt. It requires the best to produce the best. The good farmer realizes this with his seed; shall the butter maker be less wise? Our salt is as carefully made as your butter—made expressly for dairy work; and bright dairymen everywhere find their butter better made and their labor better paid when they use

Diamond Crystal Dairy Salt.

No matter what brand you have used, just give this a fair trial. It is first in flavor, first in grain, and first in purity. Whether for dairy or table use, you will find it to your advantage to be acquainted with the salt that's all salt. Write us.

Notwithstanding there are seven saloons, Hudson consumed ninety-one million gallons of water last year.

Take a lettuce leaf and sprinkle it with mustard and you have an idea of the prevailing colors that will be worn this spring.

Hudson Congregational ladies have a society with nearly $400 in the treasury. They will expend it on new church fittings.

The Gazette's illustrated report of the St. Patrick's banquet has inspired in the heart of a small boy a new prayer. He prays that "everybody can get rich enough to have their pictures in the papers." The youthful mind did not stop to consider that three of the cuts were pictures of preachers.—Hudson Gazette.

The Hudson Gazette says that three eminent physicians told a citizen of that town in 1885 that he couldn't live forty days. The patient was in desperate health, the physicians who held the council seemed strong and hearty. All three of the doctors have passed away, but the patient who was given up to die is alive and well.

A voter who couldn't read the ballot in the first ward Monday was told by one of the inspectors that he must swear. Immediately he ripped out a volley of profanity that would make a canal-driver blush. When it comes to swearing, he ejaculated, "I can accommodate you." When the matter was explained to him he felt indignant that he had used so many of his choicest cuss-words to no purpose.—Hudson Gazette.

The nomination of E. B. Pond as postmaster of Ann Arbor has not been withdrawn, although Congressman Gorman still desires that result. The only papers filed in this case were a personal letter from Judge Thomas M. Cooley and letters of indorsement from Alpheus Felch and James B. Angell. The case was promptly called up and these were the only papers that were filed. The petitions for S. W. Beakes and Ed. Duffy had been forwarded to Mr. Gorman, but had not been presented. The president is known to attach much value to the indorsement of Judge Cooley.—Detroit Free Press.

An exchange, that is given to asking questions, propounds this list:

"Who can definitely give the cause of the late financial depression? George J. Gould says it is the hostility to corporations; the farmer says it is the low price of wheat; the silver man says it is the action of Wall street; Wall street says it is the silver men: those interested in manufacturing say it is the fear of free trade; some say it is the result of thirty years of protection: the capitalists say it is the exorbitant demands of labor; labor says it is the oppression of capital; the debtor says it is the creditor; the creditor says it is the debtor; the Democrat says it is the Republican; the Republican says it is the Democrat, the Populist says it is both; the Prohibitionist says it is whiskey, and monopoly legislation, while the preacher says it is the devil." Which is right? We give it up. Next.

THE STATE CENSUS.

LANSING, April 20, 1894.

The State census is to be taken in June of this year. The law seems to be very explicit, but as it is not in the hands of every one, there is much inquiry as to its provisions. The inquiries relate mainly to the appointment of enumerators, and are all answered by the first section of the census law, which is act 178 of 1893. It provides:

1st. That enumerators and assistants shall be appointed after the annual township meeting, and on or before the first Monday in May.

2d. That they are to be appointed by township boards in townships and common councils in cities.

3d. That if not appointed before the first Monday in May, the appointment is to be made by the Governor. And

4th. That enumerators are to be appointed for each assessment district.

It is clear from the above,

1st. That appointments made before the annual township meeting are illegal.

2d. Appointments by any other than township boards in townships and common councils in cities are illegal.

3d. Appointments after the first Monday in May can be made by the Governor only. Enumerators and assistants are to be appointed before the first Monday in May. In case a sufficient number of assistants are not appointed before that date, the additional number required must be appointed by the Governor.

4th. Enumerators and assistants are to be appointed for each assessment district. If a township, a city, or a ward is divided into more than one assessment district, each district is to have one enumerator, and such number of assistants as may be necessary to complete the census within the time prescribed by law. Neither an incorporated, nor an unincorporated village, can have an enumerator unless it constitutes a distinct and entire assessment district. In other words, where the township forms one assessment district, there will be one chief enumerater for the entire township, including the villages within such township. An assistant may be appointed to take the census of the village or villages under the supervision of the chief enumerator, or the chief enumerator may take the census of the village, and the assistant the census of the country.

The division of territory in townships may be made by the township board, and in cities by the common council, but in case it is not so made, then it is the duty of the chief enumerator to make such assignment of territory.

A Valuable Invention.

The hollow grate bar just completed and in use under the boilers of the Adrian Electric Light company can now be seen in operation any evening. It is well worth the time of any steam user to examine the working of the same. This grate can receive and equally distribute four times as much air as any common grate, and this air is heated from 100 to 140 degrees before it comes in contact with the fuel.

Either set of these grates has a capacity of receiving and equally distributing 3,168,000 cubic feet of air in a 24-hour run, which is a sufficient quantity to form perfect combustion with six tons of soft coal. They consume a large portion of soot that usually collects in the flues. Very few clinkers form on these grates, and those that do form never run together or stick down to the grates. The draft on these grates is under control of the foreman so that he can burn from one to four tons on the same surface as the power may require.

These grates are manufactured and sold by the patentee, George M. Knight, of that city.

Mrs. J. O. Shephard who has been at Flint with her mother who is very sick returned home Tuesday.

Dr. Hall, of Bellevue, Mich., was in attendance at the funeral of his brother-in-law, Loyal Rhodes, last Friday.

James Currey and wife and Miss Lizzie Wakeman visited friends in Ann Arbor from Saturday until Monday.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. C. M. Gove on Friday evening of next week. Three ladies will spring a surprise on the friends during the evening.

By request Rev. Cansfield will give a discourse on "Ladies" next Sunday evening. The ladies are especially requested to be present and hear what the parson has to say.

Dr. Rhodes' father who was reported sick in last week's issue died Thursday morning. The funeral services were held at the house Friday afternoon, Rev. Cansfield officiating.

The literary committee of the Epworth League will give an evening by American poets on Tuesday evening of next week. Each member is requested to furnish a quotation selected from some poet.

Mrs. Mary Arner who makes her home with her son S. J. Arner, of Bay View, Mich., arrived Saturday from a visit with relatives at Groveland, N. Y., accompanied by her little niece Bessie Heath, for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Addie Kelly.

On Wednesday evening of last week Class No. 4, consisting of young men of the Sabbath School, were given a reception by their teacher Mrs. Sarah Rappleye at her home. Each young man was accompanied by a young lady, making a gathering of about thirty. After an hour of social amusement the following program was presented:

Song by the Class.

Devotional exercises conducted by the President of the Class Ralph Barrett.

Secretary's report—Floyd Smith.

Vocal Solo—Oh, Bird of Joy. Elmer Linn.

Reading—Selling the Farm, Guy Pocklington.

Quartet—God save the Boy, Class Glee Club.

Declamation—Marvin Pattison.

Address—Mrs. Sarah Rappleye.

At the close of the program the president in behalf of the class presented their teacher with a very handsome cabinet album, as a slight token of their esteem and appreciation for her kindness to them.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Ralph Barrett.
Secretary—Floyd Smith.
Treasurer—Horace Dibble.
Closing song—When the roll's called, by class.

The musical part of the program was under the careful attention and direction of Lella Sutton.

Refreshments of a delicate nature were served by Mrs. Rapplaye, and the occasion will long be remembered by those present as one of the most enjoyable times of their youth.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to tender our respect and appreciation to the neighbors and friends for their kindness at the death and funeral services of our father, also to the choir for their valuable service.
Respectfully,
DR. AND MRS. RHODES.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Devillo VanValkenburg spent Sunday with friends in Pentecost.

Harry Vanderpool and his cousin, Miss Minnie V. who have been so ill with mumps, are both on the gain, as their friends will be glad to hear.

Mr. E. Buck took a ride in his wheeled chair, on May 3d, his 58th birth day, and spent the afternoon pleasantly with Mr. and Mrs. Smith German.

The farmers were treat to a small sized flood last week, and being so wet they could not plow for corn. they took things easy, and just dug some bait and went fishing.

It is a noticable fact that there are fewer spring colts than usual this season. During a ride of nearly fifty miles, recently, we saw just one little colt. Horses seem a drug in the market.

There is good reason to believe that there will be an abundance of all kinds of fruit with the exception of peaches and perhaps strawberries. The orchards are a mass of blossoms in this vicinity.

"Little drops of water, and little grains of sand make the mighty ocean and the beauteous land," and little dressy dudelets, every Sunday night, make the girls so tired, that they are fit to fight.

A team belonging to H. Beckman, of Sand Lake Hotel, attached to a carriage, ran away with the occupants, three little children, Tuesday morning. Mrs. W. Slater had finished her trading at the store of E. Bush, at the crossing, and was about to get in the carriage, when the team started. The lady hung on to the team until she was thrown down, and left behind. J. S. Pentecost saw the accident and ran out and stopped the team, when the lady got in and went on apparently not much the worse for the occurrence.

MACON MUSIC.

Miss Addie Crittenden of Cleary's College, spent last week at home.

Mr. Ed. H. Osgood, of St. John's, Clinton county, spent a few days at the old home last week.

Mr. Tuttle of Bedford, Ohio, made a short visit with his father-in-law, Geo. Harmon last week.

Mr. Rolfe Mills, who has been teaching in California the past year, returned home last Wednesday to spend the summer vacation.

A meeting will be held at the home of John Jackson, Friday evening of this week to make some arrangements for Decoration day. All those interested please attend.

The Epworth League will give an entertainment at the M. E. church, Wednesday evening, May 16th. Admission, ten cents. A male quartette from Tecumseh, and other outside help is expected to assist.

Mr. Griffin, who has been a missionary in Japan the past ten years, will lecture in the Baptist church next Saturday and Sunday evening. A collection will be taken for Missionary purposes.

Quite a number went to Adrian last Wednesday to hear the suit of Heman Hand vs. Ed E. Osgood. On Tuesday the special appeal was over-ruled, and an order issued compelling the plaintiff to give security for costs, within 24 hours. The case was then called on Wednesday afternoon, but owing to the fact that Hand insisted on attaching an amendment to the first declaration of which Osgood had no previous notice, and was wholly unprepared for, the Judge postponed the case until the Oct. term of court.

BRITTON BUDGET.

C. L. Haines, of Adrian, is in town this week.

Herbert Cranshaw is sick with the rheumatism.

Quite a crowd from here attended the Co. C Minstrels at Tecumseh last night.

The storm which struck our village last Saturday, was the heaviest of the season.

L. C. Hoagland made a business trip to Sandusky last Saturday, returning Tuesday.

S. C. Spitler's meat wagon started on the road last Monday with Wm. Larrabee as driver.

We understand there was a wedding in town the other day, but the parties concerned deny it.

A. Brunk will have a plating apparatus in working order in a few days, and open up work in that line.

The next meeting of the base ball association will be held next Monday night. Let all be present.

The first ball game of the season was played yesterday, but too late for us to get the details before going to press.

The party that went fishing last Saturday, had the finest time of the season, they got wet and caught cold; a large catch for them.

Next Saturday our team will meet the Adrian team on our grounds. This will be a good game, and will be worth your time to witness it.

ANOTHER PIONEER PASSED AWAY.

Orsamus Lamb, one of the oldest residents of this county, peacefully passed from earth at his home in Adrian, last Saturday night. He was afflicted with no special illness, but his death was the result of a gradual decline of his physical powers. Two years ago he had an attack of the grip and has never regained his usual health since that time. About a month ago he began to fail quite perceptibly. Saturday morning for the first time he was too feeble to leave his bed, and he failed rapidly until the end came that evening.

The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of his son, Franklin D. Lamb in Blissfield. His wife died three years ago, and three children survive him; Franklin D. and Chas. H. Lamb, of Blissfield and Mrs. Phoebe A. Mitchell of Adrian.

The deceased was born January 23, 1819, in Erie county, N. Y. He came to Michigan with his father, Nahum Lamb, who settled in this county in the town of Woodstock, in November 1834. His father took up a farm on the line of the Chicago turnpike. It was afterwards owned by Garrett F. Harris.

Orsamus Lamb lived in Woodstock until January 1868, when he removed to Adrian city. During his residence in Woodstock he held several public offices of importance and trust, having been elected school inspector when he was but 21 years of age, which office he held for six years. He was also justice of the peace there for twenty-six consecutive years, besides being supervisor for nineteen years. In 1867 he was appointed county drain commissioner, officiating in that capacity for six years, when he resigned to accept the office of justice of the peace, in the city of Adrian. He held this office for two terms. March 13, 1839, he married Miss Caroline Osborne, daughter of Jesse Osborn, one of the early settlers of this county. Mr. Lamb was admitted to the bar in 1881, and immediately began practice in company with H. C. Pratt. This partnership existed until two years ago, when Mr. Lamb associated himself with T. M. Joslin. Mr. Lamb was prominent in the local Democracy, and six years ago ran against Judge R. B. Robbins for probate judge. At the time of his death he was president of the ex-county officials' association.

He was one of the most prominent Masons and Knights Templar in the county, having been honored with the highest offices of the order, and was exceptionally well informed in Masonic lore. It was his pride to perfect himself and instruct others in this knowledge, and he did this even at the expense of his professional business. Mr. Lamb was a man of sterling character, generous nature and a lovable heart. In every respect he was a good citizen, whose loss is a misfortune to family, friends, the fraternity with which he was so long associated, and the community at large.

THE HIGHEST AWARD.

Royal Baking Powder in Strength and Value 20 Per Cent. above its Nearest Competitor.

The Royal Baking Powder has the enviable record of having received the highest award for articles of its class—greatest strength, purest ingredients, most perfectly combined—wherever exhibited in competition with others. In the exhibitions of former years, at the Centenial, at Paris, Vienna, and at the various State and Industrial fairs, where it has been exhibited, judges have invariably awarded the Royal Baking Powder the highest honors.

At the recent Woold's Fair the examination for the baking powder awards were made by the experts of the chemical division of the Agricultural Department at Washington. The official report of the tests of the baking powders which were made by this department for the specific purpose of ascertaining which was the best, and which has been made public, shows the leavening strength of the Royal to be 160 cubic inches of carbonic gas per ounce of powder. Of the cream of tartar baking powders exhibited at the Fair, the next highest in strength thus tested contained but 133 cubic inches of leavening gas. The other powders gave an average of 111. The Royal, therefore, was found of 20 per cent. greater leavening strength than its nearest competitor, and 44 per cent above the average of all the other tests. Its superiority in other respects, however, in the quality of the food it makes as to fineness, delicacy and wholesomeness, could not be measured by figures.

It is these high qualities, known and appreciated by the women of the country for so many years, that have caused the sales of the Royal Baking Powder, as shown by statistics, to exceed the sales of all other baking powders combined.

Raisin Valley Seminary.

Miss Luella Clark and Rev. Mott attended quarterly meeting at Ypsilanti.

The literary society did not meet last Friday evening on account of its being a short school week.

The lecture on Thursday evening was very interesting and entertaining. Dr. Leslie's subject "Glimpses of life in the metropolis" was well treated. He is certainly an able speaker.

The funeral of William Comfort occured at the Friends church Sunday. The deceased was a student of the Medical profession at Detroit. He will be missed by a large circle of friends.

Unless your envelopes state the number of days you wish your letter held, the postmaster, by a new ruling, will hold them thirty days instead of ten. This is important to men who do not wish their letters, when not delivered, detained over five or ten days.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 10, 1894.

Gen. Coxey has got into Washington and he has got into the Police Court too.

The members of the House have found time to pass the river and harbor bill. They are still for the "old flag and an appropriation."

An exchange has invented a new name for "senatorial courtesy." It will be in order hereafter to call it "dignified dilatoriness."

An exchange puts it thusly: "Senatorial courtesy doesn't stop with taking off its hat three times. It also takes off its coat and puts a chip on its shoulder.

Gen. Coxey declares that his men are anxious to work. Then what are they marching on to Washington for? Work is decidedly out of fashion in that latitude.

If being much talked about leads on to fortune, then Gen. Coxey is on the highway leading to that goal. Coxey is more talked about at present than Grover or Benjamin.

A farmer who could not raise $1.50 to pay for his county paper, sent $3.00 to an Eastern man to learn the secret of keeping butter from getting strong. He received the reply: "Eat it."

Representative Bland's views on the President's veto of the Seigniorage Bill are set forth in an article on "The Hopes of Free Silver" which appears in the North American Review for May.

A pamphlet upon the silver question has just been published by Sir Joseph McKenna, ex-director of the National Bank of Ireland, in which he takes strong ground in favor of bimetallism. It is creating a sensation in financial circles.

The effects of the big coal strike are already manifesting themselves. The electric street railway company of St. Louis is nearly out of coal and the prospects are that the people of that city will soon have to fall back on foot and bicycle locomotion.

At the special election held last week in the third Ohio district, Paul J. Sorg, the Democratic nominee, was elected by a majority of nearly 3000. The fight was a clean cut contest on the tariff question, and Sorg was an outspoken champion of the Wilson bill. The result is very significant.

The agitation in England in favor of bimetallism is attracting much attention and comment. England holds the key to the situation. If England would consent to the rehabilitation of silver, the opposition to free silver in this country would melt out of sight. Free silver coinage is coming; it is only a question of time.

The rapid growth of public sentiment in England in favor of bimetallism is certainly vindicating President Cleveland's action in forcing the repeal of the Sherman Act. One of the chief reasons urged for the repeal of that act was that it would force foreign nations into an international agreement, and the signs of the times point to that ultimate result.

The democratic Senators held a caucus last Thursday on the tariff bill and came to an understanding which will insure a practically unanimous vote on their side of the chamber in its favor. Of the 44 Democratic Senators, every one is in line except David B. Hill. He will doubtless vote against the bill, but his power for making mischief is now broken.

Major Griffin, the member of Congress from the first district, has suffered for some time with impaired hearing. He recently caught a severe cold and has become almost totally deaf. Unless he can obtain speedy relief, it will effectually close his political career. He was making a fine record in Congress and his present misfortune will be deeply deplored by all who know him.

The prominent part which the American Protective Association, or the "A. P. A." as it is now more generally called, has taken of late in political affairs in different sections of the country furnishes occasion for two interesting articles dealing with that organization written respectively by George Parsons Lathrop and Bishop Doane of Albany, which appear in the May number of the North American Review and which are bracketed together under the title of "Hostility to Roman Catholics."

This wholesome advice is taken from the Philadelphia Times: The Democratic Senators have at last got the tariff bill into such shape that they can all agree to support it. This does not include Senator Hill, but he can hardly be called a Democratic Senator, and probably would not support any measure of revenue reform likely to be proposed. It probably does not include one or two Southern Whigs. But there were thirty-seven Democratic Senators present at the caucus who agreed to vote for the amended bill, and it is true that six who were absent have given the same pledge. There are votes enough to pass the bill, and no further delay should be tolerated.

The Third Ohio district is one of the strongest Democratic regions in that State, but it was carried last fall by Governor McKinley by over 500 majority. The vacancy occurring in the district by the death of its Representative furnished an opportunity for the Republicans to obtain an emphatic verdict against the Wilson tariff bill by the election of a Republican Congressman. They nominated Mr. Rathbone, one of the strongest men in the district, who had not only the support of the Republicans, but also the earnest support of the American Protective Association, from the fact that the wife of Mr. Sorg, the Democratic candidate, was a Catholic. This cost the Democratic candidate many votes on the religious issue, but he made the battle squarely on the question of tariff reform, and he was elected by a large majority. This result in Ohio is notice to the country that tariff reform shall not be overwhelmed by the exceptional business and industrial paralysis that has come upon us as the logical fruits of Republican misrule and it will do much to halt the Democratic demoralization that prevails throughout the country. If Congress shall now perform its duty, as did the people of the Third Ohio district, not only tariff reform will be secured, but the country will cordially support it and make it the permanent policy of the nation.—Philadelphia Times.

John Patton, Jr., of Grand Rapids, has been appointed U. S. Senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Stockbridge. The selection is generally regarded as a good one. The appointee was born at Cowensville, Pa., October 30, 1850, and consequently is a trifle under 44 years of age. He prepared for college at Andover, Mass., and graduated at Yale college with the class of '75, afterward taking a course at Columbia law school, New York, from which he graduated in 1877. The following year he came to Grand Rapids, and has since resided there, engaged in practicing law. Some years ago he married a daughter of the late Wilder D. Foster, representative in that district in 1873, and has two children. In 1884 he was a member of the state central committee. He is an eloquent and forceful speaker. For two years he was president of the Michigan Republican league, and did a great deal towards arousing it from its then dormant condition. He has been an earnest party worker for years, and possesses the power of organization to an unusual degree. He is a student and a scholar, and has rather preferred his books at home to active career as attorney. He has money enough to enable him to gratify his literary tastes and live easily. He is very approachable and considerate, and has many warm personal friends. He comes from a family of marked ability. His father represented his district in congress twice, once in the thirty-seventh congress and again in the fiftieth.

A correspondent at the National Capitol briefly describes the present "Coxey situation" in these words: Coxey's army has gained notoriety, but it has dearly paid for it, and if the men are allowed to remain in their present camp many of them will surely pay for it with their lives. If the authorities had condemned four hundred criminals to be imprisoned in the enclosure that Coxey's men now occupy the humanitarians of the country would be up in arms about it. Why Coxey took these men there is a mystery. A more unfit place could not have been found, and Coxey knew it, because the health officer told him. It is along side of an old canal into which empties a number of the largest and filthiest sewers of Washington. And that is not all by half; the soil is made up of dumpings of filth and inside the enclosure are pools of stagnant water covered with green scum an inch thick. Already a number of the men have been taken to hospitals, and if they are allowed to remain there they will soon begin to die like sheep. Coxey, who stops at a hotel and lives on the best, talks glibly of the men dying there being an "object lesson," but the men don't seem any more anxious to die than other men. When Coxey failed in his very mild attempt to speak from the Capitol steps and together with Browne and Jones was arrested, the movement collapsed, but he still insists that he intends to keep these four hundred men here until they grow into four hundred thousand, when he will again make the attempt. He charges an admission fee to the camp, but only he and Browne know where the money goes. He says it is used to feed the men, but the men are getting mighty poor feed.

"Gen." Swift's industrials on their way from Boston to Washington, camped one night recently in a big barn in Connecticut. During the night a skunk casually wandered into the building and the next morning the army buried about half its wearing apparel. The small boy and and his unexpected answer were at it again in the East branch school house the other day. The teacher of the primary class was drawing pictures on the blackboard, and then having the children tell what they represented. One of these was a pitcher. An eager-looking little German boy was asked what it was.

Without a moments' hesitation and with a good deal of pride in his intelligence, he answered "A pitcher!"

"Correct" said the teacher. "Now tell me what it is used for."

"Beer!" enthusiastically exclaimed the boy.—Adrian Times.

An up-to-date Detroit News reporter imagined this thing the other day:

"Breckinridge street!" cried a Grand River avenue conductor one forenoon.

"What's that? Breckinridge street?" asked an old lady. "Oh, my! That's horrid. I should think the people would want the name of that street changed, now," she continued.

"The residents of the street are now petitioning for a change in the name," said an innocent looking fellow with a twinkle in his eye.

"Indeed: that's good," said the old lady with satisfaction. "What are they going to call it?"

"Pollard!" And then there was a long continued and thoughtful silence.

Chauncey Depew was on his way early one evening to a vestry meeting of the "New York Anti-Sadness Sodality," when he saw a ragged little gamin on the steps of a residence vainly trying, on tiptoe to reach the door bell, says the New York Advertiser.

The genial Chauncey instantly stopped. Shall I ring the bell for you, sonny?" he asked as he lightly tripped up the steps in readiness.

"Yes, Mister, please," whined the midget, and the deed was promptly and vigorously done.

As Chauncey briskly started off, on just a trifle better terms with himself than before, his coat tail was fairly snatched as the little villain fairly jerked him around and astounded him with: "Say, you son of a gun, you run dat way and I'll run dis."

People sometimes hear odd things on the street cars.

The other day a sweet young thing in seal furs said to a sweet young thing in dark green:

"Alice, is it true that the Columbian stamps will not be used after this year?"

"That is what I understand," replied the sweet young thing in green.

"I am so sorry."

"Why?"

"You know Frank Jimson, don't you?"

"Of course. He went away to college last September."

"Well, we corresponded with each other. Did you know that?"

"No; isn't that nice?"

"Yes, but mamma permitted the correspondence only on condition that she read the letters. We are so young, you know, and she is dreadfully afraid we'll write love letters to each other."

"What have the Columbian stamps to do with it?"

"Just this. We write our love messages on the envelopes, and paste the stamps over them. The stamps are easily soaked off, you know. You'd be surprised how much we can put under a Columbian stamp when we write a real small hand."

GEN. COXEY AND THE LAW.

Judge Cooley, of Ann Arbor, is regaining his health fully. He delivered an address last week before the students which showed his old time grasp of constitutional questions. In referring to the Coxey movement he said:

"Our government is representative and not a true democracy, because it is, first, on too large a scale to be a pure democracy, and, secondly, because from the foundation of our government people have depended on their representatives. From the earliest day the chief duty of the citizen was to vote for some representative, and when this was done he ceased, almost entirely to be a unit in political power. If a large class of people became dissatisfied with the manner of conducting the government, what then? Suppose 10,000 in every state, making an army of 440,000, should arise to appeal to congress and should march on to Washington to demand a fixed rate of wages, or eight hours as a day's work, and that the unemployed should be employed by the government in improving the common roads of this country. They start out voicing their demands in the name of the people, while they constitute a very small fraction of the whole people. When we examine our form of government to see what gives them the right to make these demands we find that the authority of the citizen is limited to the election of representatives. The army, so-called, has no power to coerce one single representative at the seat of government, and so far as constitutional power is concerned, the representative may determine alone how he shall act. The petitioner cannot go to congress with his petition. The petition must be presented by the representatives themselves. Among the enumerated powers there is not one that covers this subject. When they ask the federal government to make roads they ask something beyond the pale of federal authority. It is the state that makes the roads. In every case where federal authority has been called in for like purposes, some claim was put forward claiming that what was proposed was to carry out some federal authority. Suppose what was demanded was purely national, like the coining of money, even then this demand from without would have no binding force. When there is an attempt to compel the exercise of government power otherwise than as provided in the constitution, it is a direct attack on liberty itself. The people could not make the laws even if the legislative authorities would attempt to turn over legislative machinery to the people. To attempt to subvert the recognized authorities and their power is a step toward the overthrow of our government, and one step toward revolution. What is taking place now may be a farce, but it seems to me that it may end in civil war."

"That's the end of it," as the boarder said to the landlady when she gave him the tail of the chicken.

All Medicines Fail Except Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—Ten years ago, my wife's health began to fail. I consulted a physician, and for one year she remained under his care and took all the medicine prescribed, but still grew worse. We then consulted other physicians, and she doctored off and on for four years without any improvement. As her mother died of consumption, and I expected my wife would go the same way. However, feeble as my wife was and though by the physician, I could not give up hope, and she still clung to life. Then we began to try different medicines. We found that of all the preparations taken, a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla had seemed to do her the most good, so she determined to take that medicine again. I bought six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and while taking this lot she seemed to get better. This was so encouraging, after so

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 7th day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety four.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of John Margeson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of James E. Howard, treasurer of Kalamazoo College, alleging that said college has a claim against the estate of said deceased; that the time first limited for the presentation of claims against said estate has expired, and praying for reasons set forth in said petition that a hearing may be had before this Court upon said claim and that the same may be established as a valid claim against said estate in accordance with the provisions of the statute in such case made and provided.

It is Ordered, That Monday the Fourth day of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the executors of the will and the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is Further Ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in The Tecumseh Herald a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee; for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE BONNY DOON.

paused beside the bonny Doon
At midnight and alone
And heard it tell the listening moon,
In saddest undertone,
The loss and sorrow by it known.

"What though in spring my birks grow sweet,
In summer shade my tide?
What though the years unchanged repeat
Their magic at my side?
No more to me the bard returns
Who sang my banks and braes;
No more the lips of Robert Burns
Are vocal in my praise."

"Oh, bonny Doon!" said I, "take heart
And learn this truth of me:
Immortal as his heavenly art
The bard himself must be.
Though never to your banks and braes
His wandering step returns,
The sweetest singer in your praise
Is still your Robert Burns."

Yet, as before, beside the Doon,
At midnight and alone,
I heard it tell the listening moon,
In saddest undertone,
The loss and sorrow by it known.

A MADMAN'S MYSTERY

I have seen a newborn baby in its crib, with its eyes wide open, peering into the life just opened to it. I have heard persons wonder what the little brain is thinking about, what it sees and how its new surroundings affect it. I know what life seems to a newborn child, for I was but as a newborn child when I awoke to life, and opening my mouth cried out involuntarily to attract the attention of the woman at the window.

She arose from her chair and came hurriedly to me.

"Ah," said she in a sweet, low voice. "At last you live. Rest now. Try to sleep. You will get well."

I did not understand her words at the time, but they filled me with a satisfied feeling, a desire to close my eyes and sleep. I lay half unconscious for some time, teaching myself object lessons, and soon I could name the various articles I saw about me. But, try as I would, I could not remember my name or anything about myself.

I became strong enough to get up from my bed, and to sit at the window, and to look out upon the snow covered ground, and to watch the gray and the blue in the ocean, and to walk about the room.

One morning I determined to see whether the nurse knew anything about me, so I called her to my bedside.

"Do you know my name?" I asked her.

She looked at me in surprise and wonder.

"No," she said.

"Well, do you know anything about me?"

She looked even more surprised.

"Nothing," she said, "nothing, except that two months ago some of our people found you on the beach apparently dead. We have nursed you back to life. Don't you remember anything about yourself at all?"

I had to admit that I did not.

"Well, will you tell me where I am?" I asked her.

"You are in the town of Astine, on the coast of Nova Scotia," she replied.

"Astine,"—the word seemed familiar to me—"Nova Scotia" also familiar, but I could not tell when or where I had heard the words before.

About a week after this occurred my nurse came to me and told me that the village doctor had said that I could go out for a walk. She offered to go with me. I gladly accepted her companionship, and together we walked out into the cold, fresh, life giving air and down toward the ocean.

We came upon an old ruined building.

"What is this?" I asked her.

"The ruins of the house where the Ayraults lived."

"The Ayraults—have you ever mentioned that name to me before?" I asked her suddenly.

"No," she answered. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I do not know, except that the name sounded familiar to me, as if I had heard it many, many times. Why, even when you spoke it I thought—how foolish of me—that you had spoken my name. Who were they?"

"They lived here for many years in this old house. The son and mother were drowned years ago. The father, I believe, is still alive. He lost his mind, and every now and then is seen wandering about here looking for his son, who, he says, will return to him some day. Why, look there! There he is now!"

But I heard no more that the woman said. I but saw an old man, white haired, with wild eyes, staggering toward me.

I looked at the sea.

Once more the world became dark.

And then—maybe I dreamed, maybe it was a picture I saw, maybe it was my memory come back to me.

* * * * * * *

"I stood at the window looking out upon the sea, partly hidden from my sight by a fine white mist, which I could plainly see coming in, sweeping along before the wind over the water up the hill toward the house. The sea roared sullenly, and the waves dashed angrily up over the rocky beach, occasionally the spray leaping higher than the mist, suspended for a second above it, sparkling in the moonlight.

"I opened the window, and as I did so the thick mist, which had now come up over the hill, came pouring into the room. Despite the cold I stood entranced, amazed, looking out upon the wonderful beauty of the night. The wind grew fiercer, the sea dashed the foam from its lips up above the blank face of the white mist. The moon for a moment shone down upon it, transforming it into so much fairy silver. Then the foam sank again down deep into the mist.

"Suddenly there came a boom, followed by a glare across the heavens.

"I knew what that meant.

"'A vessel ashore,' I cried, 'in that surf, on those rocks. God have mercy on those on board.'

"There came a loud knocking at my door.

"'Who is there?' I asked.

"'It is I,' came the voice of my father. 'Open, I beg of you.'

"I went to the door, raised the latch and admitted him. My mother was with him. They were fully dressed.

"'Boom!' came through the white mist from the vessel pounding upon the beach.

"Yes, now I could hear the vessel as she beat her brains out.

"Then the heavens were illumined by a second rocket.

"'Did you hear? Did you see?' asked my father.

"'Yes,' said I, 'it is a vessel ashore.'

"'We must go to that vessel,' he said resolutely. 'They will need our help. You will go?'

"'Yes,' I said.

"'And I, too,' cried my mother.

"My father tried to dissuade her.

"'This is no woman's work,' he said.

"But she would not be frightened.

"'I will die with you,' she said resolutely.

"Out into the storm we rushed, down to the beach, where the frightened villagers stood looking vainly out toward the doomed vessel.

"They ran toward us as we approached. They would not go out in the boat, they said—it was death.

"'At least,' said my father, 'you will help me get the boat into the surf?'

"But they would not even help get the boat into the surf.

"'It is death you are going to, Ayrault. We will not help to murder you,' they cried.

"'Then stand aside,' and together we three pushed the boat into the surf, through the rocks to the open sea, then jumped into her and put off over the fiercely rolling waves. My mother and myself took the oars. My father stood at the bow looking out ahead.

"'Come back,' came a faint echo from the shore.

"A great wild wave came crashing down upon us.

"Nearer and nearer!

"The boat cried out, almost, it seemed, like a human being in terror.

"The wave struck the boat.

"The cold water rushed over my head.

"I went down—down.

"I struggled to the surface.

"For a second I caught sight of my father and mother as they struggled in the embrace of death.

"I could see their eyes turned at the last toward me.

"'Come,' their eyes cried to me. 'Come.'

"I tried to cry out to them. I tried to cry to them to wait for me; that we would die together in each other's arms.

"I struggled to get nearer to them."

* * * * * * *

Then something seemed to snap in my head, and once more I stood on the beach.

"You are faint?" she said.

"My father," I muttered, "where is he?"

"Your father!"

"Yes, yes, the old man, where is he?"

"See, he is stumbling along there."

Like one in a dream, he came slowly toward us.

Terror and pleasure stupefied me.

His eyes rested on the snow in front of him. Then suddenly he raised them to mine.

He threw up his arms; he started forward; he cried out, a cry of peace, happiness, a cry from a soul flowing over with exultation.

My father's eyes looked deep into mine. My father's arms were about my neck.

"At last," he cried, "at last, my son, back to me, and now rest."

And with a low moan the old man—Ayrault, my father—fell back upon the snow and was dead.

* * * * * * *

And now often my father and my mother come to me when the moon shines in upon my couch, and we sit together in the moonlight, and he tells me the old story; how during his lifetime my mother and I had come to him to minister to him; how I had promised to come back to him so that he might rest.

I ask him every night if am to live on forever, but he answers not.

So we hold each other's hands, and the spirits in the moonlight sing to us, and we are happy.

I, even I, am happy, though they do keep me locked up here in a cell night and day.—New York Sun.

Fifty Feet of Rainfall Annually.

There is always more or less guesswork concerning the amount of rain that falls during any storm period. Throughout the United States the amount that falls on any one day rarely exceeds one inch. There are certain portions of the globe, however, that are frequently, and others only occasionally, deluged with water. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, at an altitude of 4,500 feet, 610 inches of rainfall have been registered in a single year, of which amount 147 inches (12 feet 3 inches) fell in the month of June. At a meteorological station in latitude 68 degrees, near the western boundary of Hindustan, the average rainfall for the 15 years ending with 1893 was 254 inches. In the northwestern part of England, at an altitude of 1,300 feet, the average annual rainfall is 146 inches, 111 inches in excess of the mean for St. Louis, which is but 37 inches and a fraction.

The wonderful record given above is still more phenomenal when we consider the fact that all the moisture the atmosphere is capable of holding in any one time is never over the entire surface of the [illegible] At the less than four inches [illegible] all be instantly precipitated [illegible] it to the earth.

Cold Wait Too.

"Is you in a hurry, madam?" inquired the doorwalker.

"Yes, sir," returned the middle aged matron frigidly. "I reckon they'll wait in to see if I won't go away without staying for the 17 cents in change that's a-coming to me!"—Chicago Tribune.

D. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such, that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE MINSTREL ENTERTAINMENT.

A Program Over Two Hours Long, Containing More Than Two Bushels of Fun.

When the Co. C. boys decided to get up an entertainment to replenish their treasury, they concluded to step outside of the usual routine and get up something new. The plan of an old-fashioned minstrel show was finally determined upon, and the event took place last evening at the opera house.

FIRST PART.

A full minstrel program was carried out. Part First consisted of songs by individual members with the usual dialogue between the interlocutor and the end men. The circle contained seventeen men. The Columbian Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. D. Hubbard, occupied a raised platform in the rear of the circle, and the four end men were seated, where they could be held down, at either end, well in front and outside of the drop curtain. These latter were attired in burlesque costumes, while the remaining members were clad in full evening dress with white gloves.

After the overture by the Columbian orchestra and a little parleying between the interlocutor and the end men, Geo. Schreder gave an end song, "Shall We ever be Able to Fly?" which was finely sung. Dan Bowen did himself credit in the song, "She Left the Man Who Loved Her for Another," and E. R. Tidball sang the "Fatal Wedding" in a manner that brought hearty applause. The end song, "Move On," by Al. Heidenrich, brought forth an encore. "Nell, the Village Belle," by R. J. McClure, displayed fine vocal powers and received a hearty encore, and Levi Hayden's song, "If I Were Home To-Night," was rendered in a very able manner. This part closed with a Grand Finale, "Four Little Maids from School," given by the four end men, which was perfectly killing. These vocal selections were sandwiched with interlocutions which kept the audience in a constant roar. The hits and gags were all good and most of them were entirely new.

Mr. Tidball has been a professional for six years and has traveled for the past five seasons and got up the show for the company. He role as interlocutor was admirably carried out, he had the management of the entire program.

Mart Crossman and Al. Heidenrich rattled the bones splendidly, as did Geo. Schreder and Chas. Rude tattooed the tambos to perfection.

THE OLIO.

The second part or Olio consisted wholly of specialities. Smaadge and Rude gave a roaring sketch entitled "Help Wanted." The old man wanted a servant and the young darkey gave him all he wanted and more too.

Davenport and Bowen appeared in a guitar and banjo duet which received merited applause and brought forth an encore.

Brooks and Gray gave an exhibition of soft glove sparring which was very creditable and kept the audience good natured.

The "Awkward Squad" was made up of Burlingame, Smaadge, Crossman, Schreder, Rude, Gray, Walker and Tiffany with Don Bowen as drill master. The drilling was awkward enough to set a military man crazy, and it wound up with a chorus that called out a rousing encore. This sketch was admirably acted.

Leon McNeil followed in an "up to date" character specialty. He represented either a professional tramp or a recruit of the Cozey army and he played the role in a very realistic manner.

Crossman and Schreder appeared in a sketch entitled "The difficult rehearsal" which tore the house all to pieces. Schreder got himself wound up and opened upon rehearsing a vocal solo, and Crossman tried various plans to stop him without success. He finally choked him off with a big sponge saturated with chloroform, bundled him into a coffin and vanished behind the scenes.

The Nonpareil Sextette, consisting of Bowen, Schreder, Tidball, McClure, Hayden and Ross, then gave a vocal chorus, "Soldier's Farewell." There was no nonsense about that, however. It was splendidly rendered, the singers' voices blending in perfect harmony. They were called back three times. Their encore response was a beautiful ballad "I Loved You Better Than You Knew," which only made the audience ask for more and they closed with a rollicking negro melody entitled "Linda, Linda."

The evening's program concluded with a monologue specialty by Selve Walker, entitled "Nothing to say," and he proceeded to say it in his usual entertaining style.

The characters were chosen with much skill, and the rehearsals had been properly attended to so that the program proceeded without a hitch, from the opening overture to the closing monologue. The program was a surprise for its completeness. It was mostly nonsense and burlesque, that is true, but there was nothing vulgar nor overdrawn about it and the large crowd that filled the opera house was held to the finish. Co. C. will net a good fund to replenish the treasury, and all who participated will receive the hearty thanks of the boys for their kindly assistance.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 14, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 15 which will be ready for distribution to-morrow has the following table of contents:

Wooded Islands.
1. Hooden Palace.
2. Japanese Tea Garden.
3. Horticultural Building.
4. East Entrance.

Exhibits therein—
5. California.
6. Florida.
7. Idaho.
8. Illinois.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in fifteen parts, containing 16 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enameled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. Now is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 30 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon will receive one of these patterns free. The numbers can be selected from the advertisement appearing elsewhere. Any other pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

A TECUMSEH BOY MISSING.

When the Florida Car was in Tecumseh a few weeks ago, Myron W. Hughes applied for and secured a position to help run the car, began his duties at once and has been with the car ever since. The following, from the Toledo Blade of the 7th, gives the particulars of his mysterious disappearance:

Myron W. Hughes, of Tecumseh, Mich., has disappeared mysteriously, and it is thought has been robbed and murdered. Mr. Hughes was traveling with the Florida exhibit, known as "Florida on Wheels," and was last seen at Cayoga, Illinois, at 10 o'clock Thursday night.

A letter from Mr. Webb, manager of the car exhibit to L. S. George, at St. Vincent's hospital, states that Hughes was left in charge of the car at Ridge Farm, where he conducted the night exhibit at that place. He was last seen at the close of the exhibition at 10 p.m., when he closed the car for the night.

The car was attached to a night train and taken to Cayoga, where another exhibit was to be made. The time for opening the car came, but no signs of life appeared in the car. Investigation showed that Hughes is missing. The lid on the money chest had been pried open and $100 in bills taken.

It is the opinion of Mr. Webb, that Hughes was overpowered by persons who concealed themselves in the car. His inference is that Hughes has not only been robbed but has been murdered and his body thrown in a river which was near by. Telegrams along the line fail to find any trace of the missing man.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Hillsdale county will vote on local option to-morrow.

The W. R. C. anniversary supper will be held at their rooms next Friday afternoon, May 18th.

Ed. Rose, of Clinton, passed away early this morning. The funeral will be held Friday afternoon at 3 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Beaman and Cyrus Root, of Addison, were in Tecumseh over Sunday, having come down to attend the funeral of Wm. S. Comfort.

M. E. Conklin will sell the Walter A. Wood machines again this year and will have a fuller announcement of his designs on the farmers next week. His headquarters will be at Chas. Albaugh's old stand.

Arrangements are being made for a Gold Medal Contest to be held at Raisin Valley, Friday evening, May 18th. This is the seventh contest held at the Valley and promises to be one of the best of the series.

We learn that Summer Collins has removed his law office in Chicago to suit 1214, Chamber of Commerce building. People in this vicinity who may have legal business in Chicago should favor Mr. Collins with their patronage.

Chapin's new directory of Adrian, Hudson and Tecumseh will contain over 6,000 names, besides classified lists of business names and miscellaneous department, in all nearly 350 pages, representing a population of about 17,000. Price of the combined directory the same as for the Adrian city directory alone.

The new office desk in Orr & Temple's store was made by the Tecumseh Table Co. and is a very fine piece of workmanship. It is a standing desk, the top being surrounded on three sides by a plate glass screen. It is made of oak and fitted with all the necessary shelves and drawers. The cost of such a desk is twenty-five dollars.

Dr. R. B. House, of Springfield, Ohio, is in town, having arrived last night. He came to Toledo to attend the State Homoeopathic Convention and took the opportunity to run over to Tecumseh for a brief visit. He will return home next Monday. He was unanimously elected President of the State Society at this meeting, having previously served one year as secretary and two years as treasurer. This is quite an honor and it came to him entirely unsolicited.

GONE TO HIS REWARD.

By the demise of Albert Hyde another name is added to the death roll of Lenawee county's pioneers.

The deceased was born in Wayne county, New York, Oct. 28, 1830, where he passed his youthful days. At the early age of sixteen he drifted westward with the tide of emigration then setting toward the state of Michigan, and took up his abode in the township of Franklin in the year 1826. For a few years he worked for different farmers by the month, and by his habits of industry and economy, saved enough money to enable him to buy a farm of his own. On the 5th of November, 1845, he was united in marriage to Caroline Tilton Putnam, and the two began to carve a home for themselves amid the Franklin woods. For nearly thirty years they endured the toil and hardship incident to pioneer life, which resulted in one of the best farms in this section of the county. In April, 1871, Mr. Hyde sold the old homestead and moved to this village, buying a fine residence on Chicago street, where he resided until his death. As he was possessed of good physical health and a financial competence he enjoyed his home here very much. For the last two or three years, however, he has been suffering from an incurable malady and on Saturday, April 28th, he went to Detroit to submit to a surgical operation, hoping to obtain relief. He failed to rally, as his friends had hoped, and death came to his relief on Wednesday, May 2.

The funeral services were held at the family residence on May 5th in the afternoon, and notwithstanding the drenching rain at the time, a large gathering of neighbors and friends assembled to pay their respects to the departed. Rev. W. L. Gibbs, of Concord, officiated. His wife and two children survive him, a son and a daughter, all living in the home here. He also leaves one brother living in Tecumseh, one in Allegan, Mich., and one sister in Alton, N. Y.

The deceased was a man of strong convictions in his social, political and religious associations, although tolerant toward the views of others. He was a steadfast republican, and since his residence in the village had been an active member of the Universalist Parish, having served as treasurer of the board of trustees for several years. A kind and indulgent husband and father, a good neighbor and an upright citizen has obeyed the summons that must come to all men, and has gone to his final reward.

OBITUARY.

We are again reminded of the passing from us of the older members of this community. In the death of Mr. O. B. DeWolf another of these has gone. For more than thirty years he has been known as one of Tecumseh's business men and citizens. For a time in the early part of his residence here he was engaged in the jewelry business; later after closing this out he acted as traveling salesman in the same line. He was born May 30, 1831, in Kinsman, Ohio. He was third of seven children born into his father's family. At an early age he left the parental home and within a short time became a resident of Michigan. His union in marriage with Miss Cordelia Adams, of this place, occurred April 4, 1859. Within a few months the young couple became permanent residents of this place. For a number of years on account of poor health he had not been actively engaged in any line of work. Of his marriage six children were born. One of these, a son, died in infancy. One daughter is spending a time in the south for her health and was not permitted to be with the others of the family at the time of burial. The funeral service was held at the family residence on Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Pastor H. A. Smith of the Baptist church.

Lightning lit on the west mail box at the Lake Shore station in the storm of Monday night and opened it quicker'n the most nimble postal clerk could. And it was way open, too—split right in the middle. The electric fluid has laid itself liable to action for tampering with the mails.—Hudson Gazette.

The fourth number of "The C. E. Helper" was issued from the HERALD Job Rooms, Tuesday. It is a very neat number, and the board of editors are entitled to much credit for the ability shown in preparing the contents. Both general reading and church news items display good taste.

The course pursued by Governor Tillman of South Carolina during the recent liquor riots in that state, has been the subject of much criticism. Governor Tillman explains and defends his action in an article entitled "Our Whiskey Rebellion" which appears in the May number of the North American Review.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold the regular monthly social in the church parlors on Wednesday, May 16th, as it is the annual meeting for election of officers. All members are requested to be present at 3 o'clock p. m. Supper will be served at the usual hour by Mrs. Whittier's committee.

At the Opera House, will be given next Saturday evening, 'Jane' an English comedy, which, under Gustav Frohman's direction has had a successful career throughout the country. The humor of the play is said to be so bright and the complications so amusing, that one can go and see it a dozen times without losing interest.

Who has not heard of "Jane," that screamingly funny farce that has set all Europe and America in spasms of laughter? Jolly rollicking 'Jane' comes to Tecumseh for one night only, on Saturday, May 12th, and for the first time. Manager Sutton has been endeavoring to secure this imminently successful play and is to be congratulated on having secured so rare a dish to set before his patrons.

No matter what other magazines and papers the American woman buys, she subscribes to Harper's Bazar for the information it contains about fashions. It is her guide not only in those matters which have given her the reputation of being the best-dressed woman in the world, but in those other questions of mode which are not less important—the fashionable innovation in dinner-giving, in receiving, in furniture and decoration, and in the thousand and one things which distinguish the American household. There is no other paper in this field. The Bazar has no rival; it has not even a competitor.

Go and see "Jane."

Bear in mind the Cobweb Social to be held in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, Thursday evening, May 17th, at 7:30. There will be a fly in the center of the web. Come and be a spider.

"Jane," a farce that has set all Europe and America in spasms of laughter, comes to Croswell opera house for one night, on Monday, May 14. The management is to be congratulated on having secured so rare a treat to set before the patrons of our only place of amusement.—Adrian Times.

Another suicide occurred at Adrian last Monday morning. Frank Wellhauser, who kept a grocery and meat market on Erie street, hung himself from the roof of the barn; when his wife found him his body was still warm, but life was extinct. His mind had been unbalanced for some time.

Capt. James C. Wheeler, of Detroit, celebrated his silver wedding last Saturday. We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation and regret our inability to attend. The Captain is prospering in one direction at least, as he has a family of eight children, all of whom are in good health. His old time friends in Tecumseh will extend their hearty congratulations, with the wish that he may live to celebrate his golden anniversary.

The funeral obsequies of the late Wm. S. Comfort, of Raisin, were held last Sunday. A brief service was held at the residence of his brother, Albert Comfort, at noon and the procession then wended its way to the Valley Church where the formal services took place. Rev. David J. Lewis spoke words of comfort to the mourners and the remains were laid to rest in the beautiful grove west of the meeting-house.

The first ball game of the season was held last Monday afternoon. Owing to the recent heavy rains the boys were unable to use the regular diamond on Bills' park, and so utilized the vacant lot back of the Central building. The game was played between the Tecumseh High School and Manchester, being called at 3:30 p. m. The whole nine innings were played, at the close of which the score stood 21 to 14 in favor of the home club. This was very good for a starter.

Our statement in the HERALD of April 26th, that Frank Baxter was Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Georgia was incorrect. He was secretary of the local organization at Athens, Ga. That is a beautiful town about the size of Adrian, and the Y. M. C. A. owns a building of their own worth ten thousand dollars. The secretary is a salaried officer and gives his whole time to the interests of the association. Frank had charge of the gymnasium in the building and trained the 'Varsity' foot-ball team. They believe in the church militant down in that latitude.

"Jane" will be here next Saturday.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

Remains of the Late Senator Stockbridge Entombed at Kalamazoo.

Simple and Impressive Services Mark the Sad Occasion—Congressmen and State Officers in Attendance at the Funeral.

THE LAST SAD RITES.

KALAMAZOO, May 4.—All Michigan was represented here Thursday by mourners of the death of Francis B. Stockbridge who attended the obsequies. The nation at large was also represented by a congressional delegation consisting of Senators Gibson, of Maryland; McMillan, of Michigan; Washburn, of Minnesota, and Cullom, of Illinois, and Representatives Linton, of Saginaw; Aiken, of Flint; Richardson, of Grand Rapids; Thomas, of Allegan; Burrows, of Kalamazoo; Bynum, of Indianapolis, and Payne, of Auburn, N. Y. Ex-Gov. R. A. Alger headed the Detroit delegation of eleven. John T. Rich and the state officers and heads of departments from Lansing, and nearly 200 from Grand Rapids, came by special train and attended the funeral in a body. Ex-Gov. Cyrus G. Luce and ex-Senator Thomas W. Ferry and scores of other distinguished gentlemen were here.

The remains lay in state at the Stockbridge mansion, near Mountain Home cemetery, from 10 to 12 o'clock. They were in an elaborate black casket, on the plate of which was inscribed: "Francis B. Stockbridge, died April 30, 1894, aged 68 years." It rested by the side of a solid bank of American Beauty roses, with a large cluster of lilies at the head. Three large palms rested on the foot and there were wreaths and banks of roses and carnations. Those who called for a last look numbered in the hundreds and were received by T. F. Giddings, J. J. Morse and S. A. Browne. The city's business houses and many of the residences were profusely draped in mourning and business houses were generally closed during the afternoon. The funeral occurred at 4 o'clock at St. Luke's Episcopal church, of which the deceased senator was a vestryman before he removed to Washington. Rev. R. R. Claiborne, the rector, conducted the service, assisted by the surpliced choir of forty-two voices. The church was filled to its capacity, over 1,000 being present. The ceremonies consisted of the regular Episcopal service, without eulogies. The floral decorations were the same as at the home.

The active bearers were all chosen from Orcutt post, G. A. R., and were: Comrades Homer Mauvel, C. F. Foote, J. D. Sumner, H. P. Shutt, George F. Larned, E. A. Crane, Ashley Clapp and A. A. Holcomb. The honorary bearers were: James Monroe, A. J. Mills, H. F. Severens, Dallas Boughman, S. A. Browne, C. S. Dayton, Charles L. Cobb and J. W. Osborn. The service was impressive. Fifty carriages filled with mourners and friends followed the remains to Mountain Home cemetery, where the banks of the grave were covered with evergreens. The congressional party returned to Washington Thursday night.

MICHIGAN WINS.

Representative of Her University Victorious in an Oratorical Contest.

MADISON, Wis., May 7.—The annual contest of the Northern Oratorical league, composed of the universities of Chicago, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Northwestern university and Oberlin college, was held in Liberty hall at the University of Wisconsin Friday night and resulted in a victory for the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin being awarded second place by the judges. The cash prizes were $100 and $50, but it was for college reputation rather than these for which the orators battled. The judges of the contest were ex-Gov. Ira J. Chase, of Indiana, Franklin MacVeagh, of Chicago, Rev. Judson Titsworth, of Milwaukee, President Bradley, of Illinois college, and Prof. T. C. Roney, of the Armour institute. The winning oration was delivered by Frank P. Sadler, a student at the University of Michigan. His subject was "Mirabeau." Mr. Sadler's home is in Springfield, Ill. Alonzo R. Smith, of Sparta, Wis., the representative of Northwestern university, was the winner of second honors. The subject of his oration was "The Mission of the American Scholar."

MADE BY MACHINE.

A Michigan Inventor Revolutionizes Bread-Making Methods.

BENTON HARBOR, May 5.—A resident of this city has invented a machine for making bread that is intended to do away with the use of yeast or setting the dough to rise. Flour and water are poured into the machine and come out loaves of bread light, kneaded and ready for baking. A harmless gas is forced into the dough by heavy pressure and the bread is made to rise in ten minutes. A company is in formation here and a bread factory will be put in operation. This invention will revolutionize the bread making methods of the world.

Congressman Griffen's Misfortune.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Representative Griffen, of Detroit, who was elected to succeed J. Logan Chipman, has for a long time suffered from a defective hearing. Within the past two weeks his trouble has grown so much worse that he is now entirely deaf. He has consulted eminent physicians, but they hold out no hope, and he will be compelled to resign from congress, his friends fear, although serving his first term.

Iron Mountain Mine Starts Up.

IRON MOUNTAIN, May 3.—For the first time in eight months the Chapin mine whistle blew Wednesday night, announcing that the management was ready to resume work at the property idle since last summer. The news had a ten-fold significance to the community burdened since last August with 2,500 people compelled to exist on public charity.

HELPED TO KILL SCHILLING.

Will Alguire Admits Being a Confederate in the Kalamazoo Murder.

KALAMAZOO, May 5.—Will Alguire is in jail here charged with the murder of Louis Schilling in this city last September.

Friday morning at St. Joseph Alguire was arrested by officers there, charged with the crime, the result of admissions made by him to Harry Presley at St. Joseph. Presley told the officers the story. Alguire gave up to Presley a pocketbook and some papers belonging to the murdered man. Alguire admits that he stood by and saw Horace Mansfield cut the butcher's throat, but did not actively assist. To another officer he admitted that he helped hold the old man while Mansfield did the cutting. Officers are after Mansfield, but he cannot be found.

Alguire confronted Messrs. Pressley and Clapp and denied the confession that he had made that he held Schilling while the negro Mansfield cut his throat. He also explained his former yarn about Mansfield and Anna Wood by saying that he lied about them for spite because they induced him to marry Miss Wood. He will be held for a time and probably charged with perjury.

FIRE AT YPSILANTI.

A School Building Burned—Several Scholars Injured—Loss, $40,000.

YPSILANTI, May 4.—Fire broke out in the laboratory of the Union school building Wednesday morning, resulting probably from an explosion of some chemicals, and soon spread to the lower floor. The fire was beyond the control of the city fire company and the Ann Arbor fire company was sent for and reached the scene in just twenty-eight minutes with one team of horses, the distance being nearly 9 miles. School children and teachers became frantic and several jumped out of the windows. Some were bruised, but only one seriously, Olive Collins, who jumped from a second-story window, breaking one leg and seriously injuring her back. The loss on the building is estimated at $30,000 to $40,000, with insurance at $20,400. Loss on contents about $8,000; insurance, $5,250. This is the third time the school has been burned—once in 1857 and the second time in 1878.

PATTON PICKED OUT.

He Is Given the Late Senator Stockbridge's Seat.

The President of the Michigan League of Republican Clubs Is the Choice of Gov. Rich—Sketch of the Career of the New Senator.

HONORED BY THE GOVERNOR.

LANSING, Mich., May 7.—Gov. Rich on Saturday afternoon appointed John Patton, Jr., of Grand Rapids, United States senator to succeed the late Senator Stockbridge. He was notified of his good fortune but a few minutes before the matter was made public. Mr. Patton is an able and successful lawyer, an orator, and a genial and approachable gentleman who is very popular. He comes from a family of marked ability, his father having represented his district in congress two terms, one in the Thirty-seventh congress and again in the Fiftieth.

JOHN PATTON, JR.

Gov. Rich says that aside from Patton's great personal worth he was led to make the appointment because Patton was more generally indorsed than any other candidate and because he came from practically the same section of the state as did Stockbridge. The nomination is generally satisfactory to the party.

The contest finally narrowed down to Mr. Patton and Congressman McCutcheon. The former's winning card was doubtless the appearance in his behalf of Thomas J. O'Brien, John C. Fitzgerald and Charles W. Watkins, all of Grand Rapids, each of whom had been strongly recommended for the position. Patton's opponents were ex-Congressman Belknap, John W. Blodgett, who managed ex-Gov. Luce's campaign against Senator Stockbridge last year, and William Alden Smith, a prominent candidate for the republican congressional nomination in the Fifth district. Their opposition was based upon Patton's alleged lukewarmness toward Belknap's candidacy at the last election.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 6.—John Patton, Jr., appointed to succeed Senator Stockbridge, returned from Lansing late Saturday afternoon, and at night was given an informal reception. The appointment gives general satisfaction. Mr. Patton will be a candidate for election by the legislature next winter. He will go to Washington at once. He said to an interviewer that he stood squarely on the republican platform on the tariff and financial questions.

[John Patton was born at Curwensville, Pa., October 30, 1851, and consequently is a trifle under 44 years of age. He prepared for college at Andover, Mass., and graduated at Yale college with the class of '73, afterwards taking a course at Columbia law school, New York, from which he graduated in 1877. The following year he went to Grand Rapids, where he has since resided as a practicing lawyer. Some years ago he married a daughter of the late Wilder D. Foster, representative in congress for this district in 1873, and two children have blessed the union. Mr. Patton has always taken a deep interest in political affairs and has always been regarded as an able and safe party counselor. In 1881 he was a member of the state central committee. He is an eloquent and forceful speaker and in all state and national campaigns is in much demand as a campaign orator. For two years he was president of the Michigan State Republican league and in that position displayed an executive ability and power of organization which won the highest esteem of the party managers.]

FULLER TO BE WARDEN.

The Supreme Court Awards Him the Office at Ionia.

LANSING, May 5.—The supreme court has handed down a unanimous decision granting a writ of ouster against Warden Parsell, of the Ionia house of correction, in favor of Otis Fuller, of St. Johns, who many months ago was appointed to the place by Gov. Rich. One of the principal contentions of the defense was that the law of 1893 creating the state prison board was defective in that the title of the bill had been amended after it had passed. The court ruled this out.

Creditors Decide to Foreclose.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 5.—The creditors of the Lansing Lumber Company at a meeting here instructed the trustees to take possession of the property and institute foreclosure proceedings under the mortgages. The company failed last fall for $500,000, and it was proposed to work up the timber assets. The burning of the mills in Clare county last winter caused the change in the programme. Creditors to the amount of $260,000 were represented.

Student Held for Stealing a Bicycle.

ANN ARBOR, May 5. — Irving W. Hicks, of Sherman, president of the junior pharmacy class at the university, was bound over to the circuit court Friday on a charge of stealing a bicycle from D. E. Lyon, president of the senior literary class. In default of $500 bail he was sent to jail.

A Banker Retires.

DETROIT, May 4.—John P. Fiske has resigned his presidency and directorship of the Union national bank and P. D. Lockerby has been elected president in his place. Mr. Fiske's liability to this bank is covered by a $16,000 mortgage.

Robbed a Safe.

SAGINAW, May 4.—The safe in St. Clair & Trangott's big grocery store was blown open by burglars early Thursday morning, the 3,500 pounds being blown clear across the office. About $100 and papers were taken.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Mr. Sub Erban: You need not scold Towser. His bark is worse than his bite. Mr. Townley (who has just been bitten) Great Scott! I hope he won't bark.

No other medicine has equalled Hood's Sarsaparilla in the relief it gives in severe cases of dyspepsia, sick headache, etc.

Tommy: Oh, mamma! Jimmy Figgs is going to give me the loveliest dog; just bully! Mamma: Has he seen it, Tommy? Tommy: No'm, but I've seen the pattern.

Try the Magic Dyes, if you want bright, fast colors. Also colors more goods than other dyes.

Little Miss Muggs (proudly): Aunt Mary has a lock of George Washington's hair. It's been in the family for years. Little Miss Freckles: I didn't know any of your ancestors were barbers.

"I can say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood purifier that anyone can find."—Miss Nora Christie, Marcellus, Mich.

As a preventative of sea sickness, to give restful sleep, so difficult to obtain while traveling, Dr. Miles' Nerve Vitalizer has no equal. Always to have it with you as your trip at Orr & Temple's.

Teacher: Now, Harry, in the sentence, "Mary gave Robert five cents," you have parsed the word Mary as feminine gender. How do you make out? Harry: Well, 'cause if she wasn't what the book says she was a dandy.

"Miss Grimley has a wonderful amount of self control." What did Littleno: Why, when I told her I was going abroad to be gone a year, she actually smiled.

PYRAMID PILE CURE.

A New Remedy but the Best in the World—Absolutely Safe and Certain—Even Hopeless Cases.

Physicians Recommend It. Druggists Sell It. Everybody Praises It.

If we could sell one package of Pyramid Pile Cure to every person in America who is troubled with piles and who would gladly give the dollar to be rid of piles, we would have about two million dollars. The only reason we don't sell many packages this way is that we will not be able to get ten million people to try it. But one application will prove its merits and repay the cost of a whole box.

The effect is immediate. Relief comes at once and continued treatment will cure any case, no matter how bad. Pyramid Pile Cure soothes the inflamed surface the instant it touches it, heals it, reduces the swelling and restores the parts into a healthy, active condition. There is no substitute for it. Nothing compares with it.

We have never heard of a single case that it failed to cure; we have letters from thousands that it has cured quickly and completely.

Here are a couple of letters we have received.

From Geo. C. Geick, Owens Mills, Md.: Some time ago I bought a package of Pyramid Pile Cure for my wife who had suffered very much. The first application did her more good than anything she had ever tried. It is just what is claimed for it.

From Richard Loan, Whippleville, Ark.: I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and am entirely pleased and satisfied with the results. It does the work and does it quickly. It does the work and does it take.

The proprietors of the Pyramid Pile Cure could publish columns of testimonial letters, but these are enough to show what it will do in different cases.

All druggists sell Pyramid Pile Cure, or will get it for you. It is sold at 50c per package and made only by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having

Diamond Crystal Salt

instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our Dairy Salt, there's money in it. Address

Of course the "Industrial Armies" have no right to steal trains, says the New Era, but is not the difficulty largely due to bad education? The business of stealing railroads has become an important industry, and the man who can steal a whole railroad is called a "Napoleon of Finance." Now it is a little difficult for a man who has not had the benefit of a college education to understand that it is right to steal a railroad, but wrong to steal a train.—Evening Telegram.

Full Set of Rollers.

Twenty-six medals and diplomas were given by the World's Fair Committee of Awards to the seventeen manufacturers of Harvesting Machinery who exhibited at the Fair. Of these awards William Deering & Co., of Chicago, were given sixteen; only ten being given to all their sixteen competitors. The next highest competitor received six awards.

It contains some things you ought to know. You ought to know that the World's Fair Management asked all manufacturers of Binders and Mowers to take their machines into the grain and grass fields and by their work prove their claims. You ought to know that the manufacturers of McCormick Binders and Mowers promptly notified the World's Fair Committee that they would comply with this reasonable request. You ought to know that various other manufacturers of Binders and Mowers sent representatives to examine the grain and grass fields specified and that these representatives reported to their respective companies that the condition of the crops to be cut was such that ordinary machines could not handle them. You ought to know that none of those manufacturers allowed their machines to go into these tests where they knew the McCormick Binders and Mowers would be at work. You ought to know that the World's Fair Judges said that McCormick Binders that they were easily operated, and that their performance was in all respects thoroughly satisfactory. EXCHANGE COLUMN.

This column is designed as a medium of exchange. It will afford an admirable scheme through which farmers and all other persons can buy, sell or exchange personal property to advantage. If Mr. A. has a horse to sell and wishes a good milch cow let him make his wants known through the exchange column, and the chances are nine out of ten he can make the change desired. Small articles of little value, household furniture, live stock of all kinds, farming utensils, can readily be sold, bought or exchanged by this method at a nominal cost. The rate will be only five cents a line for each insertion, but no notice will be inserted for less than fifteen cents.

Miss Grace Wisner was united in marriage to Mr. Fred Stoutz, Thursday.

Sammy McClure was the guest of Clarence Wisner Saturday, and of Leon Allen Sunday.

E. J. Whelan's young people attended the skating party at Allen Wells, Saturday night.

A letter from Nebraska dated May 7th, says: "We are having a very nice spring, only a little dry; farmers will finish planting corn this week; some finished last week; wheat and rye look well; oats are not so good; the present outlook for corn is good."

A correspondent from the Normal, writes: "As I was crossing the street in front of the Seminary, last Thursday, I looked at the clock as was my usual custom, and on the roof just behind I saw the smoke coming out and at that moment it was discovered that the Seminary, with its walls filled with 300 or 400 children, was on fire; the children were pouring out of doors and the lower windows, and at the upper windows children were screaming for help. All got out in safety, although some fainted and had to be carried out, then they went into the building and saved most of the books and the office books and furniture. When the fire department arrived they carried the hose inside and tried to put out the fire, but the flames gained on them, and the order was given to quit the building, and most reluctantly the people left if I could judge them by myself. A very large crowd had assembled, and every hose of the department was playing on the fire, but to little purpose. The fire broke out near the clock tower, and as the flames leaped up and caught the tower, the clock struck two. The Ann Arbor fire department came over; drove the fire team with the men and the hose wagon full of hose, nearly seven miles in twenty eight minutes, and when they came into Ypsilanti, the horses, with not a dry hair on them, seemed as eager to get to the fire as the firemen. A part of the building was saved, but of course so damaged that contents will be total loss, but the main part and clock tower were burned and probably all will have to be torn down. Cost, $48,000; insured for $42,000.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Mrs. Thomas Lee is on the sick list.

C. L. Samson, of Adrian, was in town last Tuesday on business.

Frank Gibson and A. J. Lee were Detroit visitors last Saturday.

The heavy rain last Tuesday night causes the farmers to take a rest.

Our ball team was disappointed last Saturday by the Adrian team. Consequently we had no game.

We have not heard anything of our new brick and tile yard of late. What has become of the parties?

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed church will meet at the residence of Rev. S. Rederus, Wednesday, next at 2 p. m.

Last Thursday evening occurred the marriage of Arthur Smith and Miss Tina Rupp. The HERALD wishes them a happy and prosperous future.

Frank and Lawrence Brown were lake visitors last Friday and report a good catch, which was about two bushel of fish. The first luck of the season.

Miss Bower, of Ann Arbor, will address the citizens of Britton and vicinity at the K. O. T. M. hall, Monday evening, May 21st, 1894, with a view of organizing a L. O. T. M. Hive in this place. Everyone is invited.

James Underwood has purchased another farm, the one formerly owned by Joseph Daykin. This makes two farms Jim has bought in two years and he says he cannot see any reason for kicking on the hard times. Of course Jim is a prohibitionist and does not talk for the fun of hearing himself.

Our second nine went to Deerfield last Saturday and played the second nine of that place. The following is the score:

Deerfield,	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	2	2	—6
Britton,	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	0	2	—4

The ball game last Wednesday between Lake Ridge and Britton was well attended and the boys all did themselves credit, considering it was the first game of the season. The score was kept down nicely on both sides. The return game will be played Saturday, May 26th, on the Lake Ridge grounds. Following was the score:

Britton	2	2	0	2	1	0	3	0	x	—10
Lk Ridge	1	1	0	0	0	1	2	0	1	— 6

Struck out—Easlick, 6; Warner, 0.

Last Monday evening a citizens meeting was held for the purpose of making arrangements for Decoration Day. The following officers and committees were appointed:

Officer of the Day—Dr. P. B. Hardy.
Committee on Singing—Chairman, W. R. Osgood.
Committee on Wreaths—Chairman, Mrs. F. Brown. A cordial invitation is extended to all ladies to assist in making wreaths.
Committees on Flowers—Chairman Mrs. P. B. Hardy, assisted by Misses Exelby, Saxon, Ackley, Britton, Barrett and Lee and Messrs. Vern Gripton, Walter Gripton, Geo. Clark, F. Dubois, Wm. Larrabee and Chas. Gorham.
Committee on Grounds—Wm. Niveson and Ed. Bachman.
The following is the program of the day:
1:00 o'clock, sharp—Formation into line of Eaton Post, No. 222 and W. R. C. and march to grounds.
1:30 p. m.—Music by choir.
Invocation—Rev. E. Madge.
Music by choir.
Poem—Life's Memories, Wm. Niveson.
Address—H. C. Smith, of Adrian.
Music by Choir.
Benediction—Rev. S. Rederus.
Committees and citizens will drive to Ridgeway cemetery where the ritual work will be delivered and graves decorated.

—After May 15, 1894, my mill will run Saturday's of each week only.
W. R. OSGOOD.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Philo Lossing is visiting friends in this vicinity.

Bowen and Clark shipped a car load of wheat to Adrian this week.

Prof. Chas. Bowerman, of Detroit, spent Sunday with his parents.

H. H. Osgood, of Tecumseh, was in town Friday and Saturday last.

Geo. Winship and wife, of Adrian, spent Sunday at Lewis Winship's.

John Heaney and wife, of Columbus, Ohio, are visiting his parents here.

Geo. Whitmarsh and family, of Palmyra, spent Sunday at Wm. Doty's.

Mrs. Burdie, of Detroit, is a visitor with the family of H. H. Atwell this week.

Art Chase and Jas. Lane were suffering from inflammation of the stomach the first of the week.

Harry Osgood, of Tecumseh, spent Saturday and Sunday with his schoolmate, Willard McIntire.

Dr. Nixon, Maurice Nay and Mr. Batts attended the minstrel show at Tecumseh, given by Co. C.

Guern Kelly and Will Gordon went to Britton last Saturday to see, or take part in a ball game at that place.

Hartman Bros. will open their ice cream parlor, Saturday night, and continue a Saturday evening opening the rest of the season.

L. C. Winship has now no reason to complain of hard times. We understand that in addition to his saw-mill business he has taken an agency for the Page Wire Fence, and on Monday last we saw him bottoming up a ditch for A. D. Macham.

Monday the creamery here began doing the work of two factories. Ridgeway factory having broken its seperator sends its milk here this week. Clover leaf creamery is making both butter and cheese this week, about 7,000 lbs. of milk being used from the combined patronage of Holloway and Ridgeway.

S. W. Farmers' Club.

The club met on the afternoon of Friday, May 4th, at the residence of H. C. Calhoun, in the township of Bridgewater. A number of the village people were in attendance, evidently enjoying the entertainment as well as did the farmers. The day was a lovely one, the landscape very beautiful, with its fresh green hill-slopes and blooming fruit trees, while the spirits of each guest seemed in unison with the surroundings—so much has environment the power to effect our mentality and spirituality.

Our florist, H. L. Rose, kindly furnished Mrs. Calhoun with some fine cut flowers; pansies, petunias and narcissus.

The exercises began with a selection, read by Mrs. Frank Palmer. The benefit to be derived from the C. L. S. C., by the farmer's wife. The pride one's children justly feel when their mother is striving to keep pace with them in study while they are in college, and the satisfaction the parchment, with its numerous seals, affords. Gossips and other such diversions have no allurement for the woman fascinated with the pursuit of history, science and art. One would think, looking upon the columns of the list of the names of C. L. S. C. graduates, that the genus homo is nearly extinct. Forty minutes a day, if persisted in will be sufficient for the required reading. If you cannot belong to a local circle, establish your Chautauqua Corner, and become an individual reader."

Miss Lucy English read an essay from which we give the following extracts: "Progression, the central idea of our day. Our ideas are affected by our ideals. Those things we share with others, afford the most enduring satisfaction. We can never be dilatory, mentally, physically or spiritually, only for periods of rest or needful relaxation, without loss to ourselves. The wind will be active involuntarily, and if we are accumulating knowledge, by judicious reading, helpful conversation and wise experience, we are profiting for all eternity. Napoleon knew better the meaning of success in exile on St. Helena, than when a victor at Marengo. Louis Kossuth could better define freedoom, while in banishment, than as a leader of the Hungarian people.

Two little girls, Elma Short and Vera Brown gave recitations.

At the request of Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun, the Club bestowed the name of "Brookside" upon their home. Now nearly every farm in the club possesses its appellation.

At the May meeting occurs the election of officers for the ensuing year. This election resulted as follows:

President—B. G. English.
1st Vice-Prest.—G. S. Rawson.
2d Vice-Prest.—W. E. Pease.
3d Vice-Prest.—L. M. Merithew.
Secretary—Mrs. J. F. Spafard.
Treasurer—Amariah Hitchcock.
Committee on Program—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spafard and Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Merithew.
Viewing Committee—L. S. Hulbert, H. R. Palmer and Wilbur Short.

The club next adjourned to meet with Mr. and Miss Hitchcock, in the township of Sharon, the first Friday in June.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

"Agueish May" as a New England writer styles it, is with us again.

Little Hazel Mapes is still unable to walk, from the severe burns she received two weeks ago.

Tipton and Pentecost played another game of base ball at Tipton, last Saturday. We have not heard the result.

G. W. Fuller is having a coat of paint applied to his buildings, which adds materially to the neatness and completeness of his place. Douglas Baker, of Wolf Creek, wields the paint brush.

It seems we were in error last week, and that it was Willard Merrill, a nephew of J. S. Pentecost, who ran and stopped Mr. Beekman's runaway team, instead of Mr. Pentecost as we heard at the time.

Mr. E. D. Hendryx is still obliged to use crutches in walking, but the doctor thinks he will soon be able to dispense with them. His many friends will be glad to hear this, as it was feared at one time that he was permanently injured.

It is said that six of the players in a recent ball game were more or less injured, one getting struck on the chest with a ball, others on the head, etc. A base ball game is about as dangerous as a "Donnybrook fair" scrimmage, where every man wields his "blackthorn" stick like a gintleman sure".

If you want a fragrant cup of tea to accompany your crisp radishes and bread and butter, just buy a pound of tea of Elijah Buck, and you will go again when your supply fails. Although he is obliged to live in a wheeled chair, he manages to find as good goods as those who are blessed with all the powers of locomotion.

The Sunday School at Pentecost Hall, (Rev. Williams, Supt.) is increasing in numbers and interest. A Memorial Concert will be held June 3d, and an excellent programme is being prepared for the occasion. Mr. F. Cooley placed everyone under obligations last Sunday, by his efficient aid to the choir. We hope several other young men will kindly be on hand next Sunday, to join in the formation of an orchestra, that shall be a credit to themselves and a benefit to the community.

The official reports show that no baking powder received an award over the Royal at the Chicago World's Fair. The judge of awards on baking powder, Dr. H. W. Wiley, writes that the claim of another company to having received the highest award is false, that no such award was given it. The Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made, and has received the highest award at every fair, wherever in competiton with others.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 17, 1894.

In the opinion of the New Orleans sugar exchange the tariff is a local issue.

Governor Flower seem ambitious to be known as a deformer rather than a reformer.

"Dignified dilatoriness" is now wrestling with the tariff bill in the Senate."

If Gen. Coxey could make the Senate stop long enough to vote on the tariff bill all would be forgiven.

The income tax, its opponents tell us, is a tax on thrift. The tariff is a tax on poverty. Which is preferable?

There is no danger of the present congress ever tackling the good roads question. They can't agree on a simple revenue tariff bill.

The New York Times calls the last Senate tariff bill a "bill of sale." Very well, if you send such men as David B. Hill and Edward Murphy to the Senate, what else can you expect?

Making a tariff bill to please every member of Congress is like editing a paper to please all its readers—rather a difficult task; but that is what "dignified dilatoriness" is trying to do at present.

The people have had paternal legislation long-enough. Give us a little fraternal legislation for a while, something that will accord to every citizen a fair field and no favor, and witness the effect.

One thing at a time and every thing in its proper order. The tariff question should be settled now, for it is now before Congress, but the currency question will be the next great issue demanding a settlement.

The amendments to the tariff bill presented in the Senate last week satisfied the "kickers" apparently, but they produced a new crop of kickers. And now the question is how to conciliate the latest kickers.

A newspaper cannot be run in these days of conflicting interests, to suit the tastes of all its readers. It should be treated as a bill of fare; each individual reader should take what he likes and leave the rest.

The Commonweal army has vacated its camp in Washington and taken up its quarters near the famous Spa spring, at Bladensburg, just over the Maryland line. This is in the vicinity of the historic duelling ground.

With a very few exceptions the opposition to an income tax is inspired by the same influences that oppose a reform of the tariff. Men who have become rich by class legislation are opposed to paying their proportion of national taxation.

The compromise bill agreed upon by the Democrats in the Senate is far from satisfactory to honest revenue reformers, but there should be no factious opposition to its passage. The committee of conference will control the final bill that is to become a law.

Richard Croker, the boss of Tammany Hall, has resigned and will retire to private life and the turf. A crisis has arrived in the affairs of the wigwam and the sachems deem it wise to have a new leader. John McQuade will succeed Croker as high mogul.

The demand for free silver cannot be treated contemptuously. It does not come from mine owners alone, nor from a set of financial cranks, but from the farmers and laboring masses in all sections of the country. Sooner or later Congress will be forced to heed this demand.

The sugar schedule as agreed upon by the Democrats of the Senate—40 per cent. ad valorem on all sugars, both raw and refined, with one-eighth of a cent in addition on refined sugars—returns to the treasury the $43,000,000 to $46,000,000 revenue foolishly lopped off by the McKinley bill with the $10,000,000 bounty substitute which dropped into the pockets of a few sugar planters, and cannot result in any increase in price. The one-eigbt of a cent duty on refined sugars is, however, something choice in the line of pure protection. Refined sugars from abroad never enter the American market, and the duty will be just as lonely as an effective power in revenue as a number more of the protective blessings now on the customs lists.—Philadelphia Times.

Strikes in these times are supremely silly. They can only result in retarding the revival of business and injury to the strikers themselves.

There has been great dissatisfaction in the camp of the "Army of the Commonweal." The men did not take kindly to the idea of being put upon two scant meals a day while Coxey occupied a luxurious suite of rooms at a hotel and enjoyed the best the market afforded; consequently last week was marked by numerous desertions. The men who remain will have to move their camp. The health authorities say they are in danger themselves and that they are endangering the health of the city. It is not probable that another camping place can be secured inside of the city limits. There is plenty of vacant ground, but Coxe will not be able to get it. He still says he intends to remain until Congress either passes or refuses to pass his bills, but he will stay alone if his followers are not better taken care of.

The loan made by the city of Paris the other day was a surprising success. Bids were asked for about fifty million dollars, and the offers made amounted to one hundred times the amount of the desired loan. It was a popular loan, and the dispatches lay stress upon the number of wage earners and salaried men who desired to invest their savings. About the same time offers for a German loan amounted to three times the amount of the loan. The surplus money in Europe looking for a safe investment is evidently as large as in New York and the other large cities here. Surplus labor on the one hand, surplus capital on the other, both anxious for employment, and both idle because they don't find it. This is a curious business condition, and something which this country never experienced before. Unwise legislation is the chief cause of it.

Frank Hurd, of Toledo, is one of the best posted men in the west upon the tariff in all its details. In a recent interview upon the subject he said:

"What about the general average of the bill, as reported by the Senate in the way of reductions?"

"It will be more than 30 per cent less than the rates of the McKinley bill, and I was informed by Senator Voorhees while in Washington that the average reduction was greater in the bill as reported by the Senate committee than in the Wilson bill as it passed the House."

"When will the bill pass the Senate?"

"If it were not for what is called the 'courtesy of the Senate,' the bill ought to pass within the next ten days, but from the best opinion I could gather in Washington it will not pass before the middle of June."

"What will be the effect when it does pass?"

"It will bring to the country and business everywhere such a degree of prosperity that the people will never be satisfied until the last vestige of protection has been eliminated from our tariff system."

The Outlook, Dr. Lyman Abbott's paper, is a very fair minded sheet on the money question; that is, for a paper published within a stone's throw of Wall street. A recent editorial on this subject contains this paragraph which seems to express the real situation very clearly: "We believe that the world's industrial distress is largely due to the demonetization of silver, and the adoption of a gold standard; we believe that the road to prosperity lies through the adoption of gold and silver as a double standard. But it is a serious question whether even so great a country as the United States can adopt a double standard without international agreement—whether the attempt so to do will not make it practically a silver mono-metallic country. But it is also a question whether even the disasters which silver mono-metallism might produce would be greater than the disasters liable to be produced by a continuance of gold mono-metallism. These last are questions on which we are not yet prepared to express an opinion."

Printed matter is being circulated, and all classes of business men, except publishers, are solicited to sign a petition asking Congress to raise the rate of postage on newspapers, periodicals and all kinds of second class matter from 1 to 8 cents per pound. The claim is made that if postage is increased on newspapers, etc., then postage on letters will be reduced to 1 cent each. The men engaged in circulating these petitions have the modesty to ask $10 from every firm or business man who signs the petition. This would make a nice revenue for the circulator of the petitions, but it is singular that intelligent business men should be so easily humbugged. Such a law would be an outrage upon all newspaper publishers, and upon all people sending small parcels through the mails, which would otherwise be sent by express. We venture to say that the present pound rate on second class matter is a direct benefit to ten persons, where a cent letter postage would benefit one person. The most expensive parts of the postal service, like the fast mail trains, subsidized ocean steamships, and free delivery by carrier in cities, are for the sole benefit of the business interests. Newspapers do not complain of this, but there is no reason why the newspapers themselves should be taxed to death for the benefit of other classes.

The Natural Law of Money.

This is the title of a new book by Wm. Brough, which treats of this subject in an able manner.

He has traced the successive steps in the growth of money from the days of barter to the introduction of modern clearing houses and examined monetary principles in their relations to past and present legislation. In the days of much unintelligent discussion of the financial question the publication is a very timely one; and being as it is, compact and concise, should command a wide reading. The closing chapter will be found of especial interest inasmuch as it deals with what the writer calls "The Hoarding Panic of 1893." In his diagnosis of the case there were two panics, the first resulting from the withdrawal of capital from the country and the second the hoarding of paper money. Although he presents no specific for the prevention of similar panics in the future, he hints very plainly at one in these words with which he closes the chapter referred to and the book: "Money is so important a factor in the creation of wealth that until we can have a paper currency with sufficient elasticity not only to respond to legitimate demands in every section of the country, but to return to its issuers for redemption when that demand shall cease we can neither know what the productive powers of the nation are nor can they be developed to their fullest extent. But we shall never have such a currency so long as the national government continues to exercise the function it has assumed of supplying the common medium of exchange." The volume is published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.

"At least," said young Orris Stuffyknees, who has just got back from playing a limited tour, "there is one comfort to be found for members of the profession in these hard times." "What is that?" "Vegetables are far too valuable to be thrown away."

Bi-Metallism in England.

There is to be an international bimetallic conference in London on the second of May. A number of prominent Englishmen have already announced their intention of being present. Among them are Mr. Arthur Balfour, the Conservative leader in the House of Commons, and Mr. David Liderdale, formerly Governor of the Bank of England.

There is no longer any doubt of the growth of sentiment in England in favor of international bi-metallism. The commercial distress of India, reacting on the commerce of England and especially on the cotton spinners of Lancashire, has produced, not a revolution perhaps, but a decided change in English sentiment. It is England that holds the key to the situation.

When it wants the international conference to meet, its invitation will be accepted by the nations of the Latin Union and the United States, and in view of Mr. Balfour's attitude it is more than probable that the invitation will be extended if the Conservatives carry the next general election.

The movement for international bimetallism is gathering strength in Germany, which for more than twenty years has been the stiffest gold monometallic country on the Continent. This is doubtless one important result of the change of sentiment in England. International bimetallism has gained in proportion to the losses of national bimetallism. If the silver men of this country are wise they will bide their time.—N. Y. World.

LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS.

When the sound of creaking cordage
Ceases and the gangway's down,
O'er it troop the folks from Sweden
To a land to them unknown.
Ask what place they want to go to
"Vanta—gota—Minne—sota!"

Smiling girls with yellow hair,
Dash of red in either cheek,
Blue eyed, plump and very fair,
Scarlet lipped, expression meek—
Lord! Since Sweden's sent her quota
I "vanta—gota—Minne—sota!"
—Philip L. Barker in Chicago Record.

WALTZED HER AWAY.

All society was agreed upon one point—that for me there were but two suitable fiances—my cousin Gontran, the duke de Lamia, and the Duke de Courtalin.

I saw him—at the ball of the De Fresnes. He did me the honor to dance three times with me, and I went home absolutely intoxicated with joy. But the joy was of short duration, for the next day he said to his brother, who told his sister, who told me:

"It seems that I am to marry my cousin Marceline. Last evening I was literally thrown into her arms. Out of pure goodness of soul I took pity on the poor little schoolgirl and danced with her three times. But there must be no more of it. I have not yet had enough of life. Besides I know of nothing more ridiculous than marriage between cousins."

But that was not all. He also said to Robert, "I saw her in evening dress last night for the first time, and she is so thin."

That night, after Gabrielle had told me all this, I disrobed before the mirror and studied my poor little shoulders with their great hollows and had a fit of weeping. Mamma came in the middle of it.

"My angel, what is it?" She took me in her arms.

But I could not speak. The tears choked me. "My treasure, you pain me. Speak, dearest."

Then, to reassure her, I managed to say between my sobs: "It is because I am thin, mamma! Gontran, last evening, thought I was so thin!"

Thereupon mamma began to laugh. She told me that at 17 she was much thinner than I, and she assured me very solemnly that I would certainly develop.

That winter of my first season mamma took me to a dozen great affairs, but they were occasions of mourning and sorrow, for Gontran was not there.

He did not want to marry. He even told me so. I did not know then that this was by order of my mother.

One day about 4 o'clock in the afternoon—it was the second day of June—mamma came into my room with a look on her face that was new to me. "My child," she said, "my child."

She had no need to say more. I understood. All the evening before at the Prince de Vearn's M. de Courtalin had been with me, and the next morning his mother had told mamma that her son knew of nothing more beautiful than my face.

Mamma tried to make me listen to reason. If I refused him, I threw away a splendid chance. The Duke de Courtalin was the mark at which all the maternal guns were pointed. Great name, great position, great fortune.

For me, I had but one word to oppose to all these just and proper remarks—Gontran! Gontran! Gontran or the convent, and the most severe convent at that—Carmel.

M. de Courtalin was perfection. I listened to his praise all the afternoon and hated him. The more he was eulogized the more I turned from him. With Gontran I could be quite at my ease, for he never impressed one with his superiority. I knew but little, but my ignorance, compared with his, was erudition.

Mme. de Courtalin had called to ask my hand for her faultless son. I do not know what mamma said to her after my refusal. I only know that I was left for awhile in peace.

And where was Gontran through the long summer? Making a tour of the world very quietly and quite at his ease.

I learned afterward that this also was mamma's doing; that when he was in Japan he had brought me a number of lovely little things, placed in a tiny case that bore my name. The case had been sent to mamma, but I had never seen it.

All that year one name was sounded in my ears—Courtalin, Courtalin, always Courtalin. He had all the virtues under heaven. My determination began to weaken, I say it to my shame.

After all, what advantage there was in being a married woman! Absolute freedom would be accorded me. Then the thought of being a duchess was not displeasing.

All winter mamma displayed perfect taste and exquisite sweetness. She never urged, never tormented me. I know, however, that she said to her friend, Mme. de Nelly: "My dear, she will yield before the 20th of June. It must be."

On that date we left Paris for Aix-les-Bains.

And I did not continue to say no with the savage energy of last year. I only awaited Gontran's return. I knew that he would reach Paris on the 2d or 3d of April. The following day he would certainly come to see us.

And so it happened. He called about 2 o'clock, before mamma had quite completed her toilet. I was alone. I ran to him.

"Ah, Gontran, how happy I am to see you!"

And I kissed him without ceremony. He kissed me in return, was very much affected and began to speak such gentle, kind words that my heart melted. He found me a new creature. I was no longer thin. I had grown taller and fuller.

But just then mamma came in, then papa and then my brother George. An odious conversation regarding the merits of English and French boats followed—how the French boats made better time, how the food on them was so much finer, and so on. It was so enjoyable!

It was not until three days after that we met him again, by accident, but he was no longer himself. He was icy. His good morning was icy; the shake of his hand was icy; his words icy. He was awkward and embarrassed. He quickly lost us in the crowd and reappeared no more.

I returned to throw myself once more into the arms of my mother and cry out, "Yes; I shall marry De Courtalin."

How many times between that and the 17th of May did I repeat the operation! It came to be a settled thing that no sooner did mamma see me appear than she mechanically opened her arms to receive her daughter, crying, "Yes; I will marry Courtalin," and soon after, "No; I will not!" But the "I will not!" became more and more rare.

M. de Courtalin was a model of tact, of kindness and of resignation. He waited, always in black, always buttoned, with inexhaustible patience. Mamma was invariably engaged with Mme. de Courtalin.

At last the 17th of May arrived. It was tacitly understood that upon that evening I would say yes to the patient lover, and the engagement would be formally announced before all the world. I was restless all day and glad when 11 o'clock in the evening found mamma and me at the home of Mme. de Vermieux, who was giving a great ball.

As I entered I became suddenly aware that I was the center of attraction. A line had formed itself on either side, and little ohs! of surprise and ahs! of admiration went deep into my heart.

M. de Courtalin came up to us. He wanted to ask my hand for all the waltzes, for all the quadrilles, for all the evening, for all my life.

I answered: "Later on. Presently. I feel a little fatigued."

My eyes roamed listlessly over the ball room and perceived, with a start, two other eyes, fixed, settled upon me—two eyes that I knew well, but found it difficult to recognize, so big had they grown in that concentrated, wondering look.

Suddenly their owner arose and turned toward me. A glance aside showed me Courtalin slowly and laboriously making his way toward me from another corner. My cousin looked at the same time and saw him.

Then it became a race between the two men. Gontran intrepidly cut through all the waltzers, but he reached me before Courtalin. He came up to me precipitately. He caught my hand; he put his arm about me.

We danced gayly, wildly, furiously. What a waltz! He said to me: "I love you; I love you! You are grace and beauty itself. There is not another woman here half so lovely! And it is I who shall marry you! Do you hear? I, and none other!"

"Ah, my dear, if you had not come tonight, my engagement to M. de Courtalin would have been officially announced tomorrow."

"Yes, but I have come, and I am here holding you fast. I have discovered that there is not another woman like you. I love you!"

"Slower, slower, I pray you. I am falling. Everything is turning around. Stop!"

"No, no; we shall not stop. If we stop, your mother will stop us, and I have more to say to you—much more. Swear that you will be my wife."

"Yes; I swear it. But enough—enough"——

He held me so tightly, and his face was pressed so close to my face, his lips so close to mine, that I grew suddenly faint and slipped down into his arms.

The next day our engagement was announced. The waltz had created a scandal. It was imperative.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Story Lincoln Told Grant.

Chronologically the talk had come to Grant's journey east to assume general command and his first meeting with Lincoln. "Did he give you his impression of Lincoln when he returned from that interview?" I asked.

"Not exactly," answered Colonel Grant. "You see, I was with him at the time."

"In Washington?"

"Yes. In Washington and in the White House, with him and Lincoln."

"Is it true that Lincoln quoted a story about Captain Bob Shorfy and the Mackerel brigade from the Orpheus C. Kerr papers to your father at that meeting?" I asked.

"Very likely, though I don't remember. The story that I do remember hearing him tell my father that day was about Jocko. Jocko was the commander of an army of monkeys in a monkey war, and he was always sure that if his tail was a little longer he could end the monkey war. So he kept asking the authorities of the monkey republic for more of a tail. They got other monkey tails and spliced them on his. His spliced tail got too long to drag after him, and they wound it around his body. Still he wanted more, and they wound his spliced tail about his shoulders. Finally it got so heavy that it broke his back. Mr. Lincoln applied the story to the cases of generals who were always calling for more men and never did anything with them."—McClure's Magazine.

Shrubs For Shady Places.

The fragrant bush honeysuckle does finely in such a place. The flowering raspberry grows in the greatest abundance wild in hollow and moderately damp places in woods. Snowberry and red Indian currant bushes do nicely in shady places; so do common privets. Most all kinds of trailing honeysuckles thrive in the shade so far as growing well is concerned; so do trailing roses like Wichuraiana nitida and lucida grow in the shade. In dry, somewhat shady ravines barberry bushes, sweet fern and wax myrtle are at home, and in the better ground mahonia shrub, yellow root and evergreen euonymus should thrive. Then there are mountain laurel, wild rhododendrons, blueberry and upland huckleberry bushes, maple leaved viburnum and lots of others.

SOLID VESTIBULED TRAINS From CINCINNATI and the NORTH to CHATTANOOGA LEXINGTON BIRMINGHAM NEW ORLEANS ATLANTA JACKSONVILLE VIA THE QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

W. C. RINEARSON, G. P. A., Cincinnati, O.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages, has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DYSPEPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you. It will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

NOTES FROM ALBION COLLEGE.

Our new paper, "The Boome ng," is making things hum. Instead of being a bi-weekly, as we stated in our last letter, the racy little "Boomerang" appears twice a week. Its editor is a college man of the right stamp, his love for Alma Mater is strong, and through his efforts new life and impetus has been infused into all departments of college life. He believes in strong college spirit, in that feeling which binds men of the same college with peculiar ties, the strength of which cannot be measured—only felt. The Boomerang has for several weeks been agitating the adoption of a distinctive college costume, to be worn on all occasions, and which might tend to bind the students nearer together and to increase college spirit. The classic Oxford cap and gown will probably be adopted next fall.

The base ball team have been doing good work for several weeks past. On May 5th they played at Notre Dame University, Ind., at which place all the Universities of the northwest have met their Waterloo, and held the team of the Dame down to three scores. Score, 3 to 1, in favor of Notre Dame.

Olivet College, about twenty miles from Albion, has always been her rival. Great interest has always been manifested in the athletic contests which have taken place between Albion and other colleges and universities, but when any contest takes place between Albion and Olivet, excitement runs high on account of this rivalry which exists between the two institutions. Albion's game with Olivet, on Saturday, May 12th, resulting in a victory for Albion, caused the greatest demonstration that has occurred in several years. The news of the victory was received over the telephone at about 7 o'clock, and when the score was bulletined on the campus, the crowd, restless with suspense, which had surrounded the bulletin board, gave vent to their exultant feelings. Again and again the college yell rang out loud and clear. The unusual racket soon had its desired effect. Groups of students, suspecting the cause, hastened to the campus. The crowd increased. Still they come. Scouts were sent into the highways and hedges to find the stragglers and to gather reinforcements. The crowd became a mob. Then a single order is given to each Albion son. Presto! What a change. In an instant the mob disperses—every man glides out into the deepening twilight in a different direction. Let us wait. Five minutes elapse. Spectre figures appear dimly in different directions. They draw nearer. Your heart flutters. In a moment it is with you, that same mob, only each man now wears a night gown. The mob organizes. Torches are procured. Nearly all of the members of the college band are on hand with their instruments and attired in their picturesque neglige toilets, and with a forty-piece brass band at their head discoursing sweet melody, the spook parade begins. The torches illuminating dimly the ghastly forms of the spectres renders the scene deathlike indeed, while the band's "Lam her again, dear Sally," accompanied by fish horns, tin pans, and every conceivable noise, aids considerably to make the night hideous. The janitor comes upon the scene, expostulates with the boys, threatens to tell the doctor upon his return, declares that such a sight and such a racket "is enough to make a man hate his grandmother," but all in vain. The march commences. Down the avenue they go. They strike Main street. Halting in the most central part of the city, the band group together in the center, while two hundred wild yelling ghosts perform a march around a circle to the doleful strains of the dead march from Saul. Then they go to meet the victorious team. The team have driven home in wagons. The horses are quickly unhitched, the wagons taken in tow, and they march back to the campus. Another circle is formed and the various members of the team are compelled to make speeches and one by one they are shot again and again, up into the air, with a force generated by forty vigorous arms, which catch them, though none to gently, as they descend. The mob finally dispersed and each man went home to pleasant dreams of ghosts and spooks, and one giddy Freshman is said to have given the college yell and hoarsely though enthusiastically screamed "Vive la Albion" in his sleep.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 15, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 16 will be ready for distribution to-morrow.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in twelve parts, containing 20 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enamelled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. No 2 is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 20 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents, to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon, will receive one of these patterns free. Any other pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. Full particulars sent by E. Fosey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile Ala.

Pleasing for Women.

The womanly side of Queen Victoria is pictured exceedingly well—and appropriately, too, in this the month of her seventy-fifth birthday—in an article on "The Womanly Side of Victoria," which Arthur Warren contributes to the May issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. Among the pictures in the article, those showing the Queen at breakfast and in her pony carriage, are interesting and new. Frank R. Stockton gives two more of "Pomona's" characteristic letters, showing the heroine of "Rudder Grange" in various adventures in her quest for a social boom among the English aristocracy. Mr. Howell's literary biography under the title of "My Literary Passions" holds the interest surprisingly well. The editor questions whether all this clamor about this being "woman's century" is wise. The biography of the number consists of sketches with portraits, of Mrs. Edward Everett Hale, the wife of the famous preacher-author, and of Miss Nancy Bailey, the wonderful woman indexer of England. Altogether this May issue is singularly attractive and worth many times its modest price of ten cents. Published by The Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, for ten cents per number and one dollar per year.

Important to Music Lovers.

Brainard's Musical World for May is out, filled with beautiful new music and valuable musical reading. To enable all lovers of music to become acquainted with this standard musical monthly, the publishers offer, during this month only, to send the World to any address for three months, on trial, for 25 cents, cash or stamps. These numbers will contain about $5.00 worth of choice new music. Do not fail to take advantage of this liberal offer. Address The S. Brainard's Sons Co., Chicago.

A few sheep have been sheared in this section, but as yet there is no wool offered in the market. Frensdorf & Son report that prices will open at 8 to 12 cents for unwashed and 12 to 18 cents for washed.—Hudson Post.

Question:—Will it pay the average farmer to build silos?

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

OVER THE RIVER.

William S. Comfort was born in Raisin, Lenawee county, Michigan, January 21, 1858, and lived in that township all his life. He attended the district school in his youth and was afterwards a student at Mt. Pleasant boarding school in Ohio and at Raisin Valley Seminary, where he formed many friendships that will last beyond the grave. He devoted his early manhood to farming and in 1884 he purchased from his father the brick and tile yard in Raisin which he has since conducted. Being of an ambitious turn of mind he was anxious to step up higher, and in the fall of 1892 he entered the Detroit Medical College and was recognized as one of the most promising students in that institution.

On Tuesday, April 24th, he submitted to a surgical operation for a slight ailment, from which he anticipated no trouble, but to the surprise of the physicians it resulted fatally. The remains were brought home at once and the funeral obsequies were held on Sunday, May 6th, at the Valley church, Rev David J. Lewis officiating, assisted by Mary C. Wood. He leaves a father, Elwood Comfort; three brothers, Samuel E., Albert A. and Edward W., and one sister, Sarah S., to mourn his untimely demise.

The deceased was a birthright member of the Society of Friends, and had always been a devoted adherent to that church. He had served for several years on the Board of Trustees of Raisin Valley Seminary and was treasurer of the board until last fall. He was a young man of religious inclinations, genial disposition, strict business integrity, of the most steadfast fidelity to family and friends, respected and beloved by all who knew him. It is hard to reconcile ourselves to the edict of Providence, when such a brilliant and promising life is so suddenly blotted out. We can only draw consolation from him who spake these words: "Thy will, not mine be done." He leaves a legacy of a beautiful life to mourning father, brothers and sister at home, and goes to join his sainted mother on the other shore.

GONE TO REST.

Edwin Brooks Rose was born in Clinton, June 7th, 1844. His early life was similar to that of most boys in a country village. He attended school and afterwards clerked in his father's store until he was 25 years old, when he began his commercial life. For a few years he traveled for A. B. Copeland and Vail & Crane, selling crackers; he was then with Phelps & Brace, wholesale grocers, for a time. In 1882 he entered into partnership with a Mr. Johnson, under the firm name of Rose & Johnson, and engaged in manufacturing the easy wagon geer. In 1885 he sold his interest in this concern and again went on the road for the Kennedy Baking Co., of Chicago. Six years ago he suffered a stock of paralysis, and since then he has remained in Clinton. Two years ago he opened the Hotel Edrose, but his health soon failed, and he rented it to Ed A. Clark. For the past few weeks he had been gradually failing and realized himself that the final summons had come. At two o'clock on the morning of the 10th he peacefully crossed over the river. He leaves a widow and two children, his mother and sister Mrs. Emma Light, of Chicago, and friends without number to mourn his early death. His father and twin brother Edgar preceded him to the better land. Two years ago he was elected President of the village and served one term to excellent acceptance. He had sung in the Episcopal choir for many years. The funeral services were held at the Episcopal church, Friday afternoon. The stores were all closed during the services, as a mark of respect to the departed, and the village council attended in a body. The floral tribute from the Ladies' Working Society of St. John's Church was very beautiful, being composed of fifty roses, one for each year of his age.

The deceased was a genial, whole souled man, one of nature's noblemen, who made friends with every man he knew. But that kindly hand is now at rest, that musical voice is hushed, that generous heart has ceased to beat. His mortal remains now slumber in our beautiful cemetery, and the immortal spark of life has ascended to God who gave it.

Small Talk About Business.

By A. E. Rice. A banker's business hints for men and women. Published by Fremont Publishing Co., Fremont, Ohio, 70 pages. Paper 40, cloth 75 cents, by mail, post paid. Descriptive pamphlets free. This book, as its name indicates, is a talk about business; a banker's talks to men and women about the common, every-day business affairs of life. ARE YOU GETTING DEAF?

The Following Explains Why, and Shows the Remedy.

Mr. W. D. Stokes, Baton Rogue, La., writes: I had chronic catarrh very badly, noise in the ears, and nearly deaf. I used your Pe-ru-na according to directions, and am now well; can hear the tick of a watch ten feet. Your Pe-ru-na is a wonderful medicine.

Catarrhal deafness is always due to catarrh of the throat passing up through the eustachian tubes to the middle ear. The catarrh in rare cases originates in and remains confined to the middle ear. The symptoms are: Roaring, cracking, cracking, buzzing in ears, with gradually increasing difficulty in hearing. If not cured the hearing will be entirely destroyed. When the case has not gone too far before the treatment is begun Pe-ru-na will cure every case. It is only after the catarrh has destroyed portions of the middle ear that Pe-ru-na fails to cure. All such cases should write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for further advice.

A book on la grippe, coughs, colds, catarrh, etc., will be sent free to any address by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

The Clinton woolen mill is now so crowded with orders that they have to run overtime.

The farmers are busy planting corn, and many of them anticipate a better average of income than they have realized for some years.

Remarked an Adrian man: "Our able Protestant ministers have expended much eloquence against the saloons, but altogether they have failed to accomplish such practical results as has one Catholic priest, Father O'Reily, in his crusade against Sunday saloonism."

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

J. P. Bills was in Adrian last Monday on business.

Chas. Burridge went to Adrian Monday on business.

Art Tribou, of Detroit, spent Sunday with the old home.

The "Jane" troupe played at Adrian Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Ide, of Detroit, were here Sunday and Monday.

Mrs. Stitt, of Evans Lake, was visiting Tecumseh friends last week.

Landlord Patterson had an extra large company at dinner last Sunday.

Mr. Kirchgessner's new store has been connected with the water-works.

Willis Harton, of Brooklyn, was in town Monday, having come down on his wheel.

The summer excursion schedule will be inaugurated on the Mackinaw next Monday.

Justice Burridge will spend two or three days at Devil's Lake this week to do the fishing.

Editor Mat Blosser, of Manchester, was in town Tuesday forenoon and gave the HERALD a call.

The Hudson Post issued a double sheet last week. Business must be booming on the western border.

W. Clayton is looking after his interests in Northern Michigan this week. Went to Alpena Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. VanTuyle, of Adrian, came down Saturday evening to attend the "Jane" entertainment.

Miss. Redfield, Will Colvin, Charles Hall and Geo. W. Parson's, of Adrian, were in town Saturday evening to attend the performance of "Jane."

We understand that Miss Loana Hudson has been invited to remain another year in the Traverse City schools. Next year will be her fourth year there.

Will Ross is doing an extra good job on the foundation walls of the Masonic Temple block. They will probably be completed by next Sunday night.

Temple, McClure & Co., have taken the contract to furnish all the lumber and finished work of every description for the new Masonic Temple block.

The farmers are very busy putting in their spring crops. The season is opening most auspiciously for them. The prospects are good for abundant corps of all kinds.

The village assessors will meet at the Council Building May 22. 23, 28 and 29, to review their assessment roll. All persons, who may desire, can then have an opportunity of examining the roll.

Editor Kempton, of the Addison Courier, paid the HERALD a flying call Monday. He was here about half an hour between trains on his way home from Adrian, where he delivered an address before the Epworth League on Sunday evening.

The Tecumseh Coal and Lumber Co., with a capital of Ten Thousand dollars filed articles of association with the Secretary of State. The new firm, we understand, is the successor of the Temperance Mfg. Co., and will use the same dry kiln and planing mill. They have a good building well equipped with late styles of machinery and ought to work up a good trade.

The company playing the popular society comedy "Jane" were at Tecumseh Saturday night, and a company of Adrian people drove over to see the production. They report favorably, and our people can expect to see something out of the ordinary to-night. Miss Lucie Couthoui, who appears as Jane, is well known here, having been at one time a sort of protege of the late Mrs. Hannah Geddes, and has met many of the people in a social way at her home. She was selected as the reciter of "The Discovery of Columbus," at the World's Fair a year ago, and has since then been a success in dramatics. We trust she will receive a full house this evening.—Evening Telegram.

Mrs. Dr. Vail spent last Friday in Adrian.

Jay Morse has taken a job in the table factory.

Harry Bosford has gone to Blissfield to work.

Prof. Drake, of Ridgeway, was in town Saturday.

Dr. J. L. Tuttle, of Clinton, was in town Saturday.

Lucius Lilley took a business trip to Toledo yesterday.

Col. Fenn, of Manchester, was in town on business Tuesday.

Rev. D. H. Ramsdell, of Clinton, was in town Monday last.

Prof. Daniels, of Clinton, was in town Tuesday to visit friends.

Will Baldwin, of Adrian, was a Tecumseh visitor last Sunday.

Superviser Elliott and family spent Sunday with friends in Macon.

Bert Myers, of Nashville, Tenn., is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Mrs. H. J. Williams, of Adrian, is the guest of D. L. Roger's family this week.

Lewellyn Sisson, of Deerfield, is calling on old friends in this vicinity this week.

The C. E. Society give a cob web social at the Presbyterian church this evening.

Geo. Berger, manager of Wesley's Tecumseh store, spent last Sunday in Adrian.

Mr. & Mrs. Chas. Ives returned home last week from their winter's sojourn in Colorado.

J. H. Heck went to South Bend last week for a few days' stay with old acquaintances.

Prof. Kellogg has bought a lot south of Capt. Chilson's, and has begun the erection of a new dwelling house thereon.

H. E. Stout has moved his old house backwards a few rods and work upon the foundation of his new building has begun.

A bouncing ten pound boy arrived at the home of Rev. C. M. Brown last Thursday. Mother and child are both doing well, and the pastor of course is happy.

Geo. Matteson is doing some very fine jobs of painting and paper hanging this spring. He has so many orders on hand that he has been compelled to employ assistance.

S. W. Bordine, S. P. Hosmer and W. H. Hayden went to Hastings Tuesday evening to attend the State Firemens' Convention, which is in session there yesterday and to-day.

Mrs. Wells Goheen, who submitted to a surgical operation last week, continued to fail until death came to her relief. The funeral services were held last Thursday and were largely attended.

M. E. Conklin is in the field with the old reliable Walter A. Wood Harvesting machinery, and he intends to sell more machines this season than ever. Farmers should consult his new announcement which appears this week.

Wm Delamater was in town yesterday shaking hands with his old Tecumseh acquaintances. He is now in the the employ of Prof. H. Hopkins, assisting in his open air concerts. William is a fine ballad singer. They will be on our street to-night.

Quite a lively law suit took place last Tuesday before Justice Frazier, wherein Alonzo Sisson was plaintiff and John Richard and James Clarkson were defendants. The suit was brought for damages for the violation of an alleged contract. It was a jury trial and the verdict was no cause of action.

Next Saturday evening the members of Golden Rod Chapter at Clinton will give a supper and entertainment. Refreshments will be served at the usual supper hour to be followed by a very fine literary program. We presume that several members of the Tecumseh Eastern Star lodge will attend. Let us turn out and give our Clinton friends a lift.

Ed. Kirchgessner moved into his new store last Monday and he is getting settled as fast as possible. It will make an elegant store for his business. We believe it is the largest single store room in town, with one exception. The wall show cases are ranged along the west side, and the shelving for books cover the entire east wall. The counter show cases are of the latest pattern and will contain an immense stock of watches and costly jewelry. Mr. Kirchgessner is now very nicely fixed to push business, and his friends will all wish him that measure of success which his merits deserve.

The charming farce Comedy, "Jane," was presented to a good sized audience at Sutton's opera house last Saturday evening, and to say that it was a thoroughly satisfied audience would be drawing it very mild. The play is filled with the most comical situations, while the dialogue is humerous and witty in the highest degree. As a specimen of standard high comedy the performance has never been surpassed in Tecumseh. The curtain raiser was "The Violin Maker," which was finely rendered and put the audience in excellent humor. The comedy itself was carried by a very capable company. Jessie Couthoui acted "Jane," the leading role, to perfection and Mr. Adelman was an admirable second, while the other members of the company were all equal to their parts. If Jane should ever favor Tecumseh with another visit, she will be greeted with a rousing house.

John Hughes, of Britton, was in Tecumseh last Tuesday on business.

Misses Mammie Fletcher and Nellie Banister were the guests of Miss Gertrude Ford, over Sunday.

B. S. Scudder, of Macon, announces a special sale for next Saturday. Read his card for full particulars.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Silvers, of Clinton, were the guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. McNeil, over Sunday.

Mrs. Dr. Hurd, of Tuscola, Ill., mother of Mrs. Chas. M. Brown is expected here next week for an indefinite stay.

House painting has become almost an epidemic this spring. Levi Hayden, Geo. Merritt and L. I. Bidwell are the latest cases reported.

Prof. Hopkins, the celebrated medicine man of Hillsdale, was in town Tuesday and gave a free concert on the streets in the evening.

Mr. John Beland and family, of Petersburgh, visited in the vicinity of Tecumseh from Saturday until Monday, visiting his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. John Wyrill over Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith gave a party to a large number of their friends last Monday evening. The guests were most hospitably entertained and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

Henry Lancaster, proprietor of the Lancaster House in Clinton, was in town Tuesday. Henry's visits to Tecumseh are not very frequent, his whole attention being given to his hotel.

Albert Kniffin, of Britton, has purchased a French Coach horse, which is doubtless the best heavy draft horse ever brought to this section. We call attention to Mr. Kniffin's new card next week.

Rev. J. P. Varner, of the Methodist church will have for his topic next Sunday evening, the seventh commandment. Subject: Adultery. He asks the people of his congregation to bring their bibles with them at that time.

A new time card will take effect on the C. J. & M. road next Sunday, May 20th. There are several changes. Train No. 21 East will go at 4:48 p. m.; train 23 East at 11:09 a. m., train 22 west at 9:06 a. m. The night train west is not changed.

Thos. O'Neal, manager of the 'Jane' troupe favored the HERALD with a friendly call Saturday. He says the company has played to good houses during the entire past season, which shows that troupes deserving patronage generally secure it.

Tecumseh was well represented at the circuit court last week. The case of Geiger & Sons vs. C. F. Patterson, Frank Avery and others, which was appealed fron Justice Westerman's court, was taken from the jury by the court and decided in favor of the defendants. The case of the Globe Casket Co., vs. Isaac C. Wolcott was tried before a jury, and a verdict rendered for the defense. W. C. Burridge appeared for the defense in both of theso suits.

Mrs. Jennie L. Avery accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hanley, attended the exective meeting of Lenawee Co. Association of the G. A. R. at Adrian, Wednesday. It was voted to hold the next reunion at Tecumseh, June 21st. A basket picnic dinner will be served. Committee on arrangements—Comrades Sweet, VanTyne and Hanley. Executive Committee—Comrades Shull and Stevens and Mrs. Avery.

The Tecumseh Chapter of the Epworth League held its fourth anniversary last Friday evening. The exercises consisted in songs, recitations and select readings. The League has nearly doubled its membership within the last year, having now about one hundred ane twenty-five members. Recently a Junior League has been organized with a membership of forty. It includes only children under twelve years old.

The Michigan crop report for May 1st. shows that growing wheat made excellent progress in April, and the general average at present is 90 per cent. of a full crop. The prospect for an average crop of apples is good. Timothy and June grass meadows are in prime condition. The statement that they never looked better at this time of year occurs frequently in correspondents' notes. Clover that was seeded last year promises an average crop, but old clover is about all destroyed, probably in most cases by the clover root borer.

Last Sunday afternoon about one o'clock Horace B. Eaton's fine dwelling house about one mile east of the village was destroyed by fire. His wife went home after church to prepare the dinner, while Mr. Eaton and the children remained to Sunday school. About one o'clock they started for home and when opposite J. D. Shull's farm Mr. Eaton saw in the distance that the wind mill on his place was in flames. He drove home as fast as possible, but the house was beyond saving when he arrived. The neighbors were on hand promptly, but the fire spread so rapidly that only a small portion of the contents of the lower story could be saved. Not an article in the second story was taken out. Most of the family lost all their clothing except the suits they had on. The fire caught in some way from the gasoline stove in the summer kitchen. After starting the dinner Mrs. Eaton went into another part of the house and upon returning to the kitchen found it all in flames. The total loss will probably reach $4000, of which $1800 is covered by insurance. The family have moved back into the old homestead on the town line road in Raisin.

Hugh O'Donnell, the man who led the Homestead strike, has been with Coxey's army from the day it left Massillon, as a newspaper correspondent. He says of the movement: "I have only two sentiments regarding it. One is of pity for the deluded devils who have been induced to join it and the other of contempt for Coxey and Brown."

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE.

Suicide of a Watchman in a Saginaw Store.

He Labored Under the Misapprehension That He Was Suspected of Complicity in the Recent Robbery of a Vault.

COULDN'T ENDURE SUSPICION.

SAGINAW, May 14.—The loss of all the books and accounts of the wealthy Wells Store Mercantile company, followed by the disappearance from their vaults of $500,000 of railroad bonds and the arrest of a popular young society man in their employ named Parsons, was followed Saturday by the suicide of the night watchman, Charles Davis. He was found hanging Saturday morning from a rope in a second floor room of the big store. A bullet wound was in his head and a revolver on the floor. He evidently stood on a barrel, with a rope in place, and fired the fatal shot. He left a letter for a member of the firm, saying he could not bear to be suspected of the robbery of the vault. The firm says he never was suspected. He had been with the firm twenty years.

SHOULD WIN GAMES.

The Michigan University's Baseball Team a Strong One.

ANN ARBOR, May 14.—The baseball team of the University of Michigan leaves Ann Arbor the evening of May 17 on its annual eastern trip. The following games will be played: Oberlin, May 18, at Oberlin; University of Vermont, May 19, at Burlington; Dartmouth, May 21, at Hanover; Harvard, May 22, at Cambridge; Brown, May 23, at Providence; Princeton, May 24, at Princeton; Pennsylvania, May 25, at Philadelphia; Cornell, May 26, at Ithaca.

The University of Michigan is recognized by eastern college nines as a worthy antagonist. In 1891 Michigan gained a brilliant victory over Harvard; score, 4 to 3. Codd outpitched Bates. The following year Yale was taken into camp to the tune of 3 to 2. Pitcher Codd was in the box for the yellow and blue, while both Bowers and Case officiated for the blue. Brown, Cornell, Wesleyan, Lafayette, etc., have been downed by the western champions.

This year's Michigan team has been playing winning ball. Its southern trip in the spring was marred by only one defeat. In the game against Northwestern Griffith was hit freely, which indicates that the U. of M. team is strong at the bat, as he is one of the most effective pitchers on the college diamond. The team is under the management of Capt. Shields, a capital batter, base-runner and fielder. It is made up as follows:

DEATH OF A JURIST.

Judge Morris, of Monroe, Passes Away—His Career.

MONROE, May 13.—Judge Gouverneur Morris, a lineal descendant of Gouverneur Morris, of constitutional fame, died at his home here Saturday after a long illness. He was born in Vermont February 1, 1809, and was educated at Dartmouth college and the Cincinnati law school. Judge Morris at various times was elected by the democrats to fill the following offices: Supervisor, city treasurer, county treasurer, alderman, member of the school board, circuit court commissioner and judge of probate. He was also the first judge of the Twenty-second judicial circuit composed of Monroe and Washtenaw counties.

Want More Rigid Truancy Laws.

LANSING, May 12.—The Michigan association of superintendents of city schools at the annual meeting here appointed a committee to secure the enactment of more rigid truancy laws and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: A. D. Whitney, of Saginaw, president; Miss M. E. Coffin, of Detroit, vice president; D. McKenzie, of Muskegon, secretary and treasurer. The next annual meeting will be held in Detroit.

Eclectics Choose Officers.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 11.—The annual convention of the Michigan Eclectic Physicians' and Surgeons' association closed with the election of the following officers: President, C. Edson Covey, Port Huron; vice presidents, E. E. Bronson, Ganges; E. E. Curtis, Saginaw; H. C. Maynard, Hartford; secretary, Z. L. Baldwin, Lawrence; treasurer, John Lamoreaux, Lansing. The next meeting will be held in Lansing.

Relieved by Death.

ADRIAN, May 10.—A most peculiar case, physicians say, was that of Mrs. Mary Meddick, who has just died here, aged 52 years. Starting in with muscular rheumatism, her disease developed into an ossifying process, extending to her whole body. For seven years she was bedridden, and she has lain in one position three years.

Purses for Detroit Races.

LANSING, May 10.—The executive committee of the State Agricultural society has appropriated $5,000 for purses in the horse races given in connection with the state fair at Detroit next September. The races will be run September 15 to 21. Eugene Fifield, of Bay City, is superintendent of the speed department.

Civil Engineer Drowns Himself.

MENOMINEE, May 14.—The body of Lars Larson, a civil engineer who has been missing from his home in this city since April 27, was found Sunday in the bay. He had threatened to drown himself several times. He was 50 years old.

Discovered a Band of Juvenile Thieves.

BAY CITY, May 11.—The police have unearthed a gang of juvenile thieves in the Eighth ward among Polish swill gatherers. They found bicycles, tricycles, lawn mowers, hand sleds, lap robes and that class of goods in profusion.

INTERESTING PARAGRAPHS.

Newsy Notes from Various Parts of the State.

Mrs. Stockbridge will continue to reside in Washington.

Willie Brown, aged 6 years, fell into the river at Tawas City and was drowned.

Headgear of the style known as yachting caps is now worn by the police of Traverse City.

The annual meeting of the State Pioneers' association will be held in Lansing June 6 and 7.

Labor day will be celebrated with appropriate ceremonies by the Central Labor union at Kalamazoo.

George Munger, the man who captured Jefferson Davis, has been appointed village marshal of Marcellus.

Alfred Jansen, a tailor of Grand Rapids, was run over by a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy train at Canton, Ill., and instantly killed.

Cyrus Mendenhall, of Oxford, Oakland county, has been appointed chaplain of the state house of correction at Ionia to succeed A. J. Eldred.

A horse belonging to Herbert Tyson, of Kalamazoo, ran away. His two little girls were thrown out of the buggy and seriously injured. One may die.

The city councils at St. Joseph and Benton Harbor have empowered health officers to inspect all lake vessels suspected of having smallpox on board.

Little Frances, the 2-year-old daughter of Clarence Crandall, of Luther, found a bottle of carbolic acid and drank its contents. She died in great agony.

George W. Nichols, a prominent lawyer and real estate dealer of Battle Creek, died very suddenly from the effects of an operation. Deceased was 47 years of age.

Lightning struck a schoolhouse in Prairie Ronde, near Kalamazoo, stunning six children. C. E. Fouckboner's daughter had her shoe and stocking torn off and was badly blistered.

Kalamazoo lays claim to the title of the "Convention City." Within a few weeks conventions have been held there of six different organizations, and five are being held there this week.

The wagon shop and planing mill, at Fairgrove, owned by William H. Mitchell, burned with all its contents. A stock of farm implements and carriages were also burned. The total loss will be $3,000, with no insurance.

Dr. W. H. Nelson, of Paw Paw, has commenced suit against the Chicago & West Michigan railroad for injuries sustained November last while driving across their track at Hartford. He was struck by a train and badly hurt. He claims $10,000.

CAUGHT AFTER TWO YEARS.

Youthful Elopers Are Found and Arrested at Frankfort.

LOOMIS, May 13.—In November, 1893, Henry Cole ran away with Minnie, his 13-year-old cousin. He cut off her hair and dressed her in boy's clothes, and the pair have been in hiding ever since. They were captured Saturday at Frankfort, by Sheriff Kone, of this county. Cole was located by an old acquaintance. He took his arrest very coolly, claiming that nothing criminal had ever taken place. He said that the girl became afraid of a family living at Loomis, with whom she had some trouble. The girl came to him and asked him to run away with her. After leaving Loomis the two lived at Boone for awhile, then at Yuma, and came to Frankfort about a week ago. The girl is 15 years old, small for her age, and prepossessing in appearance. She did not want to go home.

Gave Up His Faith.

BAY CITY, May 14.—Rev. F. J. Case, pastor of the Universalist church here for the last two years, at Sunday morning's service tendered his resignation as pastor and at the same time withdrew from the Universalist faith. He gives as some of his reasons that he does not believe that the Bible teaches universal salvation. He will affiliate with the Congregational church. Mr. Case has been prominent in Universalist circles, having been a minister for the last ten years and for the last two years a contributing editor of the Universalist, published at Chicago, and the official organ of the church in the west.

A Prisoner Escapes.

GRAND HAVEN, May 13.—John Verholks, awaiting trial for burglary, broke jail Saturday evening by cutting a hole through the brick wall. His partner, Henry Sickman, in jail for the same offense, became stuck in the rough hole and was captured by the turnkey. Deputies have started out to search the surrounding country.

Turned Over a Balance.

LANSING, May 11.—President I. M. Weston and Treasurer Flynn, of the world's fair commission, have settled with the auditor general for the salvage account on the Michigan building. The total receipts from the building were $3,651.45; expenses, $1,477.73, leaving a net balance to be turned into the state treasury of $2,223.72.

New Line of Lake Steamers Opened.

HOLLAND, May 12.—A new line of steamers to carry passengers and freight has been opened between here and Saugatuck Friday by the steamer Harvey Watson, owned by Capt. C. R. Brittain. The Watson will run in connection with the Holland and Chicago Transportation company's boats.

Convicted of Forgery.

BAY CITY, May 12.—Dewitt Sullivan, a brother-in-law of the late Judge Marston and son-in-law of the late Auditor General Emil Anneke, has been sentenced to the Ionia reformatory for three and one-half years for passing forged checks.

A Detroiter Loses His Place.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 12.—One of the new public printer's first official acts was to remove A. M. Dewey, keeper of the stock room. Dewey was formerly a Detroit printer and a leading light in the Knights of Labor.

THE CROPS.

The Secretary of State Reports the Outlook Favorable.

Wheat Making Good Progress—The Meadows Are Said to Be in Prime Condition, While the Prospect for Fruit Is Encouraging.

SYNOPSIS OF THE REPORT.

LANSING, May 11.—In the Michigan crop report issued by Secretary of State Gardner it is said temperature and rainfall were both favorable during April, and the growing wheat made fairly good progress. The average condition May 1 in the southern and central counties was 89 per cent., northern 96 per cent. and state 90 per cent., comparison being with vitality and growth of average years. One year ago the average condition in the southern counties was 73 per cent. and central 79 per cent., and the crop of 1893 was estimated in October at 23,690,693 bushels, an average of fifteen bushels per acre for the state. Timothy and June grass meadows are in prime condition. The present outlook for an average crop of apples is encouraging. Peaches promise from five-eighths to three-fourths of a full average crop.

SWORN IN.

Senator Patton Takes His Seat—Welcomed by Associates.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 11.—John Patton, Jr., the new senator from Michigan, was sworn in Thursday to succeed the late Senator Stockbridge. Mr. Patton came into the senate chamber about 8 o'clock in the afternoon while Senator Chandler (N. H.) was in the midst of a tariff speech. Senator McMillan (Mich.) at once arose to a question of privilege, and announcing that his new colleague was present with his credentials asked that he be allowed to take the oath of office. The debate was therefore interrupted, and, escorted by Senator McMillan, Mr. Patton advanced to the vice president's desk. Vice President Stevenson was absent, but Senator Harris (Tenn.), the president pro tem. of the senate, was in the chair and he administered the oath.

Mrs. Patton, the wife of the new senator, was in the gallery, accompanied by various other ladies, among whom were several relatives of the family from Michigan and from Delaware. Some of the new senator's admirers had sent a basket of la France roses to his desk, and these were awaiting him when he entered the chamber.

After the ceremony was over Senator Patton took his seat near the long-bearded Senator Peffer (Kan.), to whom he was at once introduced by Senator McMillan. Among other senators who came forward to congratulate him were Senator Higgins (Del.), Senator Wolcott (Col.) and Senator Dubois (Idaho).

WANT RETALIATION.

Effort to Get Back at Canada for Imposing a Duty on Boom Logs.

BAY CITY, May 14.—The Canadian customs authorities have given notice that a duty of 20 per cent. will be imposed on boom logs used in towing rafts of pine to Michigan mills for sawing. If this is enforced it will put a stop to cutting Canadian pine in Michigan and a committee of Michigan lumbermen, consisting of Russell Alger, ex-Congressmen Fisher, of West Bay City, and Bliss, of Saginaw, S. G. M. Gates and E. T. Carrington will go to Washington to present the case to the treasury department and try to secure the adoption of retaliatory measures that will bring the Canadians to time.

Fire at Red Jacket.

RED JACKET, May 12.—Firebugs set fire to the barn of John Dunslan at 1 o'clock a. m. Friday, and before the fire was gotten under control ten business buildings were destroyed. The principal losses were: John Dunslan, dealer in organs and sewing machines; loss, $8,000; insurance, $4,000; also all his household effects; W. A. Isaacson, brick block; loss, $8,000; insurance, $3,500; Steven Aquilch, building; loss, $1,500; insured; Mudge & Argall's, furniture; loss, $3,000; no insurance; Jacob Aquilch, loss on building, $4,000; Mrs. Annie Olson, two frame buildings, $5,000 loss. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

CLINTON, MICH., MAY 17, 1894.

Geo. Sherwood is nursing a sprained ankle.

B. F. Greenleaf made a business trip last week.

A. F. Freeman, of Manchester was in town Monday.

Dr. J. E. White is the new health officer of Clinton.

Frank Woodward has a new wheel "The Duchess."

Geo. W. Freese and C. D. Keyes were in Macon Tuesday.

John Amspoker is busy taking the village assessment.

Prof. L. S. Camburn, of York, was in town last Saturday.

Mrs. Jas. Walker, of Jackson, is visiting at Jas. Hogan's.

D. St. John is improving his furniture store with a new front.

W. C. Burridge, of Tecumseh, paid Clinton a visit Monday.

Miss Stella Miller left Monday afternoon for her home in Blissfield.

J. M. Blanchard and family spent last Sunday in Adrian with his father.

Mrs. Edwin Carmon, of Adrian, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. W. P. Wastell.

Eugene Smalley rides a new Imperial wheel bought of B. O. Randall & Co.

Rev. W. R. Blachford attended the convocation at Detroit last Thursday.

Bert Kishpaugh and wife attended church in Tecumseh Sunday evening.

Len Kimball is the owner of a fine driving horse, purchased of A. Murphy.

Ray Bigham and Patrick Murphy, who have been so very ill, are both able to be out.

Mr. Alonzo Clark has arrived home from California much improved in health.

E. W. Freese & Son have their new store front in and it is one of the finest in the county.

E. G. and Mrs. Cook, of Tecumseh, attended the funeral of E. B. Rose last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Embler was taken suddenly ill Monday night with an attack of bleeding at the nose.

Mrs. Chas Fisk came out from Detroit last Saturday for a few days visit with her mother, Mrs. Wm. Derr.

Mr. Dane, representing R. G. Dun & Co's commercial agency, is in town this week in the interest of the company.

Mrs. Emma Rose Light, who was called here by the death of her brother, returns to her home in Chicago, Saturday.

The monthly cash receipts of our village electric light plant have passed the one hundred and twenty-five dollar mark.

Doctor and Mrs. E. M. Conklin, A. J. Waters and Miss Adah Case, of Manchester, attended the party at V. Amspoker's last Thursday evening.

Several Clinton Wheelmen attended the "Jane" performance at Tecumseh last Saturday night, and considered themselves well paid for the trip.

Mrs. Albert Rowland and daughters, Mabele and Blanche, of Caro, who have been visiting relatives and friends for some time, left Tuesday for Albion.

Don't forget the ice cream social to be given at the town hall Saturday evening by the ladies of the Eastern Star. A nice program will be given free of charge.

Tate, Van Tuyle & Co. have bought the lot of the village at the corner of Chicago and Jackson streets, and will erect a fine building thereon to be used as an office and feed store.

The officers of Golden Rod Chapter No. 85, accompanied by many members of the chapter, were in Tecumseh this (Thursday) evening by invitation of the Tecumseh chapter to confer the degrees.

At the regular meeting of Golden Rod Chapter No. 85, O. E. S. last evening, two candidates received the degrees. Several petitions were received. The interest in the order is rapidly increasing and the outlook is very bright.

The drama "Lost and Won" was presented to good houses last Friday and Saturday evenings. The play itself is a fine one, the cast was excellent, and the whole entertainment much above the average. The cast was given in full last week and it is needless to repeat it here. The parts were all finely carried and most of them deserve especial mention. Miss Stella Miller played the leading lady's part with her usual tact and spirit and she was ably assisted by Misses Grace Stevens, Tessie Sullivan and Mrs. Sutphin. Messrs. Keyes, Kennedy and Sutphin were right at home in their characters, and the minor male parts were beyond criticism. The music between acts aided much to the entertainment, the singing by R. F. Greenleaf, the piano selections by Miss Laura Carr and Dwight House and the violin solo by Stella Miller were all given very creditably. Taken altogether it was the best dramatic entertainment of which we witnessed in many months.

The editor of the Local, in last week's issue, gets hot under the collar over an innocent little item that appeared in the HERALD the week before, congratulating Bro. Blanchard upon his journalistic enterprise. His explanation is fully on a par with his enterprise, in not publishing a report of the C. E. convention. However, we acknowledge the pertinance of his remark: "If the Local's readers are satisfied we do not know as it matters materially whether the HERALD is pleased or not." We were just wondering whether his patrons were satisfied with that kind of enterprise. We are glad to note the fact that our worthy contemporary is extending his enterprise in various directions, branching out, as it were, like a green bay tree. He has lately taken an architectural shoot. Now, printers, like common folks, need a fair assortment of collateral buildings on their premises, to promote both comfort and good health. Bro. Blanchard grasped the situation, but the location of his office on the narrow end of the lot left but little space for appurtenances. After deliberating upon the matter several months and consulting several architects, he finally concluded to seize Taurus by the horns and plant his "dependency" in the middle of the front dooryard. It occupies a commanding site, being distinctly visible from all points of the compass. The door has been painted a beautiful sky blue. If the balance of the edifice were treated to a coat of bright red, with a snowy white fringe around the windows, it would not only impart an air of patriotism to the front lawn, but would add much to the architectural beauty of the structure itself and also to its attractiveness, when viewed from the east and south streets. It would add to its substantial and artistic appearance also if it were covered with a slate roof, had a skylight put in and a tower placed at the southeast corner. We make these suggestions in a kindly spirit, because public comment upon Bro. Blanchard's latest feat of enterprise is not very flattering. However, if his neighbors are satisfied, we do not know as it matters materially whether the HERALD is pleased or not.

Avery & Co.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grain to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very condensed form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not bent in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanism, strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

MACON MUSIC.

During the storm last Thursday night, lightning struck one end of Will Morgan's barn; not much damage done.

There will be memorial services at the M. E. church, Sunday, May 27th at 2:30 p. m. Old soldiers and their friends are especially invited.

Miss Morden who has been spending several months with her brother, Dr. Morden and other relatives in Adrian, returned to her home in Canada last week.

Quite a number of young people attended the Gold Medal contest at Raisin Valley last Friday evening in which. Misses Hattie Moore, Ida Hendershot and Mr. Guy Collins were contestants.

Mrs. Minerva Chapin, of Tecumseh, formerly of this place, died in Tecumseh last Saturday evening. The funeral services were held at Reformed church of this place on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Sage and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Pennington attended the birthday party for Grandma Osgood, of Lake Ridge, last Thursday, the occasion being her eighty-seventh birthday. There were about twenty-five children and grand-children present, also Mr. Josiah Osgood and wife, of Morenci, were in attendance. Grandma Osgood is remarkably smart and spry for one of her years, and we wish her many more such pleasant anniversaries.

Decoration will be observed at the Macon cemetery at 2:30 p. m., with the following program:

Music.
Prayer—Rev. J. I. Gulick.
Recitation—Bessie Camburn.

The Demorest gold medal contest, which occured at the Friends church on Friday evening, was a success in every way, although the weather was unfavorable. A full house greeted the contestants. Each of the seven in the class did finely, but the luckly one was Miss Eliza Paite, of Adrian. The medal was presented by Rev. Brown, of Tecumseh. The music was furnished by a quartette of ladies from Adrian.

WHY DO YOU DO IT?

Why Do You Neglect Small Sickness and Let them Grow into Big Ones? Why Don't You Cure Your Piles?

Pyramid Pile Cure Will Do It.

Piles are painful, persistent, hard to cure, but they can be cured. There is just one remedy that will do it. It is a recent discovery, but it has been on the market long enough to have the endorsement of leading physicians and the recommendation of thousands of cruel patients.

Pyramid Pile Cure acts quickly and directly. It cures the cause of the trouble. Cures it so that the effect is permanent.

A great many salves and ointments will give relief for a few minutes. That is not what is wanted. Pyramid Pile Cure will cure any sort of piles; blind, itching or bleeding. It will cure the slightest or the most aggravated case. The first application will do more good than a dozen boxes of any of the many so-called cures now sold. Read these letters. They are from people who have tried it.

Mr. J. W. Rollins, a gentleman living at Sweet Springs, Mo., writes briefly and to the point regarding his experience with Piles. He says: I consider the pyramid Pile cure without an equal. It cured me in less than thirty days. I waited fifteen days or more to be sure the remedy had fully cured me before writing you. I can now say I am cured and I shall recommend the Pyramid Pile Cure at every possible opportunity because it deserves it.

Miss Esther Nunley of Tracy City, Tenn., writes: The Pyramid Pile Cure has done my sister more good than anything she has ever taken. I have nothing but words of warm commendation for it.

From J. D. Roberts, Mt. Moriah, Mo.: I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and results have been entirely satisfactory. There can be no question but that it is a certain and lasting cure for piles, at least it has so proven in my case.

If your druggist hasn't Pyramid Pile Cure he will get it for you. It is made by the Pyramid drug Co. of Albion. Mich. The price is one dollar per package.

Benediction by Rev. W. R. Blachford.

After this the procession will form in the following order under the direction of Marshall Ben. J. Garlinghouse; Drum Corps; Beers Post No. 140, G. A. R; Boys Brigade; Co. C. 1st. Regt. Mich. Nat'l Guard; Floral Car; Disabled Soldiers; Womens Relief Corps; Pres. of the Day; Orator and Clergymen in carriages; Citizens in carriages. The line of march will be as follows: South on Ottawa St. to Chicago St. west on Chicago St. to Union St. North on Union street to the Cemetery, where the decorating committee will proceed to decorate the graves of "those heroes of ours."

OBITUARY.

Died, May 9th, 1894, Charlotte T. Goheen, aged 67 years, 8 months and 23 days, of heart failure. The subject of this sketch, whose maiden name was Niblack, was born in Sparta, Livingston county, N. Y., August 16, 1826. She came with her parents to Michigan in the autumn of 1832, and [illegible] tion 32, Saline township, Washtenaw county, where she was married to E. W. Goheen, forty-five years ago last March, and moved to the place of her late residence which has been her home ever since. The husband and five children remain to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. She was the youngest of ten children, all of whom except Wm. Niblack, of Locust Corners, Hillsdale county, have passed on before. Thus the light of another home has gone out, but she has only gone to await us on a brighter, happier shore. Funeral services were held at the Baptist church in Macon, conducted by the Rev. C. M. Stout, of Clinton, and the remains interred in the Macon cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to express our grateful appreciation of the thoughtfulness and kind assistance rendered us during the sickness and death of our wife and mother.

E. W. GOHEEN AND FAMILY.

GONE HOME.

Hattie Pruella Boyd, daughter of Thomas Boyd, was born in Tecumseh, June 9th, 1870. Here she resided until a few years ago. November 13, 1886, she was married to Arthur T. Dibble, at Tipton. The first year of their married life was spent at Adrian where her husband was still studying. After that they moved to Tecumseh and here they resided until two years ago. From here they moved to Ithaca, Mich., where they own a farm. Her failing health made it necessary for them to leave the farm and her husband took up the duties of the school room. A few weeks ago she returned to the home of her childhood. Her stay was brief, for on the evening of the 19th of April her spirit took its flight and her troubles ceased. Thus ended the life's work of this young mother. She leaves behind her three little girls and a husband to mourn her death, also a father, brother and three sisters. She was laid to rest Sunday, the 22nd, the services being held at her father's house. That her death was felt by many was evidenced by the large attendance at the funeral service, and the great number that accompanied the friends to the grave. The young husband and the family have the deepest sympathy of the community in their sorrow, and the prayers of God's people are with them.

The series of concerts given at the May festival at Ann Arbor last week was a success in every way and upon Francis W. Kelsey, president of the University Musical society and Prof. Albert A. Stanley, director of the Choral Union, rests the responsibility. Within the past few years the Choral Union has grown to be one of the largest in the country and of recognized ability. During its five years of existence over $25,000 have been spent by this union for concerts alone.

The Tecumseh May party was up to its usual standard of excellence though the number in attendance was not as great as in some former years. Mr. Stacy's evolutions around the May pole while braiding up the red white and blue, won for him the approval of all hearts.—Adrian Press.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 24, 1894.

This seems to be Wall street's advice to congress: Be sure you are wrong, then go ahead.

New York will give three cheers over Croker's retirement from politics, but perhaps Tammany will furnish the tiger.

The Democrats in the Senate who are serving the trusts will have an opportunity to engage in private business when their present terms expire.

The number of people who think that the Senate should be elected by popular vote is increasing daily, and "senatorial courtesy" is itself responsible for the increase.

Chicago is unfortunate. Last year she had the Midway Plaisance and this year she is afflicted with the small pox. But Chicago manages to boom business just the same.

It is a curious coincidence that Dr. Talmadge's Brooklyn tabernacle was twice destroyed by fire, that both fires occurred on Sunday and both on the 13th day of the month.

The Senate may block tariff reform, and possibly defeat it. If the people are thus compelled to take another whack at the trusts they will elect a Congress that will give us free trade.

The report comes that the republican members of the Senate have decided to talk the tariff bill to death. They probably have the power to do so, unless a cloture rule shall be adopted, and "senatorial courtesy" is not likely to consent to that.

Senator Hill opposes the income tax, because New York will pay 30 per cent. of it. This is a very specious argument. If New York receives 30 per cent. of the annual income of the country, why should she not pay her proportion for the protection she receives?

The attempt to settle the coal strike last week ended in a failure and the strike is still on. Two hundred thousand miners are now involved, and if a coal famine ensues, it will effect at least ten million wage workers in other lines of business.

Senator Roger Q. Mills is not satisfied with the new compromise tariff bill, but he says that if the amendments all go through, his vote will not be withheld rom the bill in order to defeat its final passage. This is the patriotic course to take. Half a loaf is better than no bread.

The storm last Saturday on Lake Michigan was the worst in years. There were several wrecks at Chicago and Milwaukee, and over twenty lives were lost. The life saving crews did noble work at their own peril and rescued nearly one hundred sailors from a watery grave.

The N. Y. Sun gives the college senior of to-day this little rap: "The senior class of the University of Michigan is said not to take kindly to the cap and gown, and to refuse to wear that ancient academic gear. The cap and bells are perhaps better suited to contemporary under-graduate conditions.

The Voice takes this view of the Coxey business: "If Coxey's men would stay at home and vote the gin-mills out of politics and the gin-mill politicians out of office, it would be far more sensible than tramping to Washington to ask Congressmen to violate their oath of office and smash the federal constitution."

It is reported that the "trusts" have raised a million dollars for a corruption fund to defeat the tariff bill and that Senators Hunton and Kyle have been offered $25,000 each to vote against the bill. This report may be exaggerated, but the fact that the trusts possess both the means and the disposition for carrying out such a scheme render it reasonable and probable, to say the least.

The tariff bill as it now stands is something of a typographical curiosity. It is four different bills in one. First, there is the House bill, in one kind of type. Then there are the amendments adopted by the finance committee in another kind of type. Then there are the Jones caucus amendments which appear as new matter in small type, omitted matter in heavy brackets. Then come the Vest caucus amendments, designed as new matter in small type, omitted matter in heavy brackets, but with explanatory notes in light brackets.

And now it is said that Gen. Coxey will soon take the lecture field. Has the great commonwealer come to that, so soon?

The Coxey movement in the Northwest is expensive. The treasury department has submitted a deficiency estimate of $50,000 for fees and expenses of United States marshals in that section who pursued the train stealers lately. That amount of money spent in putting the northwest Coxeyites in the way of looking out for themselves, would have made the stealing of trains unnecessary and resulted in permanent good. But that isn't the way we do business these days. We crowd people into corners and then hire professional loafers and pay them good money to keep the unfortunate there. Hence the $50,000 deficiency.

Coxey's Army of the Commonweal is apparently settled in its new camp at Bladensburg, Maryland, just beyond the line of the District of Columbia, for an indefinite stay. The contributions received last week, including money and a carload of flour, make it certain that the army will have plenty to eat for the next twenty days, even if nothing else were received. A bake oven has been built and the flour will be baked in camp. No one was surprised when a new trial was refused Coxey, Browne and Jones; they did not expect it themselves. Coxey has decided that he will accept the nomination for Congress tendered to him, if he is allowed to run on a Coxey platform.

In a brief speech in Boston the other day Secretary Morton said: "Liberty for commerce is thoroughly, purely, intensely American." The McKinleyites may not agree to this. But it was Washington who said 'that 'liberal intercourse with all nations is recommended by policy, humanity, and interest," and that in our commercial policy we "should hold an equal and impartial hand; neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors and preferences; consulting the national course of things; diffusing and diversifying by gentle means the streams of commerce, but forcing nothing." No wonder that a prominent McKinleyite a few years ago spoke of Washington as a "back number."

The Philadelphia Times makes this very sensible suggestion: "The country will welcome Senator Aldrich to his task of exposing jobbery in tariff legislation. Let him begin by telling the exact truth about his own special efforts to serve the sugar trust in amending the McKinley tariff, and then let him show, to whatever extent truth will warrant, like efforts on the part of Democratic senators to serve the sugar trust in amending the Wilson bill. The country wants the truth, and there are none who can so forcefully present the truth as those who, like Senator Aldrich, have been up to their eyes in serving the jobbers who sought monopoly profits in tariff legislation. We welcome the Rhode Island senator to his task. Let him perform it without fear, favor or affection.

The Democratic masses will approve of this sensible talk from the New York World: "It is the duty of all true Democrats in the Senate and the House to stand firm for substantial revenue reform. The surrender of the Senate must not be acquiesced in by the Democratic party. Every effort must be made to improve the wretched measure that is falsely called a tariff-reform bill. If a bold front is shown such improvement can be effected. The real Democrats in Congress must give to the "Conservatives" an opportunity to return to the party and to give up some of the demands they have made, thus far successfully, in behalf of the trusts. The men who have turned their backs upon their party's pledges should have ample opportunity to repent, but they should be told in unmistakable terms that they must repent or seek other party alliances.

Col. Breckinridge is having a hard time of it, in his canvass for a re-nomination. The women have taken a hand in the canvass, and a correspondent gives two illustrations of how they are managing it:

A Lexington man went home the day of the Colonel's forthcoming speech with a Breckinridge button on his coat lapel, and told his wife that he had decided to support him. She replied: "As the head of the family I recognize your right to place your political influence wherever you please, and as a loyal wife I shall do what I can for the success of your candidate. I am going to the florist's to get a bunch of the finest white flowers I can find. I shall meet the train the Colonel arrives on, invite him into my carriage, and ride up with him."

The citizen looked at his wife in amazement. He knew that she was quite capable of carrying out her programme, and he knew he must prevent it. She agreed to relinquish her plan when he took off the Breckinridge button and promised to oppose the Colonel.

Another Lexington man met some ladies on the street and joined them in their walk. He wore a Breckinridge button. One of the ladies said to him: "We should be delighted with you company, but we cannot be seen in public with a man wearing that button; neither can we receive such a man at our home."

The button promptly came off.

Halt Revolutionary Obstruction.

It has been announced in the Senate that unless the majority of that body shall amend the tariff bill to conciliate the minority party, revolutionary obstruction will be persisted in to the extent of defeating the passage of any tariff bill. Senator Hale distinctly announced the purpose of the minority to pursue the revolutionary tactics inaugurated by Senator Quay unless assurance should be given that the tariff bill as amended in the senate shall not be materially amended in committee of conference. Thus, the minority of the first legislative tribunal of the nation deliberately and defiantly proclaims its purpose to persist in revolutionary measures to defeat the legitimate legislative purpose of the majority of that body.

If this resistance of the will of the majority had the sanction of either law or custom it might be excused, but it is wholly revolutionary. It is a flagrant affront to the dignity and decency of the United States Senate, and it should be halted by measures within the rules, if possible, or by measures without the rules, if necessary. Being revolutionary and against the whole genius of government by the majority, if it can be overthrown only by revolutionary remedies they should be promptly adopted. And in adopting them there should be no pretense of anything but the truth. Let it be declared that if revolution will persist in attempting to master the majority of the senate, revolutionary action shall halt it; and when that issue shall be distinctly presented, the men who have dishonored the Senate by filibustering will doubtless hide from from themselves and permit the majority to rule.—Philadelphia Times.

Table Talk.

Irresistable and constantly increasing must be the usefulness of "Table Talk" (Philadelphia) to all housekeepers, for with the appearance of the May issue they find much of fresh interest between its covers. Not only are the latest styles and devices for dining-room and kitchen, novelties and helps for mother and children, given, but it holds an unusual number of receipes, and a simple, practical and easily followed Menu for every meal in the month, which department is edited by Miss Helen Louise Johnson. Dr. Wiley, Chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture also contributes. Miss Emma G. Conro, of Pratt Institute, writes very entertainingly on the Elevation of Household Labor to the Dignity of a Profession, and Miss Armstrong delights us with an article on "Suppers and Teas of Long Ago." This magazine offers a sample copy free to any of our readers. Published by Table Talk Publishing Co., Philadelphia. Price, $1.00 per yr.

Commissioners.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 7th day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety four.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of John Margeson, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of James E. Howard, treasurer of Kalamazoo College, alleging that said college has a claim against the estate of said deceased; that the time first limited for the presentation of claims against said estate has expired, and praying for reasons set forth in said petition that a hearing may be had before this court upon said claim and that the same may be established as a valid claim against said estate in accordance with the provisions of the statute in such case made and provided.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the Fourth day of June next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the executors of the will and the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is Further Ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee; for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

THE WIFE BEATER.

"Laddie," she said at last, placing her hand on Roger's head, "perhaps you are right in what you did. I am only a woman, my boy, and so was a little shocked at hearing you say you had struck Katie. You see, wife beaters are not generally looked upon as a very noble race of men, and"——

"I shall never touch her again. I told her so," interrupted Roger, "and I shall keep my word."

"Of course," assented his aunt, "no one knowing you would doubt your word for a moment. You are an exceptional man, my dear Roger, and therefore I say again perhaps you were right, perilous as the experiment is. I do not exonerate your wife from blame. She should have had more sense, for she is by no means only a silly pretty doll."

"No, indeed," cried Roger. "I am very proud of Katie's common sense. She is often clear headed and wiser than two men put together."

"Quite so. All the more blame to her for so grossly misunderstanding your character. She should have been more dutiful, more obedient, should have studied your wishes more"——

"She always studied my wishes—always," cried the young man wrathfully, rising from his position and pacing up and down the room. "It was only that she did not understand that I would be master; that when I said a thing I meant it. Otherwise she is the sweetest little wife any one ever had."

"Come here, laddie. Put your head on my knees—so. You say you didn't hurt her much. How do you know? She is a terrible little coward, is wee Katie, and dreads pain.

"Most women do," went on Mrs. Crombie. "But it was not only the bodily pain, for I don't suppose for a moment that you did hurt her much. You are not a brute, and, as you say, it was but a toy whip.

"Think a moment, and please understand I am not pleading for Katie in the least. I am only trying to show you the state of the case from her side of view.

"She had gone on in her foolish, imperious little way, thinking she was governing her big husband, utterly unconscious that he on his side was storing up every single opposition to his will, to pour out the whole of it one day upon her in cold and bitter justice.

"She was wrong, very wrong; but, Roger, I ask you as a man—a stern one, but I think a just one—are you perfectly without blame?"

There was silence again for some five minutes; then the young man raised his eyes, and they were wet with tears, to his aunt's face, and said: "I see, auntie. I was blind, too, and I have sinned too. Tell me, do you think it is too late? Will Katie hate me now?"

"If I know anything of Katie, she will receive you back with love and tenderness. But, Roger, remember one thing. She can never be quite the same again. A woman never forgets. Do what you will, do what she will, she will always fear you now, always be a little bewildered, a little uncertain, never sure of you again.

"Men never understand that every true, loving woman builds up an ideal of the man she loves and clings to that ideal desperately even after the god of brass has plainly shown the feet of clay. There, laddie, I will lecture no more. Goodby."

There was no carriage to meet him when he got out at Althorpe station, two miles from the Towers, and though he did not expect it he felt somehow chilled.

By the time he reached the gates he was really nervous for the first time in his life. He walked into the house and gave a slight shiver as the thought crossed his mind that perhaps it would always be so in the future. No Katie would come flying out to meet him, and he knew that if that should be the case his life would indeed be desolate.

"How foolish I am!" he muttered. "She could not know when I was coming home. She must be in paradise; I will go there."

So he mounted the low, broad staircase on to a little room he had furnished for her with every luxurious trifle love could fancy, and which they had named paradise.

Katie was lying on a low lounge staring into vacancy. She had been hoping against hope that he would come, but she knew that the train had been in some time.

She looked so slight, so frail, so fearfully ill that a feeling of terror came over him. Was she going to die?

"Katie, my wee wifey," said Roger softly.

With a stifled cry she sprang to her feet and held her arms out to him with a touching look of appeal and love. He clasped her, half fainting, in his arms as he whispered:

"Look up, wee wifey; your big bear has come back to you. Let us forget the past, and with God's help begin afresh."

But not one man in 900 could have acted as Roger did without being either a tyrant or a brute, and not one woman in a thousand as Katie did without feeling insulted beyond bearing and having every atom of love in her for the man who struck her killed forever on the spot.—Argosy.

A Curious Piece of Stone.

In an Oxford museum may be seen a strange stone. It is composed of carbonate of lime and was taken from a pipe which carries off drain water in a colliery. The stone consists of alternate layers of black and white, so that it has a striped appearance. This was caused in the following way: When the miners were at work, the water which ran through the pipe contained a good deal of coal dust, and so left a black deposit in the pipe. But when no work was going on—as, for instance, in the night—the water was clean, and so a white layer was formed. In time these deposits quite filled the pipe, and it was therefore taken up. Then it was found that the black and white layers formed quite a calendar. Small streaks, alternately black and white, showed a week, and then came a white streak of twice the usual size. This was Sunday, during which there was of course no work for 24 hours. But in the middle of one week there came a white streak of twice the usual size. On inquiry it was found that on that day a large fair had been held in the neighborhood, and no work had been done at the colliery. Every change in the ordinary course of work had left its mark on this strange stone, to which has been given the title of "The Sunday Stone."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Talismanic Moonstone.

The remarkable peculiarity of the moonstone is that while in all other gems internal seams are called flaws, and detract from their value, in the moonstone they are called "magic mirrors—because those favored mortals who are gifted with the illumination of the astral light can, by its aid, read on those surfaces of milky white the reflections of the past and the promises of the future."—Jenness Miller's Monthly.

MUSIC ON THE SNOW.

When Jan was about 12 years of age, he and his father were all that was left of the family. They were very happy together, being even more devoted to each other than an Eskimo father and son usually are, and that is saying a good deal. However sad it was for these two to be left all alone, it gave them certain advantages. For example, they had a whole igloo to themselves. An igloo is the stone hut in which the Eskimos spend the dark months of their year. It is small, badly ventilated, and, to our way of thinking, utterly unfit to live in. But Jan thought it a very nice place. The light of a tiny lamp was sufficient for illumination, and he had nothing to do but eat and sleep and talk.

Now, one winter, in the midst of this long night, Jan's father fell very ill. This did not seem strange to me, for he was living almost without air and water—the Eskimos do not like to wash themselves. But while the people around him, no more particular about their personal habits than he, were still in good health, this poor old man was suffering dreadfully, and the angekok, or medicine man, declared his case hopeless.

Jan was wild with grief. He could not talk to anybody, nor could he, by any effort, keep still. There were plenty of kind neighbors to leave with his father, and so Jan slipped from the hut, through the dismal tunnel which was the entrance and went out alone into the wild, dark night.

The stars looked down upon him with a friendly, calm smile. But they seemed cold and far off. He went on and on, fearing no interruption of the loneliness he wanted, for all his friends were making themselves comfortable in their dim, hot dwellings.

But all at once a faint, sweet sound smote upon his ear. Like all his race, Jan was passionately fond of music. Now, as these wonderful, soft tones came stealing across the snow, he stood still, and all his restlessness left him. He lifted his face to the starshine, and tears dropped upon his cheeks.

Then he became aware that another light than that of the stars was about him.

It was warmer and yellower. The music ceased as suddenly as it had begun, and he heard the call of a hungry voice. What it said I cannot with certainty repeat, but it sounded wonderfully like "Hullo!"

Jan's dazed eyes saw a figure beside him looking like a man, but tall and strangely clad. In one hand it carried a radiating light, and in the other a long, slender, dark object.

All in a moment the boy felt perfectly certain that this must be one of those marvelous beings of whom the country's legends told—being far more powerful and intelligent than men, who let themselves be seen only on rare occasions, and sometimes perform wonders to help those who are in trouble. This good son lost no time in falling at the stranger's feet and imploring his aid in behalf of his suffering father.

"Well," said the apparition, "I will do what I can. Is your igloo built of stone or of ice?"

"Of stone," responded Jan respectfully.

"Hum," said the marvelous being. "Then of course your father has no fresh air to breath. How long is it since he washed his face?"

"Not for many days," answered Jan, without the least embarrassment, for he did not know there was reason for shame.

"Wait for me here," and the stranger strode off into the distance.

When he returned, he brought a pail, such as is used for carrying water. This he gave to Jan, and the boy received it with the greatest willingness, for he had unlimited faith in his companion. The stranger bade him follow to a stream of water, to break the ice while he cheered his labor with that sweet, sorrowful music. It seemed to come from the long, dark object he carried with him. The pail was filled to the melodious strains.

"Now," said the stranger, ceasing to play, "this water has been drawn under the influence of my music. It has great powers. You must take it with you."

Jan eagerly assented.

"You must pour a little of it into some other vessel and bathe your father's face and hands."

At this Jan's countenance began to lengthen. He knew his father would object to the prescription.

"Then set the pail outside the igloo," went on the stranger in authoritative tones. "After awhile you must pour out some more water and bathe his face and hands again. It must be done six times before this hour tomorrow. At this hour you must meet me here."

The music began again, and the mysterious being moved quickly away. Jan did not feel very happy, but was resolved to follow the stranger's directions. When he reached home, he found his father alone and asleep. It seemed a favorable opportunity to begin his work. Carefully pouring out a little water, he began to lave the fevered brow and cheeks.

The old man awoke in a moment and began to protest most energetically. Jan had to stop work long enough to tell how he had obtained the amazing prescription.

"Think of it, father," he pleaded. "A medicine man who comes with a light and sweet music. Surely he must know what will cure you."

So the old man submitted to the six washings, although he groaned and complained under the affliction. But something—possibly the repeated shock—seemed to have a good effect upon him. When the time arrived for Jan to meet the wonderful angekok, his father felt well enough to sit up.

Again the stranger came, heralded by music. He smiled when he heard Jan's good account of the patient.

"Follow me to the water," was his command.

The pail was again filled to the sound of music, and Jan started homeward to give his father six more washings.

When these were faithfully performed, the sick man was almost well. He decided to go with his son and see the angekok for himself.

The light and music had even more effect upon him than they had had upon Jan. He confidently believed that the stranger's wonderful power had restored him to health.

The mysterious benefactor refused to take back the pail in which the water had been brought.

"Keep it," said he. "Fill it every day with water from the stream. It will have a wonderful effect, even if I am not near to play for you while you draw."

But although Jan and his father gratefully accepted the gift they did not carry out the directions which accompanied it. They had no confidence in the water unless it were endowed with the strange power which the stranger's music gave. But the remarkable story was often repeated, and my little friend had had it from the lips of Jan himself.—Catherine S. Holmes in Philadelphia Press.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE MANHATTAN LIFE.

Something About the Company's Business Record, and Their New Office Building in New York City.

The new home office building of the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, has attracted a great deal of attention from all quarters, and deservedly so. New York is famed for its handsome and costly buildings, but it has none which perhaps represents so great skill and intelligence in the science of both architecture and engineering as does this building. Its various stages of construction, from the foundation up, have been watched with great interest all along, and the building stands as a monument to the triumphs of architecture.

The first step necessary in the construction of such a lofty building was of course, to secure a foundation capable of sustaining its great weight, calculated at 35,000 tons, and this, too, in a soil known to be treacherous. All of the plans usually accepted for foundations of buildings of this class were considered by the architects, but was rejected as unfit for the work projected. It was finally decided that the only way the permanent safety and solidity of the structure could be assured was to sink caissons, similar to those used in the construction of the towers of the Brooklyn bridge, and this plan was finally adopted. The caissons, fifteen in number, were sunk to the depth of fifty feet by the pneumatic process, and finally placed on bed rock foundation. The excavations inside the caissons were also accomplished by means of air pressure, the mud and sand being forced out through a four-inch pipe. After the caissons had reached the desired point they were thoroughly divested of any extraneous matter and filled in with concrete, making a foundation almost as firm as a rock itself.

The building will be one of the wonders of the metropolis, and is the highest commercial structure in the world. The accompanying engraving will give a fair idea of the outer appearance of the building. It is sixty-seven feet wide by one hundred and twenty-three feet deep, and in height, from the pavement to the base of the flag staff, 347 feet on New street and 408 on Broadway. Both fronts are in the Italian renaissance style of architecture, richly ornamented, the Broadway one being built of limestone and the New street of brick and terra cotta. The entire superstructure is built over a skeleton frame work of iron and steel, containing enough material to construct nearly 100 miles of railroad. A striking feature of the Broadway front is the arched doorway extending through two stories, with a recessed vestibule of stone extending back into the building fifteen feet, with sides and ceiling richly ornamented. The spandrils of the arch outside are to have cartouches, on which will be inscribed the chronology of the company and a fac simile of its seal. Another particularly interesting feature of this front is the sixth and seventh stories, which contains a recessed arcade and a handsomely wrought balcony, which, from an architectural point of view, is very impressive as well as ornamental. An open court on the southern side of the building affords an abundance of light to the inner offices.

In its interior arrangements and finish the Manhattan's new home is a combination of the highest standard in all points, such as lighting, heating ventilation, convenience and beauty. Access to the building on the first floor is through a spacious hall, finished in a variety of the finest marble, with inlaid Mosaic work on the floor. The stairway leading to the second floor is made entirely of marble, and all the staircases above the first floor are of iron and marble. The halls are entirely of Sienna marble, and all the halls and corridors are laid in Mosaic. There is very little wood work in the building, and it is as absolutely fireproof as it is possible to make a building. To increase the degree of safety from fires there is a liberal supply of fire hydrants. Access to the elegant offices in the sixteen stories is supplied by five hydraulic and two electric elevators, the latter being reserved for the use of the company.

The Manhattan's new building is a fitting monument to the strength and stability of this staunch company, whose existence dates back to 1850, and whose accumulations in assets amount to nearly fourteen million dollars. Its policy contracts hold a high position in public estimation, and its record of over thirty-five million dollars paid to policyholders since its organization shows how well it has performed the part of a true life insurance company. The company occupied its new quarters the first of this month.

Here are a few reasons for patronizing the old Manhattan Life.

It is an old company. Other things being equal, an old company is to be preferred, as it has had a chance to prove itself and make a record by which it can be judged. "The Old Manhattan" has made its record, to which to-day it points with pride.

It is a clean company. In the forty-three years of its existence, no breath of scandal has been directed toward it; no questionable practices have been entered into by its management; and no examination of its books or accounts has shown cause for criticism.

It is a progressive company. Organized in 1850, and issuing its first policy on August 1st of that year, it has grown solidly and firmly to its present position, where it now holds insurance in force amounting to over sixty-four million of dollars.

It is a liberal company. The Manhattan introduced the feature of incontestibility in 1865, while no other American company did anything of the kind until 1879. It also, in 1865, applied this incontestibility to all its policies previously issued.

During forty-two years money has been received, invested and disbursed—millions of money—yet for the entire expense of doing such a business, not one dollar of premium money has been touched. All expenses paid from interest. Every dollar accounted for; and over five millions of dollars added to the total amount received; over twelve per cent. net gain.

Here are some of the advantages of a Manhattan policy:

Makes the safest of all investments.
Affords immediate relief to the family.
Not taxable, and requires no care.
Helps to support and educate the children.
Assures cash when most needed.
Takes care of the widow and orphans.
Thoroughly protects them at all times.
A more profitable investment than a Saving Bank.
No conditions except prompt payment of premiums.
The first company to introduce the incontestable feature in its policies.

Guy J. Davidson has secured the general agency of this old reliable organization here in Tecumseh and he proposes to push the canvass in this vicinity. Guy is a hustler himself and he has a first-class company to work for. This combination ought to insure a good business. In conclusion we advise our readers to heed the advice of a rising Detroit poet, who says:

Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us,
Widows worthy of our time.

Therefore, give your wife a send off,
On the Old Manhattan's plan;
Fix it so, that when you end off,
She can scoop another man.
—After A Longfellow.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank the friends in Tecumseh and Macon, for their sympathy and assistance in our late bereavement, caused by the death of our sister, Mrs. M. R. Chapin.

MRS. W. N. LEWIS,
N. L. SKINNER,
C. V. SKINNER.

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Guy Davidson spent last Sunday in Milan.

Mrs. C. F. Field spent last Sunday in Clinton.

Guy Belding, of Clinton, was in town last Saturday.

Archie Richards, of Jackson, was in town one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Tate, of Clinton, were in town last Friday.

Mrs. Green, of Clinton, was calling on Tecumseh friends last Saturday.

Will Osborn, of Dundee, spent last Sunday with his parents at home.

Fred Landgraf, of Toledo, was in Tecumseh last Saturday on business.

Leon McNeil spent last Sunday at Adrian with his cousin, Fred Boynton.

Harry Pattison has hired out to Mr. Darling to attend the Central telephone office.

Miss Jennie Middlebrook, of Clinton, visited friends in town the last of the week.

W. B. Darling will run a soda fountain when he gets settled in his new quarters.

Frank Kennedy has moved his household goods to Pennington's Corners where the family will reside hereafter.

The death roll of Tecumseh's old settlers received two more additions last week; Mrs Randall and Mrs. Burroughs.

Mrs. M. J. Tremaine, of Chicago, was called here last week by the sickness and death of her mother. Mrs. Randall.

J. W. Benedict and wife, who have been spending a few days with their daughter, Mrs Dance of Detroit, have returned home.

Nelson Burroughs, of Cherokee, Iowa, was called here very suddenly last week to attend the funeral of his mother. He will remain here this week.

Mr. Darling will move into Ed. Kirchgessner's old store and refit it for a restaurant. He is now renovating the room preparatory to moving in.

David McNair, when asked what he was driving at now, replied: "I am making garden, and I have the very best one in town, with perhaps one exception."

The annual memorial services of the Manchester Masonic Lodge will be held next Sunday afternoon, May 27th. An invitation has been extended to Tecumseh Lodge to participate and they will decide the matter to-morrow evening.

The story is again going the rounds that the Lake Shore authorities are deliberating upon the feasibility of constructing a new depot in this town.—Tecumseh Herald. What's that!—Adrian Press.

H. H. Chapin, of Adrian, is in town this week, collecting bills on some hotel registers he has recently get out. He has issued four; one for each of the Clinton hotels, one for the Exelby House at Britton, and one for the Lake Park, at Sand Lake.

Last week's Adrian Press was the first number of the 22d volume. The Press is one of our most valued exchanges and here's the wish that Brothers Stearns and Smith may both live long and continue to prosper. The Press is a mighty good paper to scissor items from.

We are informed by Dr. Jenkins that Mrs. Wells Goheen did not die as the result of a surgical operation. Death was caused by the strangulated condition of the intestines, and not by the operation, which was performed for the sole purpose of giving the woman the only chance for her life.

Mr. and Mrs. DeLos C. LeBaron celebrated their Silver wedding last Friday evening at their pleasant home on 10th St., Toledo, Ohio. They gave a very handsome reception to their many friends of that city; the rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers and potted plants from the well known greenhouse of Mrs. Suder. His sister, Mrs. C. F. Morley, of this place, was present to enjoy the evening with them. The HERALD wishes them many happy returns of the day.

$100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Small Talk About Business.

By A. E. Rice. A banker's business hints for men and women. Published by Fremont Publishing Co., Fremont, Ohio, 70 pages. Paper 40, cloth 75 cents, by mail, post paid. Descriptive pamphlets free. This book, as its name indicates, is a talk about business; a banker's talks to men and women about the common, every-day business affairs of life. It is brimful of useful ideas for both young and old—a book that should be on every desk and in every home.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter, and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. Full particulars sent by E. Fosey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile Ala.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE
Has Been Proven to be Catarrh of the Kidneys.

A letter from Mrs. Mary A. Shear, of Jennings, La., states: "I am recommending your Pe-ru-na to every one I hear complain. Several people have already commenced taking it. My disease was Bright's disease of the kidneys and catarrh of the bladder. I am quite well now."

The symptoms of Bright's disease are: Dull pains in the back; scanty, high-colored urine, containing albumen and various sediments; nausea, and sometimes vomiting; puffiness of the face and feet; dropsy of the legs; shortness of breath and general weakness; palor and dryness of the skin; chilly feelings, alternating with fever and sleeplessness. The treatment is: A tablespoonful of Pe-ru-na before each meal, before meals, and at bed-time, and enough Man-a-lin at night to produce one natural action of the bowels each day.

Send to The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Co., of Columbus, Ohio, for a free copy of the Family Physician No. 2, devoted to catarrh in all forms and stages.

At the state firemens' convention held at Hastings last week, the Tecumseh delegates represented this town to good advantage. Wes Bordine was chairman of the committee on program. We are indebted to S. P. Hosmer for a copy of the souvenir pamphlet, which is an elegant job of printing.

The HERALD received a friendly call Tuesday afternoon from John R. Clarke. He lectured in Addison Monday evening and stopped off here about three hours on his way east. He takes a southern trip in June spending three days in Atlanta, Ga., and he has a number of Chautauqua Assembly engagements booked for July and August.

Nearly thirty members of Golden Rod Chapter O. E. S. of Clinton, visited the Tecumseh Lodge last Thursday evening and conferred the degree in our lodge. Notwithstanding the rain there was a goodly number present and our members were most favorably impressed with the manner in which the work was performed by their Clinton visitors. The music furnished added very much to the ceremony. The presiding officers of Golden Rod and their assistants received the heartiest compliments of all who witnessed their work.

Some of the light fingered gentry broke into Mrs. Judge Stacy's house last Saturday night and made themselves at home for a while. They gained entrance by forcing open a kitchen window. S. C. Stacy's gold watch was taken from his vest pocket and some silver change extracted from the wallet in his pantaloon's pocket. The burglars drank a pan of milk, ate half a dozen eggs and devoured a large frosted cake, that Miss Loana had baked that afternoon for dinner on Sunday. Nothing of any value was taken except the watch. Scove treasured that beyond its intrinsic value as it was a gift from his father and he had carried it over thirty years.

This can properly be called birthday week in the HERALD office. May 17th, last Thursday, was Geo. Spafford's birthday; Miss Loana Stacy's fell on the 20th; Chas. H. Reed's is to-day, the 24th, and the HERALD'S own is the 25th. To-day's issue is the first number of the 45th volume.

If weather permits, on Decoration Day, will occur a game of base ball between the Jackson and the Tecumseh high school teams, on Bills' driving park. Come and see a good game between two of the best boy teams in Michigan. Game called about 3:30 p. m. Admission 15cts; Ladies free; Grand stand 10cts to all. Come and help the boys out on their expense account.

Mrs. Caroline S. Randall died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. W. Adderson last Friday, the 18th. She was 83 years of age and had lived in Tecumseh 40 years. She was a woman of more than ordinary mental and physical vigor, and retained her faculties fully up to the date of her death. The obsequies were held at the M. E. Church Sunday afternoon, her pastor, Rev. J. P. Varner, officiating. Further obituary mention will appear hereafter.

On May 4th Miss Bessie Preston of the Fractional School district, Raisin Township, with her school well trained for the occasion, in presence of invited guests of the G. A. R. and W. R. C., had a pole raised and the old flag soon floated to the breeze over their school house and the flag salute was given according to the tactics of Col. Balch's work of New York City. Appropriate exercises were given by the school. An address by Hon. J. D. Shull; remarks by Rev. Mr. Brown, and talk on Patriotism to the school by Mrs. Thomas Hanley; closed by singing America. This is the first school where the Flag Salute has been given, and we hope every school in Lenawee county will take up the work and at the opening of next year all the schools will have a flag float over them and salute the same every morning for part of their exercises. Any information how to proceed to raise money or obtain the salute will be given at once by Mrs. Anna S. Hanley, Tecumseh, who is the Secretary of the W. R. C. and Chairman of the Flag Committee.

BRAVED THE STORM.

Volunteers Go to the Rescue of a Stranded Crew Off Port Huron

Their Boat Is Capsized, and Four Out of Five of the Heroes Are Drowned—List of Michigan Sailors Lost During the Storm.

BRAVE MEN PERISH.

PORT HURON, Mich., May 21.—In an effort to save the crew of the schooner William Shupe, which was waterlogged 14 miles out Friday night and drifted to shore 5 miles north Saturday, four volunteer life savers were drowned. The dead are Augus King, Capt. Henry Little, William Lewis and Barney Mills. Capt. Daniel Lynn swam ashore and was saved.

The crew of six men and a woman cook of the Shupe took to the rigging. The tug Thompson attempted to go to rescue them, but the wind was blowing such a gale that it could not get out of the St. Clair river. Saturday morning the tug succeeded in reaching the disabled schooner, but could not get near enough to be of any assistance. It returned to Port Huron and secured a large yawl and an extra force of men and started for the schooner. They reached the boat and made fast, but before they could communicate with those on board the Shupe the yawl capsized and all except Daniel Lynn were drowned.

The Sand Beach life saving crew, 60 miles away, was then telegraphed for and came down on a special train. The Thompson left here at 2 o'clock with the life saving crew in tow and she dropped the boat about a mile above the Shupe. The life savers finally reached the wrecked schooner and took off the crew after hard work and landed them on shore about 5 o'clock. They were all alive, but in a greatly exhausted condition, having been drifting for forty-eight hours.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 21.—During the recent storms on the lakes, the following whose homes were in Michigan towns lost their lives:

John Anderson, Manistique; Anton Gunderson, Manistee; Mrs. Mapes, (cook on schooner Cummings), Detroit; James Whitley, Marine City; Angus King, Capt Henry Little, William Lewis and Barney Mills, all of Port Huron.

MAY FESTIVAL AT ANN ARBOR.

An Audience of 3,000 Listens to the Opening Concert.

ANN ARBOR, May 19.—The first annual May Festival concert was given Friday evening in University hall. An audience of nearly 3,000 students and citizens from all parts of the state was present. Punctually at 8 o'clock Emil Mollenhauer, the conductor of the Boston Festival orchestra, raised his baton, and the orchestra gave Beethoven's overture to Leonora, No. 3. The soloists of the evening were Miss Rose Stewart, soprano; Miss Gertrude May Stein, contralto; E. C. Towne, tenor; Arthur Friedheim, pianist, and Max Heinrich, baritone. The programme was pleasing. The audience was carried away by Miss Stewart's singing of the "bird song" from "Il Pensieroso" of Handel. The audience insisted upon her responding to an encore. Max Heinrich sang Wotan's "Farewell" and "Fire Charm" in his usual powerful, dramatic manner. Miss May Stein sang an aria from "Rienzi," by Wagner.

ANN ARBOR, May 20.—The May festival series closed with a grand concert by the Choral union, in which 280 singers took part, assisted by the following soloists: Misses Emma Juch, soprano; Gertrude May Stein, mezzo soprano; Edward C. Towne, tenor, and Max Heinrich, baritone. An audience of 4,000 was present. It is now announced that a May festival will be an annual event in the university.

Game and Fish Clubs Form a League.

LANSING, May 18.—Representatives of the principal sportsmen's clubs of the state met here and organized the state league of game and fish clubs for the purpose of securing needed amendments to the game and fish laws. Officers were elected as follows: President, John J. Speed, Detroit; vice president, O. L. Landy, Kalamazoo; secretary, C. L. Boynton, Port Huron; treasurer, George A. Gould, Grand Rapids.

Bonds Said to Be Illegal.

IRONTON, May 17.—Considerable excitement has been occasioned among workmen here by a report received from an agent of this city now in the east that the late issue of public improvement bonds in the sum of $150,000 is believed to be illegal. The bonds were sold to a New York firm and the city has had considerable trouble in securing a settlement with them. A special election will be called to authorize the issuance of new bonds.

Convicted of Election Frauds.

DETROIT, May 20.—James G. Clarke has been convicted of fraudulently swelling the local vote for increasing the salaries of state officers at the spring election of last year. Clarke was one of the footings committee and had privately confessed the fraud when arrested. The jury recommended clemency.

KILLED BY AN EXPLOSION.

Fatal Accident in a Planing Mill at West Bay City.

BAY CITY, May 19.—The boiler in the planing mill of Moses Howe, operated by Fred C. Ross, on Midland street, West Bay City, exploded at noon Friday, killing George L. Closson, engineer, and fatally injuring John Scarth, wood-turner, and slightly injuring John Gregg, Stephen Alyea, Charles Scarth and Henry Neal. The boiler had been complained of by Closson as unsafe, and he had concluded to quit work as soon as he secured employment elsewhere. The mill was a complete wreck. A fire broke out after the explosion, but was quickly subdued. Low water is supposed to have been the cause. Buildings in Bay City a quarter of a mile away were shaken, and in some places windows were broken. In West Bay City the fronts were blown out of a number of stores. The loss will reach $5,000. Only nine hands were working at the time. Eight years ago a boiler blew up on almost the same spot and killed two men instantly.

Was Once a Resident of Michigan.

NEW YORK, May 21. — Andrew J. Graham, author of the system of shorthand which bears his name, died at his home in Orange, N. J., aged 64 years. Prof. Graham's parents moved to St. Joseph county, Mich., when he was but an infant, and he grew up there. He graduated at Spring Arbor college, and in the winter of 1862-63 was employed to report the doings of the Michigan legislature, and when it adjourned he became a general reporter and teacher of shorthand at Detroit.

Senator Stockbridge's Will.

KALAMAZOO, May 20.—The will of the late Senator Stockbridge, bearing date 1886, has been filed in the probate court. The petition signed by James L. Houghteling, of Chicago, a nephew of the late senator, names James H. L. Houghteling as executor, and the value of real and personal estate to be administered at $500,000. The senator's near relatives and the children's home at Kalamazoo are named as beneficiaries.

Michigan Congregationalists.

KALAMAZOO, May 18.—According to reports of Congregationalists, there are 344 churches of their faith in Michigan. The disbursements have been $63,000 less than last year. There are 40,000 children in the Sunday schools. Nine churches were organized during the past year and 1,396 have been added to the membership of the home missionary churches. The cost of the work was $126,463.89.

THE ELEMENTS.

Michigan Suffers from Rain, Wind, Hail, Snow and Frost.

Considerable Damage to Property Is Reported from Many Localities—Grain, Fruit and Garden Truck Cut Down by Frost.

LEFT RUIN IN ITS WAKE.

PORT HURON, May 19.—The damage to the fruit crops in this section by the hailstorm Thursday will be heavy. Nearly all the buds were picked off by the hail and those that remain are seriously injured. Wheat and rye were driven into the ground and water-soaked and the damage will be heavy. Several washouts are reported along the line of the Narrow Gauge railroad. In this city the storm was severe and Ullenbrusch's greenhouse was damaged $3,000 by hail.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 19.—Fruit men are considerably worried over the danger of a killing frost. Friday afternoon snow fell here at intervals, while farther north there was a heavy snowfall. At Lake City and Cadillac the snow is 6 inches deep. The temperature in the northern part of the lower peninsula is now at the freezing point. Most of the orchard fruit could now resist a severe frost, but the smaller fruits are in great danger.

DETROIT, May 20.—A heavy frost Friday and Saturday nights has caused great damage to grain, fruit and vegetables in various parts of the state.

EMMET, May 18.—A tornado Thursday night did a great deal of damage in this vicinity. Several houses and barns were demolished, and the trees in a number of orchards were uprooted.

HARRISVILLE, May 18. — During a storm Thursday night the upper dam on Mill creek gave way and the pent up water came rushing through the principal streets, carrying away two bridges, one barn and a number of smaller buildings, also letting loose 50,000 feet of logs, which piled up 3 or 4 feet high in the gardens and vacant lots. The loss will exceed $2,000.

ST. JOSEPH, May 18.—The hardest storm that has visited this section for years raged Thursday night. Considerable damage was done to fruit by the hail, most of the electric lights were burned out and much other damage done by lightning.

NILES, May 18.—Great damage to crops and otherwise was done in this vicinity by the storm of Thursday night. Corn and outfields are washed out. The hailstones cut the plants and vegetables to pieces.

HILLSDALE, May 18.—The hailstorm took in a strip about 2½ miles wide and there is scarcely a pane of glass left in the houses in its course. Much damage was done to crops.

BATTLE CREEK, May 18.—Reports arriving from northern Calhoun and southern Barry counties state that the hailstorm broke windows in nearly every farmhouse. Trees were stripped of foliage and crops ruined.

ACT OF A FIEND.

An Aged Detroit Woman Killed While Protecting Her Honor.

DETROIT, May 19.—Mrs. Mary O'Neal, aged about 70 years, was murdered at her home, 151 Franklin street, by Andy Corcoran, aged 42. Corcoran attempted a criminal assault upon the aged woman, and she died while struggling against his advances. After life was extinct he completed the crime, and then leaving his victim a corpse upon the floor walked deliberately from her room and informed the neighbors that she was dead. From the scene of his heinous offense he went to a place kept by Kit Lee, where he was arrested. His aged victim was feeble and had just returned from a hospital.

Grand Lodge K. of P.

BENTON HARBOR, May 18.—The Pythian grand lodge of Michigan convened in this city with a full attendance of representatives of the 163 lodges in this jurisdiction. The reports showed a net increase of nine lodges during the year, with an increased membership of 972. The balance in the treasury is $3,291.20, a decrease of $676.20 during the year, which is attributed to special work ordered by the last grand lodge. The rank of past chancellor was conferred on seventy knights during the session. It was decided to hold the next session in Kalamazoo. George A. Reynolds, of Saginaw, was elected grand chancellor.

Drummers Elect Officers.

DETROIT, May 19.—The annual session of the Michigan grand council of the United Commercial Travelers was held at the Hotel Cadillac Friday, with 250 present and Senior Counselor Albert Meyers, of Flint, in the chair. Several officers of the supreme council which convenes at Columbus next month were present, and the proceedings were secret. A. G. Ellis, of Saginaw, was elected grand counselor.

A Veteran Passes Away.

BATTLE CREEK, May 18.—Oscar Kendall, the famous colorbearer of the Twenty-second Michigan infantry, is dead. At the battle of Chickamauga he refused to surrender the regimental flag while twenty muskets were pointed at his breast until his superior officer ordered him to give it up.

Detroit Carters Win a Strike.

DETROIT, May 17.—All the truckmen and teamsters employed by the different cartage companies in this city went on strike against a proposed reduction in wages. About 150 men were out for one day, when the employers acceded to their demands.

Michigan Congregational Association.

KALAMAZOO, May 19.—The Michigan Congregational association closed its labors Friday after voting to meet next year at Olivet. W. C. Allen, of Dowagiac, will preach the sermon.

DETROIT, May 18.—Rev. Peter J. Leeson, S. J., formerly connected with St. Ignatius college, in Chicago, dropped dead Thursday night of paralysis.

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $13.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bath rooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. The Masons of Clinton are invited to attend masonic decoration at Manchester next Sunday, May 27th.

Mrs. E. R. Smith left last Thursday for a three week's visit with her father and other friends in Kansas.

H. H. Chapin, of Adrian, was in town Tuesday to deliver some new registers at the Lancaster and Edrose hotels.

The Episcopal social at Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle's last Thursday was very largely attended. Beceipts were nearly $12.

The Eastern Star social Saturday was a success socially and financially, notwithstanding the heavy rain. Had the weather been pleasant there would have been a great crowd.

The Maccabees will join the parade on Memorial day by invitation of the G. A. R. Both the invitation and acceptance were acts of courtesy which reflect credit on both organizations.

Alonzo Clark got home from his winter's sojourn in California last Thursday. He says they have a superb climate there, but he is not favorably impressed with the business of the western coast.

John Hause, the foreman of the Clinton Celery Co., is busy at their Bridgewater farm, between showers, superintending the setting of celery plants. They are getting more water than they need at present.

In the obituary notice of Ed. Rose, published last week, the omission of two words overlooked in the proof reading, made a bad misstatement of the facts. The intention was to state that the deceased left a mother, one sister and his brother's widow and two children.

The rainy weather Monday must have had a bad effect upon some people—probably made them irritable, for there were two or three discussions during the day which led to blows. Although no great personal damage was done, it does not reflect any great credit on the parties interested.

The committee of the Maccabees, appointed to solicit funds to build their part of the new block, consists of W. B. Keyser, Chas. Thompson and M. R. King. They are hustling themselves right lively and are meeting with good success, a large proportion of the necessary funds having been already pledged.

The Maccabee lodges, both tent and hive, are in a flourishing condition. They have a nice hall very conveniently arranged, lighted with electric lights and well furnished and carpeted, an organ being one of the articles of furniture. The tent is coming out on Decoration day and have ordered 40 caps and badges to use on that occasion.

D. St. John has improved his store front very much by extending it higher and giving it a fresh coat of paint.

Mrs. C. L. Draper has advertised the Draper livery stock for sale at auction. The sale will take place on the premises next Tuesday afternoon, May 29th.

A representative of Slayton's Lecture Bureau was in town last week interviewing several Clinton parties in regard to a lecture course for the coming winter.

Twenty-nine of the Eastern Star members drove to Tecumseh last Thursday evening in response to an invitation from the Tecumseh chapter. Although the weather was very unfavorable and many were kept at home in consequence, there was a goodly attendance. The officers of Golden Rod chapter exemplified the work. It proved a very pleasant and profitable session.

We understand that there is a strong prospect of having a building put up on the northeast corner of Jackson and east Chicago streets which will not only be a credit to the parties who build but to the village. The village has recently sold a portion of the land to Van Tuyle, Tate & Co. The members of the K. O. T. M. propose to go in with these parties and the village and erect a nice two-story block, the upper story for their own use and the lower floors for the use of Van Tuyle, Tate & Co. and the village. The village would use their lower floor for fire apparatus and equipments. Clinton 1 tempted fate in the matter of fire protection altogether too long, and the present opportunity should be embraced to provide the village with a suitable fire engine at an early day. The project of the Maccabees is also a worthy one. It will furnish them with an elegant hall headquarters and give both the tent and hive a home they can be proud of. When there are so many reasons in favor of the new combination block, and nothing against, it seems as though the enterprise ought to be a success.

DECORATION DAY PROGRAM.

The exercises on Memorial Day will be held at the Riverside cemetery at 2 o'clock p. m.

All old soldiers and Knights of Maccabees are requested to meet at town hall at 1 o'clock p. m.

CHASE & SANBORN'S SEAL BRAND Sun Cured Tea is without doubt the Best 50c Tea on the Market.

Avery & Co.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines [illegible] of 1893 [illegible] crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grain to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very condensed form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not bent in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanism, strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

M. E. CONKLIN, Agent,

At ALBAUGH'S OLD STAND, Railroad St., TECUMSEH.

I will make the season of 1894 with the following High-Bred Horses:

The Imported French Coach Stallion,

Sauvage, 1600.

A bay, star in forehead, four white feet, foaled July 21, 1889, bred by M. Founier, of Valonges, Department of La Manche, France.

TERMS, $15.00 for a standing colt, payable when colt is foaled. Any person parting with mares before foaling will be held responsible for insurance money.

Will stand at the following places:

WEDNESDAYS, — at Al. Macham's barn in Holloway.

SATURDAYS,—Central Hotel barn in Tecumseh.

OTHER WEEK DAYS—at my barn on the old Kn[illegible]ten farm, 1½ miles east of Britton.

Farmers are invited to call and examine this horse. Also

BLAZE,

The Clydesdale Stallion, will be in Tecumseh every Saturday. TERMS, $10.00 to insure a standing colt.

A CIRCUS
ON THE BILL-BOARDS

and a circus on circus day are two kinds of a thing. The greatest is usually on the Bill-boards, and the circus on Circus Day is consequently a disappointment. There is, of course, the occasional exception that proves the rule. McCormick Binders and Mowers are an exception. The promise on the "Bill-boards" is always fulfilled on "Circus Day." For years the makers of McCormick Grain and Grass Harvesters have been telling the World that they could and would at any time demonstrate the superiority of their machines in the actual competitive field test. The "Bill-boards" of other manufacturers have glaringly proclaimed that their machines are the best. But "Circus Day" came at length. The World's Fair urged all these manufacturers to take their machines into the field that the results might be compared. The McCormick was there; it went on. It's promises to the World were carried out. But how about the other "great and onlys"? They stayed at home consoling themselves with the reflection that "the people like to be humbugged," and their artists got up new pictures for the "Bill-boards." Before deciding on going into these field trials, the competitors of the McCormick well examined the crops to be cut, and realizing the severity of the contest they said to themselves: "We don't propose to come here and compete with the McCormick;"—"a live coward is better than a dead hero;" a sucker is born every minute, and we'll catch some of 'em anyhow." That policy may answer for the "Bill-board" sort of circus; it will not for the McCormick. Promises must not be broken. If McCormick machines are not better than all others, they must not be so advertised. If they are so advertised, every Binder, every Reaper and every Mower must be ready at a moment's notice to go out into the field and show it. That's business. Write to the McCormick Harvesting Machine Co., Chicago;—or, better yet, call at once on your nearest McCormick agent.

BRITTON BUDGET.

We go to press too early to get the details of decoration day.

We regret to learn that Mrs. E. Price is no better at present.

Mr. J. Osgood, of Morenci, visited his son, William last week.

The next meeting of the K. O. T. M. will be held the first Tuesday in June.

The Tecumseh kid ball team played our kids here last Saturday; score 13 to 19, in favor of Britton.

Messrs. Wilber and Cook, of North Farmington, are guests of E. F. Sink. They rode through on their wheels.

Wm. Smalley and wife, of Bay City, were visiting Wm. Osgood last week. They returned to their home Tuesday.

The memorial services held at the Union church last Sunday were well attended, and the church decorations were fine.

Remember next Saturday the Tecumseh H. S. club will meet our boys on our grounds. Batteries—Harris and Keusch; Biggs and Lowe.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Reformed church meets at the residence of Mrs. Hardy, next Wednesday, June 6th, at 2 p. m. All are invited.

It is rumored that our Sunday School is planning for an excursion to Detroit and Belle Isle this summer. We hope that their plans will be carried out.

As we go to press we learn the sad news of the death of our worthy citizen, Mr. W. Lenardson. The funeral will be held Friday at 10 o'clock a. m., at the house.

Hurrah for the glorious 4th of July! Britton will celebrate this year and do it right too. Committees are all appointed to look after the amusements and other proceedings.

When a young lady goes to the depot to take the train for home, and stands on the platform meditating until the train stops and starts again, and then asks the station agent why she did not get aboard, how else could he answer her only, "my girl you are dead in love and it effects your mind".

Our base ball team played the second game with the Lake Ridge team last Thursday, getting defeated as the score below will show. The grounds were in very bad shape, some of the boys playing in water up to their ankles.

Lake Ridge	3	1	3	0	2	0	1	3	1	—14

Our ball team went to Clinton last Saturday, and met the Clinton team on their grounds. The weather was the finest, and the boys run up a game which they may be proud of as the following score will show.

Clinton	0	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	0	—2
Britton	0	0	0	1	1	0	4	0	2	—8

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Mr. L. Daniels has been on the sick list for several days past.

Mrs. Lawson Warner is suffering from a severe attack of nervous prostration.

Considerable fear is felt that "Jack Frost" may pay the corn fields a visit this week.

Neer-do-weelers, it seems to us, would be a more fitting name than commonwealers, for Coxey's crowd of trampers.

Miss Tiny Ellis, who has been visiting the past week among friends in Pentecost, has returned to her home in Monroe county.

The residence of R. L. Rogers was broken into last week Monday night, and some provisions stolen from the cellar. Some suspected parties are being watched.

Mrs. Virginia Halladay, of Clinton, spent a part of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Daniels, of this place, and her many friends were pleased to receive a call from her and renew old friendship.

While the ladies of a certain place were engaged recently in cleaning a hall used for the purpose of holding religious meetings, one lady proposed to put up a notice requesting the gentlemen to not spit tobacco juice on the floor; whereupon another suggested that this was unnecessary, as no gentleman ever did such a thing.

We respectfully submit the question, whether it is a right and proper thing to do, for a prominent man and law-maker, to permit the young men of the surrounding country, to assemble at his place and spend the Sabbath playing base ball. The question of Sabbath observance is becoming a burning one, and the man who wishes to command the respect of the better class of the community, cannot afford to ignore it.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mrs. Ed. Wisner, has been sick for more than a week.

Mrs. Prince, who recently came from Florida, has been having chills.

Mrs. Hause officiated at Mrs. Bert Billington's funeral last Sunday.

Died, May 27th, of consumption, Lottie, beloved wife of Herbert Billington. Everything that the love of husband or parent could suggest has been done to save the sweet young life that has just gone out. The funeral occured Sunday, Rev Williams of Tipton, officiating.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

B. F. DePuy was in Toledo on business Monday.

The frost Sunday night did no damage in this section to speak of.

Will Wescott, of Tecumseh, called on friends in this village Sunday.

Opal Bishop, of Delta, Ohio, is the guest of Florence Thompson this week.

Mr. Dole and Chas. Brown, of Adrian, attended church here Sunday morning.

Mrs. Libbie Hatton, of Ypsilanti, Sundayed with her cousin Mrs. Sarah Rappleye.

Ed Black, of Manistee, spent Thursday of last week at the home of Mrs. John Arner.

Miss Dewey, of Cambridge, is spending a portion of the week with Jennie Underwood.

The ladies' of the W. C. T. U. will give an ice cream lawn social, in the near future.

T. H. Temple received a fine catch of white fish from S. J. Arner, of Harbor Springs, Saturday.

Presiding Elder Davis occupied the pulpit Sunday night, conducting the quarterly meeting services.

A very fine program is being prepared for childrens' day, which will be celebrated on Sunday, June 10th.

Rev. W. J. Clack, of New Boston, was in the village Saturday calling on friends. The Elder is in quite poor health.

E. L. Lowe, J. D. Arner, Leila Sutton, Mattie Rappleye, Florence Thompson and Opal Bishop attended the C. E. county convention held at Dundee Saturday.

Mrs. Reuben Gunn, who has been in very poor health for several months, passed away Tuesday afternoon. The funeral services will be held at the church Thursday morning.

The funeral services of J. L. Remington were held at the church Monday morning, Rev. J. P. Varner, of Tecumseh, officiating, assisted by Rev. Cansfield and Elder Gulick. The remains were taken to Tecumseh for interment.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Remember social at James McIntyre's to-night.

Arthur Curtis, of Adrian, was in town Saturday.

Remember the Griffith Humbug Show to-morrow evening.

Jake Winne, of Adrian, was down calling on a few friends last Thursday.

T. S. Keenan, wife and daughter, of Fairfield, spent Sunday with L. C. Winship.

Miss Winnie Richard, of Tecumseh, was a guest of the Misses Florence and Mary Kishpaugh over Sunday.

Milo Dole and family, and Chas. Anthony and family, all of Adrian, were visitors at D. P. Anthony's Saturday and Sunday.

The school exhibition given here Monday evening, was a success, the scholars did great credit to themselves and their teacher by their efforts in single pieces and dialogue work.

We are informed that Wm. Cox took the first degree in Masonry last Friday at Tecumseh. It looks as though Bill had some misgivings as to the outcome of the initiation for he was accompanied by a doctor, a druggist and telegraph operator—significance in the combination.

Time—Saturday evening, May 26th.
Place—Holloway, Mich.
Cast of characters—Verdent Squire, a git to the front young man, two young ladies.
Plot—Young man treats young ladies to ice cream, then escorts them towards home. Squire foreseeing the end of first act, and wishing to secure the company of one of the young ladies, takes, a friend up the road for a private interview, selecting a position in the path of the trio—trio arrives—Squire: (ahem-ahem,) "catches on." When near home young lady makes a brake and leaves Squire to do with himself as he likes, gaze after her fleeting form or go home.

MACON MUSIC.

Bert Day, of Tecumseh, spent Sunday in our village.

Dr. Morden is in Ann Arbor for a few days, so don't get sick.

Mrs. Wm. Osgood is suffering with an attack of sciatic rheumatism.

Joe Sage's new barn will soon be completed. George Kempf has the job and he is a hustler.

Mr. Wm. Smalley and wife, of Bay City, visited their cousin Wm. Osgood and family, last Saturday.

Mrs. Fowell, of Moscow, Mich., is visiting her sisters Mrs Isaiah Hendershot and Mrs. Isaac Mills.

Mrs. Nelson Lewis, of Addison, came out to attend the funeral of her sister, Mrs. Minerva Chapin, and spent a few days with her brother, Nelson Skinner.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their next monthly tea meeting at the home of Miss Charlotte Oven, one week from Friday, June 8th. All are cordially invited.

The ladies aid society of the Reformed church were very pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hendershot last Thursday afternoon. There were about thirty present and all report such an enjoyable time that we predict future visits to the host and hostess.

Miss Anna Pennington had quite an unfortunate mishap last Sunday afternoon when returning from the Friends church. We did not learn the particulars but her horse became unmanagable and she was thrown from her carriage, breaking her collar bone and otherwise bruising her quite badly.

OBITUARY.

Died, in Tecumseh, May 17, 1894, Mrs. Noah S. Burroughs, aged 79 years.

Electa S. Burroughs, eldest daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth Hunter, was born in Seneca county, New York, on March 16, 1815. She was married to Noah S. Burroughs on January 2nd, 1833, and the following year Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs settled in what is now the township of Franklin, Lenawee county, Michigan. side by side they shared all the burdens and cares incident to a pioneer life, that led to comfort and prosperity. In the spring of 1865 they removed to Tecumseh where they resided, honored and respected by all who knew them, until last December, when the loving and beloved husband and kind, indulgent father was called home. Mrs. Burroughs' health had not been good for some time previous and the great shock caused by Noah's death and the ever increasing feeling of lonliness caused by his absence, hastened the reunion of husband and wife and the two children who had gone before. The separation was but five months, when her body was placed by loving hands beside that of Noah's, in the beautiful Tecumseh cemetery. For many years Mrs. Burroughs was a consistent member of the Congregational church in Franklin, and later of the Presbyterian church, of Tecumseh. Mrs. Elizabeth Mills, of Dallas, Texas, Mrs. Mahala Packard, of Tecumseh, Mich., Nelson T. Burroughs, of Cherokee, Iowa, and Mrs. Ida Vail, of Rock Rapids, Iowa, are the surviving children and they mourn the loss of as good a mother as God ever gave. The funeral services were held at her late residence and conducted by her pastor, Rev. C. M. Brown. Many of her early friends and relatives, with all the surviving children except Mrs. Mills, were present. The following, to which all who knew Mrs. Burroughs, will subscribe, was contributed by a near neighbor, and one of the many good lady friends of the deceased:

"Another of earth's noble ones has passed from the shores of time, and crossed the silent river. She had nearly reached her four-score years, and like the ripened grain, waiting the reaper's sickle, she was ready when the Master said: 'Come up higher.' Her lamp was trimmed and burning. Her going out from her home has caused a cloud of sorrow to hang, not only over that home, but many other households where she has been so long and lovingly known. For it can be truly said of her:

"None knew her but to love her;
None named her, but to praise."

Her life has not been one free from care and toil; but cheerfully, nobly, she met its many changes. In this long life many are the mile stones passed. Yet she was not one who lived in the past, but was ever interested in the present, its progress and improvements. She was one who never grew old. The young and the old were alike attracted to her, and from this cheerful, christian life there eminated an atmosphere of holy, genial influence which surrounded her in her home or in whatever circle she was called to mingle. Her words of council and advice were wise and kind, and though we hear her voice no more, 'she yet speaketh.' She lived not for herself, but to benefit and comfort others; not only those of her own household, but was ever ready to care for the needy, and ofttimes her home became the haven of rest to weary, aching hearts. "She rests from her labors and her works do follow her.' For several months she has been very feeble and at times a great sufferer. In these last months she has been constantly and tenderly cared for by her two daughters, Mrs. H. Packard and Mrs. Ida Vail, and to them it was a pleasant task to minister to her every need. She is gone, and we can say with the psalmist: 'He giveth his beloved sleep.'"

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

A POPULAR ELOCUTIONIST.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, of Elkton, Ohio, Restored to Health.

Mrs. Reynold, the well-known elocutionist and authoress, says she has suffered with congestion of the lungs, catarrh of the head, and was troubled with a bad cough. She had tried a number of physicians, but they all failed to cure her. She was induced to try Pe-ru-na, and immediately a marked change took place. After using Pe-ru-na her cough ceased, and in a short time her other ailments were cured. She is now completely restored to health, and gives all the credit to Pe-ru-na.

Speaking of lung diseases, Dr. Hartman says in a recent lecture: "For the multitudes of people that I treat annually for every imaginable form of throat and lung disease, Pe-ru-na is my invariable prescription. People come hundreds of miles, at great expense, to consult me for acute and chronic coughs, to return home with some advice and a bottle of Pe-ru-na, which they can continue to get at the nearest drug-store; and the fame I enjoy in the treatment of such troubles comes from the use of this wonderful compound."

A free book on chronic diseases of the lungs, chronic catarrh, etc., sent by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio.

Chatauqua.

The Chautauqua season of 1894 will be unusually brilliant. A complete program of the events, containing other valuable information of this popular resort, will be sent on application to A. J. Smith, G. P. A., Lake Shore R'y, Cleveland, O.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Caroline S. Randall was born in Hudson, Mass., April 21, 1810, and died in Tecumseh, Michigan, May 18, 1894, in her eighty-fifth year. In 1834 she was married in Massachusetts and in 1837 moved to New York, where she remained until 1854 when she came to Michigan and settled in Tecumseh. For forty years she has been a resident of this town, during which time she has witnessed many changes. Five children were born to her, two sons and three daughters. The sons preceded her to the spirit land. Mrs. Primrose and Mrs. Anderson, of this place, and Mrs. Tremaine, of Chicago, her three daughters, live to mourn the absence of their devoted mother. Mrs. Randall gave herself to the Lord and joined the Methodist Episcopal church when she was ten years old, and for seventy-four years she lived a beautiful consistent life. She was active in all kinds of church work, being identified with the W. F. M. S., the W. H. M. S. and W. C. T. U. God's people were her people, and nothing delighted her so much as to know of the success of the Master's cause. She was a woman of many and great excellences. Her devotion to the church of her choice, her bright, cheerful, consistent piety, her diligent attendance on all the means of grace, even to the end of her long life -these are all in the book of God's remembrance, and prized by her pastors and membership of the church, to whom her life was a benediction. Her christian experience was clear. There was no uncertain sound in it. A few hours before her death, when asked by the writer if darkness or doubts troubled her she smiled and said: "No, it is all well." Living and dying she made a profound impression upon all who knew her life. When the last hour of her earthly life came she was not caught unawares. In the beautiful cemetery of Tecumseh her body rests, but in the glory world her spirit awaits the coming of all her loved ones.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

The following resolutions were passed by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society:

Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove by death our beloved sister, Caroline Randall, and thus leave our church and the W. F. M. S., of which she was a faithful and honored member, sorely bereaved,

Resolved, That in her death we mourn the loss of one who loved her church and was true to all of its interests, one whose earnest prayers and efforts were for the advancement of the cause of Christ at home and the spread of the gospel abroad.

Resolved, That we, the members of the W. F. M. S., will persevere in our labors for the cause she loved so well.

Resolved, That our heartfelt sympathy be extended to the bereaved family, praying that the tender ties now broken may be reunited in that happy home above.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. $100 REWARD, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

THE BOYS IN GRAY.

BY COL. WILL L. VISSCHER.

WAS more than three decades ago—
A long, long time away—
That we were jolly boys in blue,
Now we are boys in gray.

A poet-friend has said of you:
"He's on the craft that sails
In glowing seas of constant youth,
Where boyhood never fails."

So at the end of many years
Along Life's rugged way,
The blue has mingled with the skies
And we are boys in gray.

The true and brave of all the hosts
That wore the Blue and Gray,
And fought for what they deemed the right,
Are done with war to-day.

The rosy, round-limbed Queen of Peace
Has broken War's array;
His hosts, disarmed, are silver-haired,
And all are boys in gray.

BRAVE HEARTS AND TRUE.

By Jenny Fairman Smith.

"And spring's fairest flowers
In gratitude strew
O'er those who have cherished
The red, white and blue."

The Boy.

The sun shone in at the east window. A mother's voice called up the attic stairs: "Silas, Silas, where's my little drummer boy? Time to march among them weeds in the posy field."

Swift came the answer, and there was sunshine on the woman's careworn face as she listened for the sound of that little drummer boy's feet and his childish voice calling:

"Yep. I've turned out, mother. Comin'. I'll make the enemy skedaddle—an' then I'll drum."

The neighbors said: "They never seen two folks set so much store by each other as Silas Blodgett and his wife, an' that now sence Silas was dead an' gone the little one an' the mother was jist wrapped up in each other, livin' there all alone."

"OUR FLAG."

Down into the kitchen clattered the boy's feet. Merry blue eyes were raised to true blue, thoughtful ones in a glance that meant much, and the boy ran into the garden, while the mother stepped quickly to and fro laying the breakfast table. This now old-fashioned mother, in her tidy "sprigged" calico gown and clean brown checked gingham apron, stepping briskly back and forth between stove and table in the one big "living room" made a pleasant picture. Breakfast started, she crossed the room quickly to a loom in one corner and began to weave; for the neighbors all agreed that "Widow Blodgett's rag carpets was wove better than any they had ever seen," and Neighbor Wagner said:

"I never did see nothin' so handsome as the hit-an'-miss pattern Widder Blodgett wove for me—but I tell ye there wa'n't no hit-an'-miss about the weavin'."

So the busy hands worked on weaving a part of her daily "stint" before breakfast—weaving for bread.

Outside the birds and the boy whistled.

Soon the sound of a drum told the mother the enemy in her posy bed was routed by her brave little drummer boy.

The boy ran in to breakfast.

Down went his drum. Off came the soldier cap, and from it fell a flag—our flag.

The child ran around the room, waving the flag above his head and watching its changing folds and colors.

"Let's have the flag with us for breakfast, mother."

The mother nodded and smiled. So the flag was fastened in the top of the old-fashioned castor.

They sat down to the table and the east sun just touched lightly the child's forehead and shone full on the mother's head as it was bowed reverently before eating the "daily bread."

The hungry child was full, always, of questions.

"Is God keeping father for us, mother?"

"Yes, deary," said the gentle voice.

"And will He keep him till—well, till we move out of our bodies and go up, up, up to the sky?"

"Yes, Silas."

"I should think, tho', He'd lend him to us, mother. Then father would take care uv us and you wouldn't hev ter work so hard; but I help take care, don't I, mother? But why don't God send father back? Yer posies kum back, on risin' day in the spring, some uv 'em, but father don't never kum back. Why?"

"God knows best, my child," said the voice of the one who had loved and lost.

"Is father dead like them weeds?"

"No, child, yer father ain't dead like the weeds. Think always that he's like mother's plant yer love so much."

"O! I know—the livefrever. Yep. I like that there posey. It's a brave 'un. It ain't afraid uv Jack Frost, and it lives frever and a day, don't it, mother?"

"Yes, dear," said the mother, slowly, as her thoughts flew back to the happy days when another Silas and she had planted that posy bed.

"What's the flag got three colors in it for, mother?"

"Because, my boy, every color means somethin'—somethin' fer you to be—somethin' that Washington was. That there flag uv ourn talks; listen, an' I'll tell you. The red says: 'Be brave.'"

The childish voice repeated: "Ther red says to 'be brave.'"

"Remember that ferever, my boy."

"What does the white say?"

"The white says: 'Be pure,' an' the blue says: 'Be true.'"

"The red,
The white,
The blue;
Be brave,
Be pure,
Be true.

"That's a nice rhyme, ain't it, mother?"

"Yes, my boy, an' it's more then that, too."

"Yep." The child looked up thoughtfully at the flag that had been draped around Washington's picture ever since he could remember, while his mother fastened the little flag in his soldier cap.

"Here we go, me an' the flag; no, the flag an' me, on the doublequick. Good-by, mother; guess I'll pick uh piece uv livefrever fer teacher;" and off ran the child's feet toward the village school.

The Soldier.

The years passed on. Dark clouds arose. The drums and fifes werec alling in the village street.

That morning the sun shone on a brave deed—the Widow Blodgett was giving her all. Her hand trembled as she pointed silently up at the wall where the calm eyes of Washington looked down from under the red, white and blue. She wiped her eyes on her checked apron as she followed him to the door.

The mother and her soldier son paused in the doorway. One more kiss—a voiceless prayer on the mother's lips—a backward glance and wave of a soldier cap, and the man's feet marched bravely forth to meet what might come.

The tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet sounded drearily in that mother's ears, as she leaned over the gate and waved her apron and looked down the village street long after the tear-dimmed eyes saw nothing before them.

Brave Hearts and True.

How that mother worked on alone, weaving, hoping, praying—and watching for news from the front—sending tender, loyal, scrawling letters; and occasionally there came a brave word of cheer from Silas far, far away.

One morning a shadow fell on the floor as the widow's shuttle was bobbing to and fro with its busy, clickity clickity click, weaving and hoping for news.

Then the village doctor's kind voice said: "Good morning."

"Yer carpet ain't quite done yet, doctor. Seems ez if I can't do my stent till after the mail train gits in, but I'll do my best. What? Yez didn't kum for the carpet? Then—O, doctor, what is it? Yer son ain't? Bad news? No, taint fer me, not my Silas, my brave boy."

The head dropped forward on the loom, and one hand tried vainly to push away the words.

The doctor brushed his hand across his eyes and tried again to read the words his son had written:

DEAR FATHER: Silas Blodgett fell at Shiloh. Break the news to his mother as best you can. Tell her Comrade W. sends these lines to her:

"Where the foremost flag was flying
Pierced by many a shot and shell;
Where the bravest men were dying,
There your gallant Silas fell."

I found him, father, and gave him a drink of water from my canteen, but I saw he was going fast. He could just whisper: "Tell her—tell mother—her boy—died—on the field." I thought he was gone, but he said: "Tell her—the red—says be—brave—mother'll know, an' try ter be."

So they brought him home to his mother. May 30, 1894, the village doc-

"THEY'VE PUT A FLAG ON IT TO-DAY."

tor's grandson was leading some one who groped her way with unseeing eyes toward a grave in the churchyard.

"This feels like it."

"Yes, that's right, granny, an' they've put a flag on it to-day."

"Hey they? I can't see it any more. I'm glad it's there an' so would he, be. Silas, he set great store by this here posy I've brought. It's liveforever—an' so I thought I'd plant a root fer him here to-day, an' then when I can't come no more it will be green an' fresh—an' brave-like."

So the loving, wrinkled hands, guided by the child, planted this Memorial day "posy"—the "posy" the dead soldier sleeping under the red, white and blue had thought long years ago was a "brave un."

THE BILL PASSED THE HOUSE.

The Soldier's First Battle.

His first battle! What soldier does not think of it to-day? The years have rolled backward; he feels again the exaltation of youth and the relentless determination to do or die. He remembers the grim irony of the man who had already "smelled powder" and had heard the song of the bullets about him.

He remembers, too, the thought of the dear ones at home, the prayer and then—the battle! His veins thrill as of old, he seems endowed with the strength of ten. He is not dreaming; no, he is living over the supreme moment of his life.

Remember the Living.

In strewing flowers on the graves of the illustrious dead, remember to cast a few upon the pathway of the living. The old soldier, perhaps crippled and poor, deserves gratitude as well as the comrade whose name is carven on a monument. He, too, offered his life to his country.

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by J. J. Orr. 3

Again to the sound of fife and drum the gray-haired veterans of battles and campaigns keep time to the music that cheered them as they plodded through the mud or dust, under the glowing sun or drizzling rain, towards those fields where they fought so nobly for their country and the principles of liberty. Not now, as of old, do they march forth to fight, but they bear to the "bivouac of the dead" the tokens of love and memory, and lay them over the mounds beneath which lies the dust once sentient with patriotism and courage. Cornelia of old cast the dust of her murdered sons into the air, and in time there sprang from it, as from the fabled dragon's teeth, an avenger of their blood. Our newer, better republic needs no red-handed Marius to deal death to her enemies. She has laid the dust of her murdered sons on a thousand battle fields, and from it have sprung forbearance, mutual forgiveness and a patriotism bounded by no lines of politics or faction.

The veterans of her fields and camps sleep dreamlessly in numberless peaceful churchyards, and though their tombstones bore only the words: "He was a soldier of the republic," the epitaph would still be one more glorious in the eyes of his countrymen that any of the records of "storied urn" which tell not to the living the story of liberty imperiled and rescued. We honor the dead soldier as the living soldier, with our meed of praise. He stands to us not as the embodiment of a brute force of despotism, not as the stern henchman of war, but as the type of citizenship which in time of danger risks everything for his country's honor, dares and does all for her glory. Our standing army to-day would not cover one-fourth the shortest of our frontier lines; but in the hour of America's peril every artisan, clerk, farmer, every man able to raise a hand in her defense becomes a warrior for her honor. Ask the gray-haired veteran, laying so tenderly the emblems of immortality over the grass-grown grave of the dead: "What is the bulwark of our nation's might?" and hear him answer: "The strong arms and true hearts of her sons, the prayers and self-sacrifice of her daughters."

The red tide has ebbed from Shiloh, Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness, and the souls of brave men that it left dead behind it, the tears and groans that were the echo of its shot and shell, the heart-break and agony of widows and orphans, have risen to the throne of the Great All Father, and thence again human sorrow and suffering have descended to earth, robbed of pain and hideousness, and have fructified the seed of good lying hidden in the bosom of calamity and made it bear rich fruit to all the ages. Thus the nation's dead have become eternal. Every stride of the freed slave toward moral and intellectual liberty is the impulse given by their hands. Every sound of free and happy labor, where once the wailing of the oppressed was heard, is the Te Deum of their souls, every heart-throb of progress a pulsation from those silent breasts.

Let us then keep in memory their lives by this yearly pilgrimage to the shrine of glory and honor—the soldiers' graves. Let us lead our children by the hand to the cemetery, and, as Hamilcar caused his son Hannibal to be led to the altars of the gods, that he might swear there undying hatred to Rome, let us pledge our children to eternal love of freedom. Let us sit with them at the feet of the veterans, and, as they tell their stories of stricken fields and dreary marches, listen to the pean of patriotism that swells through even the humblest of those tales, and refresh our souls as from living fountains.

We thank God for Peace, with all her blessings, her happy homes, her hum of commerce—but let us be grateful also for a war which revealed to this nation the greatness of her sons. No longer does the proud south stand aloof, seeing in the sons of the north the progeny of puritan and peasant; no longer does the north view the sons of the southland as partakers of worn-out theories of the aristocracy of blood. The scales have fallen from the eyes, and we are brothers where once we were foemen, sons of the same divine Liberty who stands on the highest mountain top and in the lowest valley of our land, challenging the world to love her by the calm dignity of her mien and the noble ideals she creates. Let the strains of Dixie be mingled with our anthem, for there is no longer any south or north, but one union, girt by seas and lakes, one country, reigning in the hearts of the people, one hope for us and for our children.

When the last veteran shall be gathered to the breast of earth and shall speak only with the dumb eloquence of these myriad mounds, the lesson of his patriotism shall still be repeated, and with each recurring season the gathered sweetness of the first fruits of the springtime shall be brought to these sacred shrines as emblems that as long as the sun shines to call forth the hidden life from the soul, as long as the rain falls and the dews bedew the verdure in the hills and meadows and the sky arches above us, so long shall the liberty the soldier loved be cherished by the nation as its dearest possession.

Once a Year.

Mildred—Why, Amy, surely you are not tinting your cheeks?

Amy (rouge duster in hand)—Yes; this is Decoration day, you know.

BILL WENTZEL, HERO.

BY ELISA ARMSTRONG.

The tramp leaned over the cemetery fence and nodded at the old soldier who, though the Memorial day exercises were over, was still busy over a grave.

"Ain't been buryin' no union in here, have ye?"

The old soldier laughed. "No, we ain't."

"I was one of 'em," the tramp remarked, "—th Illinois."

The old soldier straightened up. "Was ye? Know Bill Wentzel?"

The tramp caught his breath.

"Fellow as named th' colonel Old Undertaker, ye know."

"Yes—I knew him."

"This here's his grave."

"Bill Wentzel's—grave?"

"Yes; his widder had trouble findin' him after Manassas. Only recognized him by th' eagle tattooed on his arm. Bill used to say that eagle fairly screamed when he had th' rheumatism," the old soldier laughed; "Bill was grit, though; saved my life once and swore he'd have it if I told."

"AIN'T BEEN BURYIN' NO UNION IN HERE?"

"Widder livin' yet?"

"Yep. Thinks Bill's a bigger hero 'n' old Grant—'most makes me ashamed o' comin' home sometimes."

The tramp drew his arm across his face. "Bill wa'n't no saint," he said, hoarsely.

"She's forgot all that now. Say, comrade, I live near her. Come over and talk a bit; she'll—"

The tramp hastily picked up his stick with the little red bundle on the end of it.

"Guess not, comrade; must move on now—been a movin' on sence Manassas."

He walked rapidly away, though with a slight limp.

"Pshaw!" said the old soldier, watching him. "Gassin' about Bill I forgot to ask his name. Too late now, though," he glanced at his crutch.

Clear of the town, the tramp halted and pulled up his ragged sleeve. On his dirty arm was a tattooed eagle.

"Bill Wentzel's grave, an' Bill was a hero," he muttered; "best let him rest."

Then he limped forward in the twilight.

HONOR THE SOLDIER DEAD.

Preparations are being everywhere made to celebrate Memorial day, which is nearing us with its sacred memories and tender influences. Time is carrying us steadily further away from the scenes of civil strife, and nature has covered the red-streaked battlefields of the nation with a carpet of verdure. The sound of the cannon and the clash of swords, the tread of mighty armies and the sobs of the brave boys on the tented field and of loved ones at home, grow more and more indistinct as the years go by and new generations come upon the scene of action. The bitter animosity which was engendered between sections has been mellowed, and the angel of peace, sweet, holy peace, spreads his white wings over the lakes and plains and mountains of the north and over the cotton fields and cotton beds of the south. Mighty changes have been wrought in thirty years. But a myriad of graves are among us, the same graves that were filled from '61 to '65. Chairs have been vacant in our homes during all this time; the empty uniform and the battered sword are still in our closets. We still remember and love the boys who went out from our loving embrace to face danger and death upon the battlefield. Year by year the graves become more numerous in the cemetery. Year by year the veterans grow grayer, and the strong man of '61 is marching with feebler step onward toward the great final reunion. Such are the only changes that the years have made in the features of Memorial day.

It is becoming in a people to remember the sacrifices of the soldier who gave or offered his life for them and their interests. Rome, proud, imperious Rome, forgot the men who had fought her battles, and reveled in luxury while some of them languished in prison cells. America is appreciative of her brave. Once a year she scatters flowers upon their graves, and all the time their memories are embalmed in her grateful heart. Any people who will pause to drop a tear upon the tombs of their dead soldiers, have reason to respect themselves and to claim the respect of others; and while we are remembering the dead our hearts will swell with thanksgiving that we are in the shadow of a flag of a united republic, whose different sections are animated by a common hope, a common inspiration and a common destiny.—Farmers' Voice.

The "Unknown" Dead.

The love of valor is as old as time itself and the soldier's truest monument is not chiseled of stone or marble; it is built of self-sacrifice, cemented with his blood. Say not "forgotten" if the humble headstone reads "unknown;" in the hearts of the people it will mean "hero."

TRUE & CO., Box 400, Augusta, Maine.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates and cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES, and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages, has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASES.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information, and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 32 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you, it will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

Memorial Day Properly Observed With A Fine Program, an Imposing Parade, and a Large Gathering.

It has almost passed into a proverb that Decoration Day brings a rain storm. This year was no exception to the general rule, and although it did not actually rain, it was cold and chilly and threatened rain to such an extent as to interfere very much with the attendance.

The committees, appointed to weave the flowers, reported at the Armory early in the forenoon and flowers were brought in abundantly. In fact the supply was beyond expectation, for the cold, rainy weather has delayed the blooming season two or three weeks. But a few flowers each, donated from dozens and perhaps hundreds of willing hearts and hands, made an abundant supply. All the G. A. R. members and the military companies were provided with neat bouquets and the wreaths for decorating the graves were gorgeously gotten up. The soldiers' monument on military square was elaborately trimmed with a combination of bunting, evergreens and flowers and a platform for the speakers and choir was erected in the center of the cross-walk, a few feet east of the monument railing. At one o'clock the weather looked so threatening that the plan to hold the literary exercises out doors was abandoned, and the armory drill room was hastily converted into an auditorium, by bringing in several loads of camp chairs, and here the program was carried out in splendid shape.

Shortly after two o'clock Mr. P. S. McKinnon, President of the Day, called the crowd to order and gave a few introductory remarks upon the nature of Decoration Day and why it should be observed.

Then followed vocal music by the choir, a chorus entitled, "Then lay your Garlands o'er their Tombs." The choir consisted of Messrs. Strong, Conkling and Tansley, Mrs. C. H. Morley and Mrs. L. M. Kellogg, with Miss Jennie Root accompanying. It is needless to say that the vocal selections were all of a superior character.

Rev. Frank Fistler offered an invocation and the choir gave another chorus, "They died not in vain."

Grant Fellows, Esq., of Hudson, the orator of the day, was then introduced, and gave an eloquent and very appropriate address. Lack of time to get it in type compels us to omit it here. It is well worthy of publication, and our readers can have the pleasure of perusing it entire next week.

The choir sang another chorus, "The Fallen Brave," and Rev. W. R. Blachford then pronounced the benediction. The entire program occupied less than an hour, but it was of superior merit throughout.

The procession was then formed by chief marshal B. J. Garlinghouse, assisted by Jas. A. Boyd, and marched to Ottawa street, thence to Chicago, thence west on Chicago to Union, and thence to the Cemetery in the following order:—The Drum Corps; Beers Post G. A. R.; The Boys' Brigade; Co. C, M. N. G.; the Floral Car; Officers and Clergy in carriages; the Bicycle Club; citizens in carriages. The parade was quite a surprise, for it surpassed all expectations. The boys' brigade presented a neat appearance. The Co. C boys never looked better. The floral car, drawn by the engine team, laden with feminine beauty and covered with bunting and flowers, was the leading attraction in the parade. The wheelmen turned out over forty in number and constituted one of the attractive features in the procession.

Upon arriving at the cemetery the procession marched to the circle near the center of the grounds where the decorating emblems were distributed. A detail from Co. C proceeded to cover the graves of the deceased members of the company. A detail of Beers Post, with the Boys' Brigade, covered the graves of all deceased soldiers. The main portion of the Post and Co. C marched to the G. A. R. lot, where the burial service of the order was rehearsed by Chaplain Barnes and Comrades Sweet and Smalledge. A detail of Co. C fired the accustomed salute and the formal exercises at the cemetery were over.

The procession then marched back to town and disbanded, but the crowd lingered for awhile, as if loath to leave the beautiful grounds. Our evergreen cemetery is growing more and more enticing with each returning year. That city of the dead, which is now the home of so many of our loved ones, where sympathy, prayer and remembrance meet in unison, is becoming more and more a hallowed spot in this community. Memorial day appeals to our tenderest sympathies, enlists our warmest love, kindles our patriotism anew, and every year in the midst of May flowers, teaches us the ever recurring lesson of the Brotherhood of Man. Truly, it is our noblest and brightest holiday.

THE CIRCUS IS COMING.

The first circus of the season will visit this place on Thursday, June 7th, and exhibit on the lot east of school house. Surely this item of news will please the young folks, the children, the older ones also. The Nelson's World Show is one that has a standing record for presenting a good performance, in one big ring in the good old style. A right up to date one ring show, with excellent talent in the livliest of riders, acrobats and gymnasts, aerial artists, trained ponies, school of dogs, trained cock-a-toos, pigeons, etc., is far more satisfactory and enjoyable than a lot of cheap acts conglomerated in confusion in two or three rings, and people like it better. It is announced that Mr. Nelson runs his show strictly on business and moral principles. Nothing is permitted to appear that will mar the pleasure of those skeptically inclined. Neither are the usual army of fakers (often seen following in the wake of shows) allowed to follow this organization. Families are made perfectly at home with good treatment and special attention paid to the comfort of ladies and children without escorts. The long standing reputation of the Nelsons throughout Europe, America, and the dominion of Canada shall not be jeopardized by allowing any catch-penny affair to be connected with their shows. Fifty great celebrated artists will appear at every performance; fully two hours and a half of solid enjoyment is afforded for 25 cents, a price which is surely within the means of everybody. Let all attend. Afternoons at one o'clock. Evenings at eight o'clock.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Rooms, May 21, 1894.

Regular session. Present: The President, Recorder, Trustees Boyd, Satterthwaite, Heesen, Hall, Wright. Absent, trustee Smith.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The Marshal reported that the lock-up had been cleaned; the alleys were cleaned and all unwholesome substance removed, and that he and the Deputy Marshal had served notices on all persons whose sidewalks neeed repairing.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were presented and refered to the finance committee.

C. A. Wright, purchasing agent, $39.57; Ed. Prichard, repairing pump, $1.50; C. F. Field, printing, $2.00; Jas. H. Aten, deputy marshal, $2.10; William Mellon, labor, $10.75; Casper Cook, labor, $10.75; E. Ames, labor, $6.63; A. Hyde, Street Commissioner, $17.00; H. W. Stevens, marshal, $29.25.

WATER WORKS.

A. Park, labor, 75 cents; Tecumseh Fence Co., $10.35.

Finance comittee reporting favorably on all of above bills. Recorder was instructed to draw his order on the treasurer for the said several amounts.

On motion, supported, Geo. W. Frasier and Geo. Heesen were appointed as members of the board of review.

The President reported that he had received a communication from the chief engineer of the C. J. & M. Ry., relating to the two water tanks they had agreed to buy of the village, and saying that if village would hold them for a time they would take them.

Moved and supported that the Council adjourn. Carried.

W. J. INGERSOLL, Recorder.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 28th day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Margaret C. Hendershot, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles Burridge, administrator upon said estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be distributed to those persons entitled thereto according to law, that he may be discharged and his bond cancelled, and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 25th day of June, next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next of kin of said insane person, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendancy of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

Congress of Beauties—German Village—so many things to see you must come early and stay late at the Armory Friday afternoon, June 8th.

Grant Fellows favored the HERALD with a friendly call during his stay in town yesterday afternoon. We feel it our duty to congratulate him upon his memorial address. He made an excellent impression.

Presiding Elder Davis conducted the services at the M. E. church last Sabbath morning. He preached an eloquent discourse, after which the communion rite was administered to a large number of members.

Arrangements are in progress which will result in the giving of a concert by the Whiting chorus at an early date. This combination has met with an enthusiastic reception in Adrian, and will doubtless draw a full house here.

Lucius Hough, who lived in Brownville, has been in ill health for many months. Recently he has been much worse and finally gave up the struggle last Saturday. The funeral was conducted Wednesday forenoon from the M. E. Church, Rev. J. P. Varner officiating.

A large number of Tecumseh Masons attended the Masonic Decoration services at Manchester last Sunday. When the rain came on, a merchant of that place opened his store and supplied the boys with coats to protect them from the storm. This was a practical illustration of the benefits of protection.

The large auditorium of the Presbyterian church was filled to repletion Sunday evening for the memorial services. The Post and Corps were both present with full ranks. Co. C. turned out well and the boys brigade were there in full uniform. Rev. C. M. Brown gave an eloquent address and the choir some superior vocal music. Revs. Smith, Varner and Fistler assisted.

The Whiting Chorus has decided to repeat their concert at Tecumseh. The Carnelian Ladies' Quartet, which is superior to anything of this kind Adrian has produced for years past, will present their delightful operetta, "The Charm and the Jewel." The chorus will give to the citizens of Tecumseh as fine a musical feast as they well could ask for. Success to the Whiting Chorus!—Evening Telegram.

The ball game billed for yesterday between the Jackson Friskies and T. H. S. was played with a score of 10 to 8 in favor of Tecumseh. The game was witnessed by a good-sized crowd and proved to be a very interesting one. The general size of the Jackson team served to "cool the boys down," but they pitched in and found more of a snap than they expected. The score was in favor of Jackson up to the beginning of the last half of the sixth inning when Howard Whelan, first baseman, brought in three scores, he making a home run. Score then stood 8 to 7 in favor of the home team. The last half of the ninth inning was not played, the home team having the game without. Great credit is due to our battery, Harris and Keush, and our team did some splendid playing in the field also. The boys concluded with the high school yell: "Rah! rah! rah! Sis boom bah; Tecumseh High School, ha, ha, ha."

The Circus is coming.

Orr & Temple have painted over their store front.

Nelson's big one ring circus will exhibit at Tecumseh next Thursday, June 7th.

The State Pioneer meeting will be held at Lansing next week Wednesday and Thursday.

J. W. Crane, of Elmhurst, Ill., arrived in town yesterday for a few days' visit with friends here.

Nelson's twenty five cent circus will arrive in town next Thursday, June 7th. It is cheap in price but good in quality.

Miss Lizzie Beamish went to Buffalo last Monday to attend the funeral of a cousin and will spend some time in the east before returning.

A meeting of the Equal Suffrage Society will be held at Mrs. B. J. Bidwell's on Thursday, June 7th, at 3 p. m. All friends of the cause are cordially invited.

Dr. and Mrs. Cleveland arrived in town Tuesday from New York, where they have been stopping with Mrs. Cleveland's mother for the past two months. The Doctor's health is very much improved.

Prof. M. L. Palmer, wife and son, of Jackson, were guests of G. W. Jackson's family Saturday. They spent Sunday with friends in Ridgeway. Prof. Palmer has just executed a contract to remain in his present place two years longer at an increased salary.

Last Sunday's issue of the Detroit Free Press was a mammoth forty-page paper, in commemoration of its sixty-third anniversary. On the same day the firm issued the first edition in their elegant new building on Lafayette Ave. The old Free Press is booming along more lively than ever this year and still keeps at the head of Michigan journalism.

We have received from Mr. R. J. Hicks, who now occupies a position on the faculty of the Zanesville Business College, some elegant specimens of Zanerian work. One is a title page for their commencement program. Another shows a portrait of himself, which is very natural. We are glad to learn that Mr. Hicks is doing finely in his present location.

The Tecumseh correspondent of the Adrian Times sends to that paper this item, which expresses the sentiment here briefly, but very accurately. Nothing further need be added. "We are informed that Company C minstrel troupe went to Morenci on an invitation from the latter place, for the benefit of the Morenci band. It would seem as though they were entitled to a little more courteous treatment than they received at the hands of The Times correspondent of that place."

An exchange says that in ten years from now the man or woman who walks will be the exception. When the manufacturers build wheels for one-legged persons, rig out family cyles on which papa, mamma and the children can take a spin, construct tandems and quadruplets and put together regular bicycle carriages, it is time to admit the wheel has come to stay, just like the typewriter, the electric light and the telephone. If you are not already one of the riders you had better join the procession now. Take a few falls and a lifetime's enjoyment.

The front window of J. D. Kinney & Co's. furniture store contained quite a war museum yesterday. Among the old relics displayed there were a lot of muster rolls and orders from Co. F. 26th and a copy of the N. Y. Herald of April 15, 1865, containing the full details of Lincoln's assassination, loaned by Jehiel Davidson; a sword, musket and sash owned by Lieut. Albert Randall, loaned by Mrs. S. W. Anderson; a sword carried through the war by George Marsden; some hard tack sent home by Wm. Jordan; bugle used by Sylvester Erskine in 3d Mich. Cav; coat, vest, pistols and sabre worn by Major Gen. John DeMott in war of 1812, loaned by Wm. DeMott; a large map of the Andersonville prison pen and a number of other articles too numerous to specify.

AN IMPOSTOR.

The Story of John Crow, of Muncie, Ind., Disbelieved.

He Has Not Yet Appeared at Jackson to Secure the Release of Van Nimmen—Statement of the Murdered Man's Brother.

IS IT A FAKE?

JACKSON, May 26.—John Crow, who was expected here to prove the innocence of Convict Van Nimmen, has not yet arrived. Van Nimmen is confident that Crow is on his way here, and that he will reach Jackson soon.

Some of the prison officials are inclined to believe that the Muncie John Crow is a myth, but Van Nimmen firmly believes that his brother-in-law is alive.

HICKSVILLE, O., May 26.—"My murdered brother," said L. L. Crow, "lies buried in Lost Creek cemetery here. John Crow, recently turned up at Muncie, Ind., is an impostor. It is the scheme of Van Nimmen's lawyer to get his client released from the Michigan penitentiary. My brother was a home-loving boy, and would not remain away unheard of so long. He lived at Mark Center, 6 miles east of here, and not at Van Wert, as stated in the report about the impostor. He had several hundred dollars due him, and if alive would return home to collect it. The family has the revolver, watch and clothes of my murdered brother, the articles being found at Grand Rapids in the hands of Van Nimmen. The pawnbroker recognized him at the trial. Van Nimmen claimed to have worked a week for the revolver and for the watch traded another, but this was proved false, as he was absent from Mark Center only four days when he returned without Crow, and he had no watch to trade. Van Nimmen left Mark Center the same day he returned from Big Rapids, paying for his ticket to Chicago with a mutilated one dollar bill, identified by the ticket agent as one he had patched and given in change to John Crow four days previously. Van Nimmen had no money to exchange bills, but he displayed an abundance when he purchased the ticket. My mother recognized the clothing found on the body by the texture and the strip she had put in the back of the coat, as it was too small and had to be cut out. This coat was a secondhand one, and the man with whom he traded for it also identified it. The shirt mother made and the material were the same as remnants left over, which she took to the trial. He had only one suit of clothes when he left here, and took with him some $400. Van Nimmen had nothing and coaxed him to go. I was fully aware there was a scheme on foot to release Van Nimmen, but the full extent of it I am not at liberty to disclose till the call for a new trial. I only wish to God it was different and he was alive."

MICHIGAN BANKS.

Condition of the Various State Institutions Shown by a Report.

LANSING, May 26.—An abstract of the reports made to the state commissioner of banking shows the condition of state banks in Michigan at the close of business on Friday, May 4. Three trust companies and 100 banks show total resources of $75,887,015.04. Of the liabilities the paid-in capital stock amounts to $12,346,665; the savings deposits $33,438,114.70 and the commercial deposits $15,953,869.31. In comparing this report with the last one, made December 19, 1893, it shows that the loan and discount stocks, bonds and mortgages increased $1,873,934.36, the total now being $59,081,176. The savings deposits increased $1,222,047.62 and the commercial deposits $1,431,844.35.

Has Enjoined the State.

LAPEER, May 26.—Mrs. Martha L. Davis, by her attorney, John A. McLennan, has filed a petition in the circuit court for an injunction to restrain the state of Michigan from emptying sewerage from the home for feeble minded and epileptic into the Flint river, above Davis pond, from which she derives a large income as ice fields. A decision will be rendered soon by Judge James B. Moore. Lapeer taxpayers are very anxious as to the outcome, as the city has bound itself to make good all loss to the state from such litigation.

Fruitgrowers Encouraged.

BENTON HARBOR, May 25.—The first shipment of strawberries from this city was made Wednesday. The prospects are for an immense crop and of very fair quality. The fruit prospects in this vicinity are flattering for the heaviest yield of all kinds of fruits ever grown in the fruit belt. Unless something unforeseen occurs hard times will soon be a thing of the past among the farmers.

The Will Stands.

LANSING, May 25.—The supreme court has just decided the famous suit in regard to the estate of Millionaire Charles W. Richardson, of Alpena. Mr. Richardson died in 1886, leaving an estate valued at $1,000,000 to his wife. The will was contested by the deceased's brothers, but the court sustains the will.

Said to Be Sold.

DETROIT, May 25.—It is again given out that the Citizens' Street Railway company has practically sold out and that in a few days it will be announced that the street cars of Detroit will be run by the Rocky mountain syndicate.

Starved to Death.

KALAMAZOO, May 25.—John Dewright, a well-to-do farmer, died here, aged 72 years. Nothing but water passed his lips for forty-six days before death. He was determined to starve himself to death and succeeded.

Picked a Date.

DETROIT, May 25.—The democratic state central committee met here and decided to call the state convention at Grand Rapids June 28. The convention will nominate two United States senators besides the state officers.

TEMPERANCE WOMEN.

They Hold a State Convention at Ann Arbor—The Proceedings.

ANN ARBOR, May 26.—Mayor Darling made an address of welcome for the city at the twentieth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan, which was held here. About 400 delegates were present. Reports were read which showed that there were 8,455 members in this state. On Thursday the principal business transacted was the election of officers, as follows:

President, Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, Jackson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Julia A. Parish, Bay City; recording secretary, Mrs Lizzie M. Johnson, Flint; treasurer, Mrs. Jennie Voorhies, Ann Arbor; delegate at large to the national convention to be held at Cleveland, O., in November, Mrs. Emma H. May.

The convention closed Friday. A resubmission to the people of the questions of prohibition and female suffrage was asked by the resolution. Military drill in schools and Sunday excursions were discountenanced. The place of the next meeting was left to the executive committee, only one invitation, from Petoskey, being received.

PIONEERS TO MEET.

Twentieth Annual Gathering of the State Society at Lansing.

LANSING, May 28.—The twentieth annual meeting of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical society will be held in the senate chamber of the capitol at Lansing commencing Wednesday, June 6, 1894, at 2 o'clock p. m., and continuing through the afternoon of Thursday, June 7. The programme will consist of music, address by the president, reports of the officers and committees, interesting historical papers, interspersed with spirited five-minute speeches and reminiscences. The following historical papers, among others, are expected to be read:

Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch, "Cessions of Land in Michigan by Indian Treaties," ex-Lieut. Gov. Henry H. Holt, of Muskegon, "History of the Portrait of Gen Lafayette Hanging in the Senate Chamber of the Capitol;" Prof. Andrew Ten Brook, of Ann Arbor, "The Early German Settlers in and About Ann Arbor;" Mrs. A. M. Hayes, of Hastings, "History of Hastings;" George H. White, of Grand Rapids, "Yankee Lewis' Famous Hostelry in the Wilderness."

CLAIMS VALUABLE PROPERTY.

A Widow Wants Part of the Estate of Rich Moses Wheelock.

JACKSON, May 26.—Moses Wheelock, a single man over 70 years old, died intestate at Battle Creek last winter. He left property worth $500,000, and the estate has since been in the probate court in process of division among his many relatives and heirs. Now a sensation has been sprung by the filing of a claim for $20,000 by Mrs. Sarah E. Chamberlain, of Watertown, S. D., who claims that Mr. Wheelock had promised to marry her, and that he had given her a deed, which she has placed on record, for $20,000 of his real estate in this city. She has also filed a paper which purports to have been drawn by him as his last will and testament. The matter will be contested by his heirs, and is causing no little comment.

A LIBEL SUIT FOLLOWS.

Sequel to the Horsewhipping of a Preacher at Cadillac.

CADILLAC, May 27.—The sequence of the horsewhipping of Rev. Mr. Hooper by Mrs. J. Miller, which took place the first part of last week, is a civil suit for damages in the sum of $1,000 commenced in the circuit court by C. J. McHugh, bank accountant, against Mrs. George Vanorunken, a prominent society woman. She is an ardent defender of her pastor, Hooper, and in her defense made accusations against several gentlemen of undue intimacy with Mrs. Miller. Prominent legal talent has been employed on both sides, and the ecclesiastical part will also be taken care of by eminent divines.

Five Novitiates Renounce the World.

ADRIAN, May 26.—Five young novitiates at St. Joseph hospital renounced the world and became the consecrated brides of the spirit. They were Catharine Fagin, of Grand Rapids; Agnes Depsinski and Rose Cunningham, of Ruth, Huron county; Herald Krantz, Helena, Huron county, and Mary Culhane, of Port Austin. Rt. Rev. Bishop Foley invested the candidates with the obligation of sisterhood in the presence of a number of priests from various parts of the state.

They Were Carelessly Drawn.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 27.—Judge Burlingame, of the supreme court, on Saturday held that the jury lists were invalid, owing to gross irregularities by aldermen and supervisors in making returns. The result will be to delay the criminal trials, including the Mabard murder, to the September term. The time for returning the new lists for next year expired Friday, and it is claimed they are as defective as the old.

Confessed and Resigned.

REED CITY, May 25.—Lou B. Winsor, judge of probate of Osceola county, has forwarded his resignation to Gov. Rich. He has also withdrawn from the office of justice of the peace. The reason is that while occupying the office of village clerk for twelve years Judge Winsor has misappropriated about $1,200. He has acknowledged his culpability and paid back the money.

Two Girls Attempt Suicide.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 24.—Nellie Peck and Gertie Morris, aged 16 and 18 respectively, attempted suicide by taking chloroform. Their condition was discovered and they were saved. They have been fast friends and both loved Pearl Dunham, who divided his attentions between them. Each girl was afraid the other would win and they resolved to die together rather than suffer possible disappointment.

An Aged Mason Dead.

KALAMAZOO, May 25.—"Father" John McMeekan, one of the oldest free masons in Michigan, died at Bloomingdale aged 89 years. He was made a mason in 1826. His wife, whom he married sixty-four years ago, survives him.

A MORTAL COLUMBIA.

"HASN'T the pension come yet, grandpap?"

"Not yet, lovely; ye see, Uncle Sam's getting old and he's kind of forgetful."

An old man, with an empty sleeve pinned across his coat, and a tiny girl with a face, O, so much older than her wasted body.

"This is Memorial day, grandpap; I must go to town an' hear the band an' see Columbia an' the states an' hear the man talk about the eagle—he never talks about that eagle on other days, grandpap."

"You shall go, dearie—the money'll come to-day, sure, they said so; grandpap might a-had it long ago, but he wouldn't ask until the bank broke."

"And I'll wear my white dress."

"Yes, an' a new bonnet."

"Little girls don't wear bonnets, grandpap."

"Bless my lamb; she shall see the procession!"

"And next year maybe I can be a state, too."

The old man turns his head away. "So you shall. Lemme see. Rhode Island'll be about your size, won't it?"

"I'll be a great deal larger next year, grandpap."

"Of course, dearie—Pennsylvania, then."

A long silence; the scent of the syringa pouring in at the window and a nesting bird chirping in the eaves. At last the child stirs.

"I was dreaming, grandpap; I thought Columbia held me in her arms, she was so beautiful!"

"Yes, dearie, yes."

The child moans in her sleep now; he bends anxiously over her until she opens her eyes.

"Shall grandpap tell ye about Bull Run, dearie?"

"No; tell me about the band an'—" her voice sinks away

The old soldier, with despair in his heart, but none in his voice, tells once more the story of how they will go to town in the train and enjoy the Memorial day exercises.

Suddenly the child starts up, "Columbia!" she cries, "hear the band! Th' pension money has come, grandpap; see, here on the bed—all gold!" The morning sunshine has flecked the coverlid; she points to it.

There is a knock at the door, but the old man, listening to the child, does not heed it.

"Th' band, hear them 'Marching Through Georgia!' Oh! see, grandpap, I am—Columbia!" The voice is still.

The old man drops his head on the pillow. Some one touches his arm.

"There's yer pension papers, comrade, just come—Uncle Sam's remembered ye, at last."

He points to the quiet figure.

"Too late," he says.

A QUESTION OF DATE.

Miss Yellowleaf (sentimentally)—Ah, Mr. Sampson, it makes me proud to think that my father died fighting for his country.

Mr. Sampson (with interest)—So it should, Miss Yellowleaf. Was your father killed in the Mexican war or the war of 1812?—Puck.

They Did Not Die in Vain.

Drums and fifes and flags for Memorial day and roses white as honor and red as blood to cover the resting places of those who counted life not too dear to give it to their country. Calmly they answered to the roll call of the Great Sergeant, Death, and joined the vast encampment. To-day the world is better that such men have lived, and the children of the third generation treasure, as a priceless heritage, the memory of their deeds. The love of country shines more brightly for its baptism of blood—and so no brave man died in vain.

When the Past Is Present.

Memorial day, sweet with flowers and bright with sunshine; what a day for comrades to meet and fight their battles over! A day on which the past seems real and old songs are sung, old jests revived. How naturally the foot keeps step with the old refrains, how gloriously floats the old flag! That story of the charge of Seven Pines or Gettysburg—what hosts of memories it recalls! How the blood flies to the wrinkled cheek at thought of it and how the crutch keeps time to the rolling drums! The past is the present on Memorial day.

Hard on the Sailors.

"Is Decoration day noticed on shipboard?" asked a landsman of a sailor.

"Oh, yes, sir, often!"

"Often?"

"Yes; the captain makes a deck oration whenever he feels like it."—Texas Siftings.

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $13 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac resort are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bath rooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the substantial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. Send for illustrated descriptive pamphlet. Address A. A. SCHANTZ, G. P. & T. A., D. & C. Detroit, Mich.

The News Condensed.

Important Intelligence From All Parts.

CONGRESSIONAL.
Regular Session.

ON the 22d seven paragraphs of the metal schedule of the tariff bill were disposed of in the senate after eight hours of debate.... In the house in committee of the whole the section of the legislative appropriation bill providing for the civil service commission was stricken out by a strictly party vote of 109 to 71. The committee on the election of president and vice president voted to make a favorable report on the bill providing for the election of the president by a direct vote.

IN the senate on the 23d Senator Gorman defended the tariff bill in a speech. A motion to lay the measure on the table was defeated by a strict party vote of 28 to 38.... The house continued its onslaught on the civil service commission by striking out of the legislative appropriation bill the paragraph transferring department clerks to the classified service. A bill was favorably reported providing a fine of $500 and imprisonment as a penalty directed at any ex-soldier who postdates his voucher for pension before the 4th of the month.

SENATOR KYLE urged the passage of his resolution in the senate on the 24th declaring that it was not the purpose of the United States to use force to restore Liliuokalani as queen of the Hawaiian islands, but it went over for the day. The tariff bill was further considered.... In the house the amendment to the legislative appropriation bill to strike out the provision for contingent expenses of the civil-service commission was voted down and the measure was passed. The bill to incorporate the supreme lodge of the Knights of Pythias was also passed, and a resolution was adopted setting aside Saturday, June 22, for eulogies on the late Representative Houk, of Ohio.

THE Hawaiian resolution was considered again for half an hour in the senate on the 25th but no action was taken. The tariff bill was further discussed.... In the house the time was occupied in the discussion of an omnibus resolution from the committee on war claims, grouping together thirty-seven claims for cotton, etc., aggregating $1,040,000.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON MICH., MAY 31, 1894.

Isaac Halpin has purchased a driving horse.

Mrs. Ella Sanford is clerking for Lyle Gibson.

Mustaches are no longer the style in Clinton.

Frank McClure has put in a very pretty soda fountain.

The little child of Albert Kolkloesch died Tuesday morning.

A. J. Waters, of Manchester, was in town Sunday and Monday.

James Bostedor visited his son Fred at Baton Rapids Saturday.

Quite a number of our wheelman visited Manchester last Sunday.

Chas. Fitch and wife, of Deerfield, are visiting relatives in Clinton.

Mrs. Will Niblack and daughter went to Macon last Monday for a visit.

The Catholic society held a social at Mrs. Collins' last Friday evening.

Wool is coming into the woolen factory every day in large quantities.

Al Rowland & Son, of Caro, Mich., visited Clinton friends over Sunday.

S. W. Demuth and R. G. Wolf took a bicycle ride to the lakes last Sunday.

The Episcopal church services during the month of June will be in the evening.

Mrs. Ella Link has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Aldrich, in Adrian the past week.

Miss Kittie Biggins arrived home from New York last Thursday noon for a visit.

Miss Minnie Barrett, of Ridgeway, passed Decoration Day with Mrs. Marjory Rose.

The Episcopal social was postponed one week on account of the Stars going to Manchester.

Geo. Starrett left for Chicago last Saturday, where he will assist Floyd in electrical work.

Mrs. Lucretia Amspoker and Mame Bradner were calling on Manchester friends Tuesday.

Chas. and Frank, sons of Geo. Haggart, of Hudson, visited Clinton relatives over Sunday.

The Methodist social will be held at the residence of Mrs. John L. Tuttle next Wednesday afternoon.

Geo. A. Kies and Fred Sherwood were at Sand Lake Tuesday making some improvements around the Kies cottage.

But few of the Clinton masons attended the masonic decoration at Manchester, as the weather looked too threatening.

It is reported that Miss Maggie Biggins who has been in New York for some years expects to visit Europe this summer.

Quite a number of livery men from different towns were in town Tuesday. They were disappointed to find the live stock sold.

Mrs. C. S. Burroughs expects to start for the Cherokee strip next Tuesday where she will remain with her husband for a time.

Will Wood and wife and Wm. S. Kimball sojourned at Wampler's Lake last Tuesday and Wednesday, while building boat houses.

The officers and members of the E. S. Chapter are in Manchester this evening in response to an invitation from that chapter.

Chas. W. Johnston, of Detroit, came over on his wheel last Saturday for a flying visit with Clinton friends and returned home Monday.

Bradley Way returned home Tuesday bringing a bride with him, he having married Mrs. Susan Fisher at Ann Arbor last Monday. Patience and perseverance have met their reward.

Miss Louise Van DeMark left Monday night via Jackson for Hammond, Ind.; she will visit Mrs. Kate Strait. As Hammond is near to Chicago, she will also visit her brother Eugene.

Hollis Taylor, who is attending Albion College has developed into an athlete. In the state Field Day contest soon to be held at Ypsilanti he will represent Albion as a "catch-as-catch can" wrestler.

The lady bicyclists made their first appearance on the streets with their new bloomer suits Saturday afternoon and evening. Their suits are of navy blue, are very tasty and they made a fine appearance.

James W. Bradner and daughter Mamie, will start next Wednesday, on their western trip. They will take the new steamer "Northwest" at Detroit for Duluth, and thence via the Canadian Pacific for the state of Washington.

The Episcopal social will be held at the residence of Mrs. J. S. Kies, on Washington street, next Thursday afternoon. If the weather is pleasant refreshments will be served on the lawn. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. Kemp, of Tecumseh, who has been clerking for James Montague, will open a novelty store in St. John's building next week. Clinton has no store of that kind now and the new establishment will doubtless receive a good patronage.

Alonzo Clark has purchased the Draper livery stock, buying the whole concern in a lump, so that the advertised sale did not take place last Tuesday. Ed Clark will run the stable, and his previous experience will enable him to manage it in a first-class manner.

The body of Wm. R. Bartlett, who for many years lived where Geo. Heimindinger does, and who was known to all old residents, was brought from Ashland, Newaygo county, last Tuesday morning and the funeral took place at 2 p. m. at the residence of his brother, Horace Bartlett, Rev. D. H. Ramsdell officiating. The remains were accompanied by his son Charles and wife.

The memorial services yesterday were largely attended and everything passed off pleasantly. The members of the K. O. T. M. made a fine showing in their new regulation caps. The address of the Rev. D. H. Ramsdell was well received and suitable for the occasion. The music by the band and the quartettes were well rendered. There was a large crowd in town and in the afternoon the Clinton and Jackson base ball teams crossed bats.

ARCHITECTURE AND OTHER TOPICS.

The young man who pushes the quill and dusts off the counter in the Clinton Local office had a violent attack last week of what Artemus Ward would call "slopping over." He waded through several sticks full of long primer in a feeble effort to crush the HERALD, touching upon various topics, from Darwinism to news gathering. The high minded tone of his article shows that he is laboring under some mental and bodily affliction. He may have the dyspepsia, or perhaps he is troubled with liver complaint. If so, we would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as a good remedy for ailments of this kind. We had always supposed that the distinguishing feature of Darwin's "missing link" was a lack of brains, and hence we cheerfully relinquish all claims to this distinction in favor of editor Blanchard. He surely deserves a prize medal on that score, and a front seat in the "missing link" synagogue. No further evidence on this point is required than the monument he has erected to his own folly in his front door yard. We shall not shrink from defending ourselves in any controversy the Local may force upon us. An honorable opponent is entitled to respect, at least; but any man, who will stoop so low as to attack another for a physical misfortune which cannot be cured, puts himself beyond the pale of professional courtesy and beneath contempt. Were it not for this vile personal assault upon us, we should not pursue this affair any, further, but under the circumstances we consider ourselves fully justified in using some plain Anglo Saxon, and in giving the "missing link" of the Local office a chance to see himself as others see him. His late architectural freak, in the conspicuous position it occupies, is a gross outrage upon all the neighbors living on or near those four corners. It is an insult to all the residents of Tecumseh street who are compelled to pass that way going home. It is an insult to the congregations of the Methodist and Episcopal churches who have to pass along that sidewalk to and from Sabbath services. It is an insult to three-fourths of the school pupils, who take that route in going to school. What a beautiful object lesson it furnishes young school children as a topic of conversation in their daily trips, as they pass that block. One would suppose that if he inadvertently committed such a blunder, he would have sense enough to rectify it, when he saw how public sentiment condemned it. Not so, however, with the "missing link" of the Local; he actually glories in his own shame. His last effusion contains this confession: "The remarks in regard to our architectural shoot are simply the opinion of residents living opposite the southeast corner. We pity them; they must feel bad." Here is a direct admission that he planted the edifice in its present position with the willful and malicious intent of insulting some of his nearest neighbors. What an honorable, manly act for a man who claims to run a respectable newspaper.

There is one feature of this quarrel which our patrons ought to understand and appreciate. All this rumpus is not kicked up over a little news item that appeared in this column a few weeks ago. This malicious personal assault upon us is prompted by political motives and is made for political purposes. But the HERALD has sustained the attacks of these same pestiferous political Pharisees before, and it doesn't scare worth a continental. It will keep right along in the straight and narrow path it has traveled for so many years, opposing ring rule in local politics and monopoly rule in national affairs. This declaration may not be pleasing to the "missing link" of the Local office, nor to the petty clique that owns him, but it will be acceptable news to a large portion of the respectable citizens of Clinton.

Editor Blanchard tries to plead the baby act and whines about our interference with his business, but these charges are simply figments of the imagination. His statement that we have tried to prejudice the people of Clinton against the Local is false. His insinuation that we are jealous of his success is false. His charge, that we are attempting to "create a feeling against the Local" that we may profit thereby, is false. Why, bless the dear little "missing link," he takes more custom from Tecumseh, twice over, than we do from Clinton. Last week's Local contains seven Tecumseh advertisements, two of which are the largest cards in the paper. The patronage he receives from the merchants of Tecumseh give him a good lift in the course of a year. Far be it from us to begrudge it to him. The Lord knows that all country newspapers need all the business they can get in these hard times. Mr. Blanchard visits Tecumseh whenever he chooses, either to gather news or solicit business, and the HERALD has never abused him for it. We would commend to his attention, if he has intelligence enough to comprehend it, this old adage: "'Tis a good rule that works both ways." If the friendly visits of outsiders are detrimental to Clinton's business interests, the young editor should head a movement to wall in the town. He might persuade the village authorities to build a basswood fence around the corporation. His architectural tastes and experience would enable him to superintend the job to perfection. It might be whitewashed on the outside and lettered all over with Crescent Cough Cure signs. This would be a big advertising scheme, and all intruders could be debarred from the sacred precincts inside, until they had obtained a pass from the "missing link" at the Local office. But we do not believe that the respectable, enterprising merchants of Clinton are believers in the Local's Chinese wall theory. We shall continue to visit Clinton whenever the spirit moves us thereto, and we shall not stop to ask the "missing link's" permission, either. The Old Reliable has just entered its forty-fifth year. It has more friends and its prospects are brighter than ever before. It will continue to do business at the old stand, and purposes to keep at the head of the procession. Now is the time to subscribe.

Miss Florence Camburn, of Macon, visited her sister, Mrs. Will Niblack, over Sunday.

The game of ball yesterday between the Jackson and Clinton teams called out a good crowd. It was quite an interesting game, even though many errors were made. The Jacksons were minus some of their regular players, consequently they were a little weak. There were no phenomenal plays though some fine fielding was done, particularly by the Jacksons. Kennedy and Gillen's battery work was fine.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grain to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very condensed form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not bent in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanism, strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

M. E. CONKLIN, Agent,

At ALBAUGH'S OLD STAND, Railroad St., TECUMSEH.

A. R. Arner, of Ridgeway, was in town Tuesday.

Mrs. B. W. Forbes, of Saline, visited friends here last week.

Will Fowler and family, of Saline, visited his brother Eugene over Sunday.

The base ball season was inaugurated last Saturday on the home grounds between Britton and Clinton, the attendance being very good. Although the home team was defeated the game was one of the finest ever played here. The Britton's put up a great fielding game. Our boys batted well but their fielders would gather them in. The battery work of both teams was fine. Britton made their runs in three innings and Clinton theirs in one. At the end of the seventh inning the score stood 2 to 2. The Brittons in the eighth added 4 and in the nineth inning 2. Schofield and Sutphin, of the home team, executed two very pretty double plays. Kennedy made one of the finest hits which brought in the two runs they made.

Tuesday night while sleeping the sleep of innocency, Geo. W. Freese was awakened by his wife who told him that someone was in the room. He reached for a loaded cane which he keeps near the bed but in taking it, it struck the wall making a sound like the snapping of a revolver and the burglar made a rush for out doors, closely followed by George. The fellow made his exit by the dining room door on to the porch, leaped over the railing and made for Washington street. The burglar had a little the start of George and closed the door and screen door in George's face, so that when he got out the burglar was no where to be seen. He did not know for a time that anything had been taken, but Fred Van DeMark while delivering papers found a coat and a pair of pants by Mrs. J. S. Kies's barn. George says he had between three and four dollars in change. Entrance was gained by turning the key in the lock from the outside with a pair of small pinchers.

Commissioner McClave is in a condition to realize how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a worthless son-in-law.

It contains some things you ought to know. You ought to know that the World's Fair Management asked all manufacturers of Binders and Mowers to take their machines into the grain and grass fields and by their work prove their claims. You ought to know that the manufacturers of McCormick Binders and Mowers promptly notified the World's Fair committee that they would comply with the reasonable request. You ought to know that various other manufacturers refused. You ought to know that the Judges examine the grain and grass fields selected, and that these representatives of the various companies judge of the condition of the crops to be cut with their respective companies' machines. You ought to know that ordinary machines could not be entered among them. You ought to know that only those manufacturers allowed their machines to go into these tests whose machines would be at work. You ought to know that the World's Fair Judges who examined the McCormick Binders and Mowers found that they were easily and gaily operated, and that their performance was in all respects thoroughly satisfactory. You ought to know that the Judges said of McCormick Mowers that their draft is at least 20 lbs. lighter than the draft of ordinary mowers. You ought to know these things because you don't want to make a mistake when it comes to buying so important a farm implement as a Binder or a Mower. As Mrs. Brown, of Holloway, who had the stock here for Miss Thompson to look after and do the work, thought if she could'nt have the honor of having her name attached to the business, she would pull up stakes and let Miss Thompson sink or swim. There are some business people who have more business qualities than common sense, and "where ignorance is bliss it is folly to be wise."

The entertainment given by the Epworth League, at the home of Emma Miller, on Wednesday evening of last week, was a success throughout, with a large attendance and a very pleasing musical programme, as follows:

Music by the League.
Devotional exercises.
Singing by the League.
Violin Solo—Emma Bailey.
Inst. Duet—Jennie Underwood and Mrs. Rhinebold.
Vocal Solo—Fern VanDuser.
Inst. Duet—Misses Leila Sutton, Emma Miller.
Inst. Solo—Clara Temple.
Vocal Solo—J. D. Arner.
Inst. Duet—Misses Jennie Underwood and Stella Dewey.
Inst. Trio—Gertie Kniffin, Geo. Clark, Jeddie Kniffin.

At the close of the program ice cream and cake were served at the church. The society realized nearly $10.00 for their work.

Miss Nellie Chamberlin, daughter of Mrs. Stephen Dibble, after a sickness of nearly six months with consumption, was called to be with her Savior on Thursday evening of last week. A short service was held at the home Saturday morning before leaving for Mount Victory, Ohio, the home of the deceased, where the funeral services were held Sunday morning, and the remains laid at rest. Miss Chamberlin's stay with us has been a short and sad one, but through her Christian example and cheerfulness during her sickness never mumering or complaining, always speaking words of comfort and cheer; pointing to her Jesus as her refuge, has won a deep friendship in the hearts of all who met her. She was assistant cashier in the bank at Mt. Victory, at the time she was taken sick. She was a young woman of more than ordinary ability. Letters from friends of her home received during her sickness, are evidences of her high standing and the respect shown her by her young schoolmates and friends. The grief stricken mother has the heartfelt sympathy of all in her sad affliction.

We clip the following from the Grand Ledge Independent.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Brown, on Railroad St., presented an unusually bright and lively scene last evenning, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Edith B. Smith, sister of Mrs. Brown, to Mr. Seymour S. Pierce, of Grand Rapids. The event is reported as a most happy one, invitations being confined to the immediate relatives and most intimate friends of the contracting parties. Rev. B. S. Pratt was the officiating clergyman, and Karl S. Judson, of Grand Rapids, groomsman, and Eddie L. Russell, of this city, bridesmaid. The parlor was nicely and tastily decorated with flowers, etc., with a floral bridal altar as a center piece. The bride was arrayed in a beautiful white swivel silk, trimmed with point lace, with flowers and pearls as ornaments, and the groom wore the conventional black dress suit. The gifts were numerous and valuable, and included a side-board and center table from the Grand Rapids guests and a silver tea set from the young people of Grand Ledge. The guests present from abroad were: Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Smith, of Ridgeway, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Harrison, Ridgeway, Mich; Mrs. M. D. Britton, Croker, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Sam'l Stall, of Charlotte; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Danforth, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Brown, Miss Mae Simpson, Mr. W. H. Hyde, Miss Jennie Hyde and Karl S. Judson, of Grand Rapids. The happy couple took their departure last evening for Grand Rapids, where the groom has a new house furnished, and they will commence house keeping at once. The bride was ex-postmaster Home's assistant during most of his last term, and by her faithfulness to duty, patience and many womanly qualities, won innumerable friends among all classes of our people. Mr. Pierce is employed in the railway mail service, and is an exemplary young man, well worthy of the choice prize he has won. May their wedded life be as pleasant and cheerful as was their wedding day.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Decoration exercises passed off very nicely last Wednesday.

Remember the ball game next Saturday, Clinton vs. Britton.

Howard Wheelan, of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with his friend, A. J. Lee.

Meeting of K. O. T. M. Lodge No. 467, 1st and 3d Tuesday of each month.

The telegraph office of the Wabash has been closed nights at this place.

We understand the present teachers of our schools will remain another year with us.

Miss Serene Zeluff returned home Saturday from a two weeks visit at Marshall.

Geo. W. Clark, formerly night operator at this place, is now working nights at Romulus.

Burton Nichols is now taking the census; look out for him, he will talk an arm off you.

Miss Ellen Osterhout has returned to work in Tecumseh. She had been home sick for about two weeks.

Our Kid team played the Deerfield kids here last Saturday, resulting in a victory for Britton. Score 8 to 21.

Rev. E. Mudge, of Britton, will address Co. F of 26th Mich., at the 5th annual reunion to be held at Dundee, June 13th.

The Clinton base ball team will meet our team here for the return game next Saturday, game called 3 p. m. This will be a good game, and you must be sure and witness it.

Wait for the glorious 4th of July, and then everybody come to Britton and celebrate in good old fashioned style. Be sure and bring the whole family; they will all enjoy it.

The Tecumseh High School team came down last Saturday and played a game of ball with the Brittons', defeating them as the score below will show. The game was poor all the way through on both sides. It seemed as though the ball was never where it ought to be. The pitchers for both sides were knocked out by having a lame arm.

The firm of Wells & Lynn, of the undertaking business, has changed to Osgood, Lynn & Co., and hereafter will be known as such. W. R. Osgsood, who has joined the firm, has gone away to prepare himself for the business, and upon his retnrn they will erect a new building on the vacant lot owned by E. R. Wells, just east of the railroad. We can see no reason why the undertaking business will not pay. Mr. Osgood is a hustler and succeeds in everything which he undertakes. He expects to be about two months at his school.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

Locust trees blooming, honey bees booming, young folks mooning, in June.

Only ten cents a quart for strawberries, but while the berries grow on vines, unfortunately, the diners do not.

John Randall is a generous hearted fellow, who has something he will give to any of his friends who ask of him, although it cost John quite dear, and that is the measles.

What is at work at the shade trees? The green leaves of the locust, maple, etc., fall in great numbers from the trees, as if they had been clipped with a knife.

If you wish to see a very pretty fence, look at the division fence between G. W. Fuller and L. Daniels, but a years use will tell the story as to its real value to stand the effect of contraction and expansion in our climate.

The report comes back to his old neighbors, that Dr. Perkins, now of Seneca Station, had his barn struck by lightning recently. His horse was believed to be killed at first, but finally rallied, and is now able to carry the doctor on his rounds once more.

The memorial concert at Pentecost hall, June 3rd, was well attended, the hall being packed, and even the anteroom and stairs were occupied by the audience. Much disappointment was felt at Mr. Williams, being called away by the death of a member of his church, as it was expected that he would give a short address on the occasion. The hall was decorated with evergreens and flowers, and a profusion of bunting. Among the decorations the finest was a large cross composed of snow white fuchsias, lillies of the valley, roses, etc., and lent for the occasion by Miss Lottie Bixby. A good musical programme was given, and the recitations were excellent. Great credit is due to Miss Bertha Fisk, for the manner in which she had trained the little ones for their part in the exercises. And not the least of our thanks is due to those friends, who for some distance around, came loaded with chairs to fill every foot of space with comfortable seats, instead of the usual backless board benches, improvised from two boxes and a plank on such occasions.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. Dr. Rice returned home from Detroit Tuesday.

The Junietta Hive, L. O. T. M., give an entertainment this, Thursday, evening, at Maccabee hall.

The Democrats of Franklin will hold their caucus next Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, at Hampton's hall.

The Maccabee anniversary will be observed with a special sermon by Rev. W. T. Williams next Sunday morning at the Congregational church.

A class of fourteen will be received into full membership at the Tipton M. E. church, July 1st, and a class of fifty persons will be received at Springville September 2nd.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

A beautiful new flag floats in front of the "pink" school house.

Remember the lyceum at Fred Davenport's Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wisner, who have both been on the sick list, are getting better.

Mrs. Eliza and Miss Myrta Wisner, of Sharon, were guests of Mrs. E. C. Wisner last week.

On Friday night will occur the eighth grade and graduating exercises at the Center schoolhouse, including essay and recitation by Miss Nina Allen, valedictory and essay by Cecil Billington, recitation, Hoyt Whelan, recitations by Linford Smith, Howard Pierce, and others. The Franklin orchestra will furnish music, and altogether a very enjoyable time may be anticipated. Miss Blanche Hampton has taught several terms very successfully.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. AT REST.

"There is a reaper whose name is Death,
And he reaps the golden grain at a breath."

Died, in Tecumseh, on Saturday, May 19th, Mrs. W. Chapin, formerly Miss Minerva Skinner, of Macon, Mich.

The deceased was born in the state of New York, June 26th, 1825, and came to Macon, Mich., in 1845. On June 17, 1867, she was married to Wm. Chapin with whom she lived until his death in 1881. To the pioneers and to the children of the pioneers of Macon, Minerva was almost a historic person. She was a lover of song. Her clear, musical voice, her sunny temperament and her pure life made the social gathering more entertaining, the public entertainments more enjoyable and the church more pure and zealous. For many years she taught in the public schools, and many are the young men and women who remember her with pleasure. In 1867 she married Wm. Chapin, a colporteur. To him and, to his work she gave her heart and hand. She walked by his side a loyal helper. She said not so much by her words, perhaps, as by her life. "Thy people shall be my people; thy God shall be my God; where thou goest I will go, and where thou art, there will I be also." Thus they walked together, God's humble poor, until death came to him. Then he, on dying, said:

"On Christ, the solid rock, I stand;
All other ground is sinking sand."

To-day they sleep together again. Earth, the mother, from out whose marvelous composition God gathered, arranged and combined the particles that constitute His body, has taken them to herself again, there to rest until the reproductive earth, at God's command, shall bring them forth with bodies fit for mansions not made with hands.

OBITUARY.

James L. Remington was born June 2, 1814, in Hancock, Mass., and died near Tecumseh, Mich., May 26, 1894, in his eightieth year. He came to Michigan in 1836 and in 1839 was married to Miss Elizabeth A. Wheeler, and settled in Macon where they lived until his death. Twelve children were born to them, eight of whom still live to sympathize with the bereaved mother and mourn the absence of a loving father. At the age of twenty-two he joined the Baptist church, and two years later withdrew and connected himself with the Methodist church. For more than fifty years he was an official member of the church and discharged his duties with the strictest fidelity. In his quiet and unobtrusive way he was a liberal contributor when burdens were to be borne in aid of the cause of Christ. His genial, social qualities won for him many friends. His life illustrated that "charity which suffereth long, and is kind, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil." The loved ones whom he has left sorrow not as those without hope, He has gone to rest, but they shall see him again in the morning. His body sleeps in the cemetery at Tecumseh.

Washington Lenardson was born in the township of Root, Montgomery county, N. Y., Jan. 1st 1831, and died at his home in Britton on Tuesday, May 29, 1894, and hence was 63 years old when he died. When about 8 years of age his parents came to Sylvania, O., where the subject of this sketch grew to manhood. Here he engaged in commercial business before marriage. He married Miss Electa Akers in 1859, and for 35 years they bore the burdens of life together. The deceased continued in business at Sylvania until about 7 years ago, when his store building was burned to the ground. He was already a partner with his oldest son, Owen, at Britton. After the fire he removed to Britton and continued business until stricken with paralysis, less than two years ago. Soon after this he sold his interest in the store to his youngest son Earl, and Lenardson Bros. succeeded Lenardson & Son. Repeated attacks of paralysis continued to prostrate him until suddenly he was stricken down at 2 a. m., May 29th. Mr. Lenardson was an honorable, upright citizen, and in his extensive business relations always was governed by the principles of integrity. He was a good husband and father and a man of activity and energy and his enforced retirement from active service was a great trial to him. He was a member of the Christian Union church, at Britton, and died in hope of a better life. He leaves a companion and three sons,—Owen and Earl in business here and Charles in business at Blissfield,—together with a brother and sister, to mourn his loss. The disease that caused his demise was evidently hereditary as his mother and three brothers died of the same. A large concourse of citizens attended the funeral service at the family residence on the 31st ult. Sermon by the writer. E. M.

Wm. R. Bartlett, whose funeral was held last week, was born in Cayuga Co., N. Y. He came to Michigan in 1837 and settled on a farm in Saline. Afterwards he lived on a farm in Norvell, Jackson county, a few years and then bought a farm just east of Clinton, where he took up his abode in 1857. There he resided about twenty-five years, when he moved to Ashland, Newaygo county. He was married to Miss Sybil Tripp in 1842. He had five children, four of whom and his wife preceded him to the other shore. He also leaves two brothers, Moses and Horace Bartlett, of Clinton, to mourn his departure.

There is one good effect of the hard times, at least. The irrepressible book agent is taking a much needed rest.

It makes one shiver to think what would have become of us if the big coal miners' strike had taken place last January.

It would be difficult at this stage of the game to tell which is the worse plight, "senatorial courtesy" or the Wilson bill. They are both pretty badly battered.

It is reported that President Cleveland may kick on the compromise tariff bill—that has been patched up in the Senate—should it come to it or the bill will certainly fail.

The investigation of the sugar trust reveals a variety of "senatorial courtesy" between the devil and the deep sea. The report of the committee is awaited with considerable interest.

Coxey, Brown and Jones are making themselves as comfortable as possible in the Washington jail. Coxey's men are showing good staying qualities. They vow that they will stay together until their leader is released.

The fate of the sugar schedule of the tariff bill now about to be decided will settle that of the bill. The republicans have been working hard to secure votes enough to beat the sugar schedule, but they have not succeeded, and unless there is some radical change will not succeed.

There is fun ahead in state politics this summer. The indications are that the populists will put up Mayor Pingree of Detroit, for governor, and that he will then seek the indorsement of the Republican convention. Will there be a row not unlike that in the democratic convention then?

The Senate moves slowly, but it has finished twenty-two days' work on the income tax schedule. Senators Kyle and Harris of Mississippi are on the sugar side of the controversy, and Senator Voorhees is on the other side. It is a battle royal between the two Senators from Mississippi.

The Senate has practically fixed the election of Senators by the vote of the people which was passed by the House during the last Congress, has been again favorably reported by the House Committee on Elections. Senatorial courtesy does not seem to be in the way of this idea however. They say that the method would retire about one-half of the present members of the Senate.

The New York World says that Senator Gorman says he will vote for the income tax as an experiment "to be tried a few years to see if the people can find out whether or not they like it. It matters little to them how long or short the experimental stage is. When the tax expires it can be renewed. When once started on its way the income tax will remain a permanent feature of our fiscal system.

Coxey's army has been joined by Galvin's men and the combined forces marched into Washington Memorial Day and decorated the Peace Monument. The men are not happy. They have been living for the past week on bread and water, a diet that is not calculated to make anybody happy. They still say they intend to remain until Congress acts upon their petition. If they do they will stay a long time. Coxey's lawyers are going to try to get him out of jail under habeas corpus proceedings.

It was definitely settled on the test vote, forced by Senator Teller at the conclusion of Senator Gorman's speech, that the tariff bill will receive the vote of every Democrat and Populist in the Senate and consequently that no reason exists for further delay in taking the final vote. It was to prove this that Mr. Teller made his motion to lay the bill on the table. The vote was 38 to 28, only republicans voting for the motion. It is believed that this will hurry up the vote, as it will give those in charge of the bill a confidence they have heretofore lacked.

Four hundred members of Kelly's army have deserted. That row up stream on the Ohio river was too much like work to suit their fancy.

At all events no one can complain that the Congressional debate on the tariff does not include the consideration of a truly encyclopedic range of subjects.

How does Col. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, stand on the question of female suffrage? That is what his constituents would like to know, before his canvass proceeds any further.

The Presbyterian General Assembly has voted by an overwhelming majority that Prof. Smith is a heretic. Now what will the Union Theological Seminary do about it? Will the trustees retain Prof. Smith or discharge him?

Mrs. Lease is sick and the doctors are in a row over the proper method of treatment. Two doctors were called, one an allopath and the other a homeopath, and they began the treatment of their patient by a personal quarrel. In the meantime, Mrs. Lease takes no medicine from either and is rapidly convalescing.

The Manhattan Single-tax club of New York city held a monster meeting at Cooper Union last week. The call for the meeting said: "A protective tariff with a Democratic label is more repugnant than a Simon-pure McKinley tariff. We should not be misled into consenting to any bill because we are told that any bill will end the business uncertainty. A bill that is not largely better than the McKinley bill will give no relief and will practically the application, while it will place the Democratic party in the contemptible position of confessed inability to carry out its pledges." Truth is a blade.

It is deplorable that the strike of the coal miners is complicated in various sections of the country with riot and bloodshed. The right of workmen to refuse to work for wages offered is absolute. When they attempt by violence to prevent others who are willing to work from doing so they cease to be good citizens and become rioters. When that step is taken public sympathy forfeits their cause if it had previously favored it. The interference of those who do not wish to work with the liberty of those who desire to work is the grossest tyranny and oppression, utterly hostile to every notion of equal rights and free government. To protect the rights of workers the state must put forth all its powers or confess its impotence. Not to suppress violence, assault or outrage is to yield government to anarchy. There is right to combine and unionize with the view of securing better wages, but there is no right to interfere with the liberty of others who do not wish to join the union. Boycotting is prevented, and rightly so, by the law. Boycotting is nothing but a species of conspiracy to prevent others from doing what they have a right to do. Intimidation is prevented, and rightly so, by the law. Intimidation

Gentlemen
Your have got the hardest pulling mower I ever hooked the horses to. I hooked one of Kemp's two years ago and could not start it till it knocked me out. The draft is the heaviest I ever saw. Who did you pattern after the old Cormick No. 4 Steel Mower? Its draft is extremely light, making it very easy on Horse flesh.

THE WORLD'S FAIR

Committee, who tested the McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower in the only regular exposition field trials, in a heavy growth of timothy and clover, said, in their official report: "The efficiency of the machine is thus, under fair conditions, nearly 70 per cent. Ordinary figures for ordinary mowers are at least twenty pounds higher in total draft, with an efficiency of not above 60 per cent., which latter figure good machines should be expected to exceed." The McCormick is the lightest draft, and most effective grass cutter yet produced. (Highest Medal awarded.)

ALONG THE BEACH.

Last night a storm was on the sea;
The wreckage drifts ashore;
Come walk along the beach with me
And hear the breakers roar.

What soul their sorrow understands?
What eye can trace their path?
They fling themselves upon the sands
And foam with fear or wrath.

The shore receives them, patient, dumb,
Nor trembles at their shocks,
But lifts to meet them as they come
Its great, insensate rocks.

They calm me with their awful strength,
So small my life appears,
So less than nothing in their length
Are all my days and years.

I look across the restless sea
And seem an atom tost
To wandering winds, and what to me
Is joy if kept or lost?

And what if wearied on the way
I fall and faint and die,
Would any miss till judgment day
So small a thing as I?

—Youth's Companion.

NOT TO BE BULLIED.

It was the boast of Colonel McGoffin Bales of Kentucky that none but a distinguished man had the hardihood to propose marriage to one of his daughters. The old man was an aristocrat by blood and long experience, was afraid of no one, drank liquor gracefully, smoked home grown tobacco and had, while the owner of a woodyard on Green river, knocked down more steamboat men than any other man in his state. He argued, and with justice, it must be admitted, that it was his duty to protect the affections of his daughters, to guard them against misappropriation. "See that a man is worthy of your love before you give it to him," he was wont to say. "Establish a cause and thereby justify a an effect. There are many ways by which a man may distinguish himself—by bravery, by skill in certain directions—but a woman must look to marriage. There are ways for her to become notorious, to get herself talked about, but her truest distinction must come through her choice of a husband."

Finally all the girls save one were married off. Rose had been plucked by a man who was put off until he had snatched distinction from the tight hand of fate. And this is the story they tell of him. He had been a failure, a mere nobody, up to the time he accepted the challenge of a ringmaster to ride a trick mule. He had failed as a distiller—and when a man fails at that business in Kentucky there is an organic weakness about him—he had failed as a county clerk, as a town marshal; he had owned a slow horse, a cow that was dry half the time—in fact, it was agreed that there was no hope for him. But a circus came along. He was a candidate for sheriff at the time, but with no chance of success. Even his best friends guyed him.

Well, he went to the circus and sat on one of the high seats, unhonored, undiscovered. The trick mule was led out and in due time slammed the senses out of a livery stable negro. Again the challenge was shouted, but the negroes shook their heads, and it was not expected that any one but a negro would come forward. The crowd was disappointed. Was there no one there with nerve enough to espouse the cause of the people? Just at this moment Shanks Boyle, the failure, arose and said that he reckoned that he would undertake the job. And he rode the mule.

And they say that the poor thing squatted and brayed for mercy. Boyle was elected sheriff, and then the next year was short in his accounts, but that made no difference, for his friends, true admirers of genius, made up the deficit. Shortly after this he married Rose Bales.

The remaining daughter was named Lily. She was the handsomest flower in the garden, and no young man in the community had an excuse to fall in love with her. But not long ago there strolled into the neighborhood a lank, peculiar looking fellow who said that he was on the lookout for a chunk of a wife. This was said at Nesbitt's store, and it was said in a matter of fact way by the young, lank fellow as he sat on a nail keg, spitting through his teeth. Bill Nesbitt turned to him and remarked:

"I reckon you've come to the right place. There's a girl up yonder on the hill—old Colonel Bales' daughter. She'd make you a monstrous fine wife."

The fellow spat through his teeth and remarked that he was somewhat particular as to what sort of a family he married into. "I've been on the look-out for quite awhile," said he, "and I ain't seed no woman yit that jolted me much. I'm putty hard to jolt, I reckon. My brother was once in love with a girl, and he told me that she hit him powerful hard, but I went with him to see her, and I sot square in front of her, but she didn't hit me none to speak of. Yes, I'm so blamed particular that I reckon that I'm goin to have a good bit of trouble in findin a woman to suit me. I reckon I must have been born that way. Don't think pap was that way, and I know brother wasn't."

"What mout be your requirements?" Bill asked.

"Oh, after all, I don't reckon I'm as hard to please as some fellows. I'm jest peculiar, that's all. There's a mighty big difference in men as to what they demand of a woman, some insistin on one thing and some another, and the strangest part of it all is that I don't care so much what she's like as I do about her daddy. And I have often thought that I could look at a gal and tell all about her daddy. I just nachully want the old man to be a hummer. I reckon I must be sorter crazy on the subject."

"Ain't it money you're after?" Bill asked.

"No, I don't care if the old man hain't got a cent. I just want him to be different from other folks. I don't know why I'm that way, but I am, and I can't help it. Oh, I could have married lots of putty girls with money and hosses and all that sort of thing, and liked them well enough, understand, but wouldn't marry 'em because their daddies did't strike me right—had nothin to distinguish themselves with, so to speak. Well," he added, getting up and stretching himself, "reckon I'll go up yonder on the hill and sorter look around. I may like up there, and I may not. Can't tell. Do you suppose the old man's at home?"

"Yes. And the girl's there too."

"Oh, I don't care whether I see her or not. Well, I believe I'll go up and sorter prod the old feller. Mebby he'll satisfy me, and mebby he won't. Good day."

He sauntered up the hill. The old colonel was standing at the gate.

"How are you?"

"Mid'lin," said the colonel. The lank fellow placed an elbow on the fence, "wollopped" his tobacco about in his mouth a time or two, and lazily looking up at the colonel remarked: "I don't live in this here neighborhood. Live a good ways from here. Yes, and I 'lowed that before the season got busy again I'd drap over here and gather me up a chunk of a wife."

"The h—l you did!" the colonel exclaimed.

"Yes, before the season gets busy again. But I'm mighty hard to please, I tell you. Don't care much about the girl though. A feller down yander advised me to come up here and marry your daughter, but I replied that I was so blamed particular"——

They picked up the lank fellow and hauled him to a boarding house, and when he came to he made certain inquiries concerning himself, and then said that he reckoned that it was all right. He said that some men had one way of handling a subject and some another. "We live and learn," he remarked. "Ef we furgit somethin today, we're mighty apt to think of somethin new tomorrow."

The old colonel called on the fellow. He was as tender hearted as he was peculiar. The lank man forgave him, and they talked pleasantly of the shooting scrapes they had seen, and an intimacy of pity on one side and a peculiar aimlessness on the other grew between them. One day the lank man, sitting in a rocking chair at the window, looked up after a few moments of pondering and remarked:

"Colonel, I wouldn't marry your daughter, sir."

"Well, I gad, that's cool. Wouldn't marry her. Why, hang it, you have never seen her."

"I know, but that don't make any difference since she'd have nothing to do with it anyway. I have discovered that there ain't nothin remarkable about you anyhow. I don't know of a more ordinary man than you are, and I couldn't afford to have you for a daddy-in-law."

"Why, you impudent scoundrel, I'm the most prominent man in this community, and, I gad, sir, I'm kin to the Peppers."

"I don't care if you are kin to the lettuce and the onions. You don't strike me as amountin to much. No, I don't want your daughter."

"Why, confound your lank picture, if you bully me I'll make you take her."

"Oh, I reckon not."

"What! Now, look here, I never was bullied in my life, and I never intend to be. Blast me if you shan't marry her this very day. I'll teach you to come bullying me, you good for nothing wretch."

The old man went away snorting, and the fact is that the lank fellow and the girl were married that very day, and now everybody is laughing at the colonel, for the peculiar fellow and the girl had been engaged to each other for more than a year.—Opie Read in New York Herald.

One Battle He Lost.

There is one battle which General M. M. Trumbull did not win. It was fought in a down town restaurant. He entered the restaurant and was very obsequiously ushered to a seat by an ebony waiter, who was clearly impressed with the general's imposing appearance. The darky's countenance registered several degrees lower when General Trumbull gave his order:

"Coffee and rolls."

"Yes, sah," was the waiter's disappointed reply. He had looked for a big order and did not get it.

When he returned with the coffee, the general looked at it a moment in supreme disgust. The fluid had slopped down the side of the cup and half filled the saucer.

"I don't want that coffee. Bring me some in decent shape," ordered the general.

"Dat all de kin o' coffee you gwine t' git," replied the waiter.

"Look here!" said the general sharply, "I fought four years to give liberty to the likes of you, and I'm carrying three bullets in my body now. Get me some decent coffee."

With this telling the general began to unfold his newspaper, considering the matter settled.

"Yes, sah! You done it! You done it, sah! But dat's all de coffee you gwine to git heah!" obdurately replied the negro.

And the general was obliged to take his ungrateful medicine in silence.—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Absentminded.

The absentminded man is at it again. He had been reading the egg story and decided to try the trick. The first thing to do was to boil the egg. How many minutes? he asked himself, and going to the stove with the egg in one hand and his watch in the other he dropped the latter in the hot water. Then, placing the egg on the table, he sat down to read until the time was up. At the end of five or six minutes he was surprised to find the egg lying there before him; but, supposing that he had himself taken it from the kettle and cooled it, he proceeded to crack and peel it. The consequence may be imagined. Finally he missed his watch. The house was searched high and low, and it was not till the following morning that the cook found it in the kettle, where it had been boiling for hours.—Exchange.

D. RANSOM'S GENUINE OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 49 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE CAUSE OF HOME MISSIONS.

Annual Meeting of the W. H. M. S. of the M. E. Church Held at Tecumseh, Last Week.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, of the Adrian district, was held in the M. E. church of this place last Thursday and Friday, May 31st and June 1st. The audience room was tastily decorated with flowers and potted plants. The ladies served lunches in the basement of the church throughout the convention. About 40 delegates were present besides other visitors from different parts of the district and the sessions were well attended by ladies of the other churches and societies of the village.

The meeting opened Thursday at 2 p. m. After devotional exercises, led by Mrs. E. H. Cogshall, of Hudson, the president, Miss Hattie Johnston, of Adrian, took the chair and opened the convention proper with a short review of the past year's work and an earnest appeal for a loyal interest and devotion in and to the work of the future.

After the reading and approval of the minutes of last year's meeting, and the appointment of committees, Mrs. R. C. Carter, of Blissfield, read a paper on "Immigrant Girls." She brought before her hearers a picture of the shiploads of girls mostly composed of the Old World pauperism, who have heard of our land of freedom, and who by the aid of immigrant societies across the seas, have suffered the indecencies of a steerage passage, and been dumped upon our shores homeless, friendless, bringing with them many of the Old World superstitions and vices. Some are bound for the west, but the majority fill our eastern cities. About 400,000 immigrants land at our ports yearly and the number increases with every passing year. These immigrant girls should be cared for. A few come to friends, but thousands are strangers in a strange land. Our missionaries are there to meet them. Catholic priest and nun, in their eagerness to make this land theirs, are there also, while various forms of evil lie in wait at every port to entrap innocent girls and many are deceived and fall an early prey to wickedness. Immigrant Girls' Homes are being established at nearly all our seaports, as well as many of our inland cities, the purpose of which is to help the needy and unfortunate girls teach them, and if possible to procure homes for them. These steerage loads of immigrant girls are the mothers and grandmothers of the future, and the safety of our country depends greatly upon their being properly trained both in mind and morals.

"A Plea for the Deaconess" was the subject of a paper read by Mrs. Jennie Lewis, of Deerfield. In many of our large cities we find a band of noble workers called Deaconesses, whose lives are given to work among the poor and needy, nursing the sick, feeding the hungry and through these ministrations of love leading many to a knowledge of the blessed Savior. They receive no salary and depend upon contributions of supplies, clothing, fruit, money, etc., to aid them in making the needy comfortable. The writer urged her hearers to aid these missionaries in their work by sending supplies from the various auxilliaries to our Deaconess home in Detroit. The paper was followed by a discussion by the ladies of the convention. A song by Misses Metta McKinney, Ella Fowler and Ella Potter closed the afternoon session.

The evening session opened at 7:30 with an organ voluntary by Miss Anderson. Prayer was offered by Rev. Varner. A duet, organ and cornet, was rendered by Miss Anderson and Mr. Wilson. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. M. Gamble, of Tecumseh. The response, written by Mrs. Carrie Lamb, of Blissfield, was, in her absence, read by Miss Linna Brown, of Hudson. A solo by Miss Dora Grayson, was finely rendered and much appreciated.

Mrs. Rev. Bourns, of Hudson, then gave the address of the evening Subject: "The Rise and Progress of the Woman's Home Missionary Society."

The divine principle of human brotherhood announced by John the Baptist in his commission announcing the coming of the great Messiah, and so perfectly exemplified throughout the life of our Savior, is the mainspring of all missionary action. It was this that led to the formation of the various missionary societies. Multitudes all along the centuries, inspired by this divine influence, have been led to do for others, but it remained for us of to-day to be associated with those great organizations which are intended to enlist the sympathy of all the world. After the need of missionary work among the women of our land was recognized, those who were awake to the needs of the hour did not fail to embrace every opportunity of bringing the cause before the church. The first work was accomplished through private contributions. The approval of this enterprise by the general conference of 1880, led to the organization of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal church. Not quite 14 years have passed since the first meeting was called in Cincinnati, but volumes could not contain a correct account of the work and workers. Last year's report shows that $6,437.98 in money and $2,508.78 in supplies was raised by the Detroit conference society alone. Best of all the work has promise of greater good in the future for it rests upon 2078 loyal and loving christian hearts.

A dialogue by 15 girls was pleasingly presented. A collection was taken, "Blest be the Tie" was sung, and the first day's session closed with the benediction by Rev. Varner.

FRIDAY'S PROGRAM.

Friday morning's session was opened by devotionals conducted by Mrs. A. F. Bournes, of Hudson. The forenoon was devoted almost entirely to business. Reports were given from officers and the different auxillaries of the district. The question "How can local auxilliaries be made effective," was discussed. Questions were asked and answered. A memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Clegg, of Adrian. Miss Ella Fowler gave a recitation.

At 2:30 p. m. Rev. J. M. Kerridge, of Adrian, led the afternoon devotional exercises.

Mrs. Melvina Martin, of Rollin Center, then read a paper, "Our Heads, Our Hearts, Our Hands."

We women are especially indebted to the times in which we live for our multiplied opportunities for doing and getting good. The cries of oppressed and sinning humanity have entered into the ears of the Lord and on every hand we hear the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us." The Lord of the harvest is honoring Christian women with a call to go forth into the great unoccupied field and sow and reap in His name. There is need of the most intense activity of our best possible selves if we would be prepared to touch the world to its healing rather than its wounding. But how will our efficiency and sufficiency be all it should be, unless our heads our hearts and our hands are the sanctified instruments of divine dictation? Legal obedience is good as far as it goes, but falls far short of loving obedience which recognizes both the spirit and the letter of the law. The right attitude of our heart has much, yea, everything to do with the success of work in this world and right heartedness may well be considered the first requisite. When this is attained it is much easier to maintain a right attitude toward the world. Our work will be accepted or rejected, not for its perfection or imperfection, but according to the motive which actuated the deed. Right motives are not the fruit of unregenerate hearts. There is little room in this world of sin and woe for indifferent, passive goodness. We are to engage ourselves to do our best not asking what shall be our success as measured by the world's standard. After we have done our best, we remember that it is not by might nor by power, but by the spirit of the living God.

A paper was then presented by Dr. Greene, of Adrian. She spoke of the rapidly increasing good accomplished in the world, but set against it the dark picture of the more rapidly increasing evil, arguing that it was not only the duty but the privilege of the vast army of Christian men to crush out these evils, if each would do his duty. She urged the work of the temperance cause among both men and women and said that if every Christian man in the world was in earnest the year '99 would not witness a single saloon in the world.

Visiting pastors and fraternal delegates were then introduced: also Rev. Davis, presiding elder of the district. The response to their greetings was given by Mrs. Furguson, of Adrian.

A quartette was then sung by Messrs. Tansley, Conklin, Day, and Miss Burnett.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year,—

Pres.—Miss Hattie Johnson, Adrian.

V. Pres.—Mrs. M. Martin, Rollin Center.

Sec.—Miss Hattie Montgomery, Tecumseh.

Cor. Sec. and Treas.—Miss Linna Brown, Hudson.

The afteroon session closed with the benediction by Presiding Elder Davis.

Friday evening's session opened with an organ voluntary by Miss Anderson. Prayer by Rev. Davis. Mrs. J. J. Orr rendered a solo, after which Rev. J. M. Kerridge, of Adrian, gave the address of the evening. Subject, "The Broken Vase." Illustrating the story of Mary, who broke the box of costly ointment and bathed her Saviour's feet with its contents, he dwelt upon woman's capabilities and her increasing power and influence for good in the world. He held the close attention of his hearers for an hour. A trio, by three young ladies and the benediction by Rev. Davis, closed the convention. From first to last it had been a success and was pronounced by those present the most successful convention of the society since its organization.

Grant Fellows and John Bird are in town to-day.

The Democratic State Convention will be held on Thursday, June 28th, at Grand Rapids.

About four o'clock last Sunday afternoon the station at Raisin Center was burned; the fire is supposed to have originated in the switch lights.

The Maccabees at Tipton are in a thriving condition. The tent now has 41 members, with five applications on the clerk's desk and the hive has 22 members.

A chapter of the Order Eastern Star was instituted at Ann Arbor last Thursday evening with over fifty charter members. Mrs. E. B. Wood, of this village, assisted in the installation ceremonies.

The Michigan Woman's Press Association is in session this week at Ann Arbor. Miss Loana Stacy represents Tecumseh at the meetings, taking the opportunity to visit several acquaintances in that city.

Nearly thirty members of the Tecumseh Chapter, O. E. S, visited Manchester last Thursday evening to witness the degree work in that lodge. They were most hospitably entertained and all who attended voted it a most enjoyable evening.

The Democratic County Convention has been called for Wednesday, June 18th, at 10 o'clock a. m. Twenty-five delegates will be chosen to attend the State convention at Grand Rapids, and same number for the Congressional convention hereafter to be called. Also a county committee for two years.

The M. E. church at Springville will observe Children's Day on the evening of June 10th, by the use of the beautiful program, "The Church of the Future,—Christ our Foundation." The pastor will speak on "Christian Education" as necessary to the completion of the "Church of the Future," both at Tipton and Springville.

A. W. Slayton had quite a novel experience during his trip into Northern Michigan last week. First he went to Oscoda and took Loud's narrow gauge logging road to Potts head quarters, where the train stopped for the night; right early in the morning went farther up the road to Fairview, a village of some 10 houses in the woods. Here he was able to hire a horse and cart by sending one-half mile for it, drove six miles into the woods, making 56 miles from civilization; here he found plenty of lumber and neighbors there told him that they had bear, deer, wolves and any amount of rabbits. Here was a log school house, 7 feet high, 12x12 ft., and when the scholars were all present they had 6; he also heard of a still smaller one not far away. On his way back he traveled the 50 miles on the locomotive of a logging train; they had on 19 cars of Pine logs, 90,000ft., the shortest ones were 60 feet and the longest 80 feet; these were put in the river at Oscoda and rafted to Tonawanda, N. Y. Gus says that he has had enough of logging trains; they take two locomotives to haul cars up the hills and just let them scoot down. Scared about a year's growth out of him.

Scribner's Magazine for May opens with an article of unusual importance, entitled "Some Episodes of Mountaineering," by Edwin Lord Weeks, describing some of his own stirring adventures, while mountain-climbing in the Alps, with illustrations furnished by the same hand. The author and artist is equally skillful as a picturesque writer and as an artist of rare ability, both in landscape and figure work. He has in this article given a reality to Alpine mountain-climbing that no previous popular article has given. Some of these marvellous illustrations show daring feats, made from sketches on the spot when the artist himself was in a most difficult position, and showing the pose and action of those with him while actually accomplishing a difficult bit of climbing.

The St. Louis Republic, of the 29th of April, contains, among others, a cut of the handsome $75,000 residence of Will Bixby, one of the big men of the St. Louis Car Manufacturing Co. As Will was born and raised in this city, and graduated from our high school, we feel like throwing up our hat and hurrahing for him. Will is all right, and is getting there with both feet.—Evening Telegram.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 15, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 16 will be ready for distribution to-morrow.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in twelve parts, containing 20 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enamelled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. No 2 is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 20 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents, to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon, will receive one of these patterns free. Any othea pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

Edison's Kinetograph (an instrument that makes 165,000 separate stops, and pictures in one hour) will be described in Harper's Young People for May 22d. Another contribution to the same number tells how to make a Bell electric telephone for eight cents; and the only public school regiment in the United States, the Boston School Regiment, is described, with illustrations of the dress parade on the Common and portraits of officers.

We have received a folder issued by the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, entitled: "Southern Facts for Home Seekers and Travelers." It not only contains the time tables of this company, but also much statistical information in regard to the South in general, and especially that section through which their road passes, condensed into a small compass. The folder will be sent free to all applicants by addressing E. E. Posey, Gen. Pass. Agt., Mobile, Ala.

H. Rude, proprietor of the Lunch House, is enjoying a few days respite from work at his old home in Waterford.

Mrs. Hurd and wife, of Tuscola, Ill., are the guests of Rev. C. M. Brown this Friday. Mrs. Hurd remained here over Sunday.

Children's Day will be observed next Sunday morning at the M. E. church. Regular preaching service will be held in the evening.

The well trained singers in the Whiting Chorus. Their concert will be a delightful treat for our people, especially as it is something new for Tecumseh.

Mr. Eccles has opened a tailor shop in town over the store formerly occupied by Geo. W. Marsden. He would like to have all his friends remember it.

The Democrats of Tecumseh will hold in caucus at the Council building next Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, to elect delegates to the County Convention.

Rev. H. A. Smith and Rev. F. C. Eccles exchanged pulpits last Sunday morning. We venture to say that neither of them have lost any friends by this liberal action of toleration and good will.

The Fred Landgraf building, next to Allen Bros' store, is being thoroughly repaired with paint, paper and a new roof. Will it be used for a new boot and shoe store or for the post office? Wait and see.

Mr. A. D. Lawrence left home Tuesday afternoon for Detroit to attend the wedding of his niece Miss Lena Lawrence. From there he will take a business trip to New York state before coming home.

The young ladies of Brooklyn are preparing to give a minstrel show Friday evening, June 14th, assisted by those who participated in the entertainment recently given at Ypsilanti. All invited to attend.

The marriage of Alvah Mariott and Miss Lena Lawrence of Detroit, took place last evening at the residence of the bride's parents. The many friends of the bride in Tecumseh will extend best wishes and congratulations.

The Lake Shore road pulled off four extra trains on the main line, yesterday, viz., trains Nos. 71, 72, 73 and 74, on account of the scarcity of coal. It is understood that the scheme of laying off gangs in two weeks shifts has been enforced at the Lake Shore shops in this city.—Evening Telegram.

Miss Ella Barnum, of Adrian, will be at C. D. Kinney & Co's store, June 11th, with her collection of Decorated China, and would be pleased to meet all ladies interested in china painting, and those who wish to join her class. She has recently returned from Detroit where she has spent some time under instruction of Mr. Geo. Ley Kauf, one of the finest china decorators of the country.

Remember the Midway at the Armory, Friday June 8.

Ride in the Sedan Chair at the Midway, At Armory, June 8th.

Satterthwaite Bros. have just put in a new furnace for Orr & Temple.

The Democrats of Tecumseh will hold their caucus at the Council Building next Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The Whiting Chorus is under the direction of Prof. Francesco Seley, president of the Michigan Music Teachers Association. He is a thorough master of musical discipline, and to his peculiar gift in the impressment of his ideal upon the work of his class, is due in a high degree the power and expression of the chorus.—Adrian Weekly Press.

As Saturday, June 9th, will be Flower Mission Day, will all who are interested in this beautiful custom, please send all the choice flowers they can spare, especially rose buds and pansies, to the home of Mrs. Jane Satterthwaite, at Mrs. R. Hall's opposite the Baptist church on Friday afternoon, June 8th. We shall need a good supply as there are many sick in Tecumseh. Mrs. M. E. Sutton, Supt. of flower Mission work, Tecumseh W. C. T. U.

The High School team went to Britton last Saturday and defeated the crack first nine there by a score of 18 to 13. Owing to the fact that a majority of the H. S. players attended the Senior reception the night before the score was not as close as it might have been. Return game June 16th. Earned runs, T. H. S, 7; Britton, 6; 2-base hits Whelan, S. Eastlick; 3-base hit, Palmer; stolen bases, T. H. S. 10; Britton, 4; bases on balls off Eastlick, 4; Lee 2; Hughes. 3; hit by pitched ball by Harris 1; struck out by Eastlick, 6; Lee, 2; Harris, 7; passed ball by Keusch, 3; by Lowe, 4; wild pitches by Hughes, 2; Eastlick, 1. Time of game, 2:40; Umpires Britton and McClure. The score will be found in the Britton news.

In the "The Charm and the Jewel," the four ladies were exquisitely costumed, Miss Bess Johnston appearing in a stunning society girl make-up, in the last act. She sang her difficult role most charmingly, and was perfectly at home upon the stage. Miss Georgia Rice is ever the sweet little actress and singer, and by her modest appearance and pleasing voice still farther pleased her old friends and many new ones. Miss Shoemaker's beautiful mezzo soprano voice very charmingly told the story of the Italian flower girl. Mrs. Seley's rendition of Giatana, the Spanish Gipsy, was very neatly done. She was graceful, and her deep contralto voice was never heard to better advantage.—Evening Telegram.

The B. Y. P. U. held a conquest meeting Sabbath evening at the Baptist church. The services were very interesting and at their close the rite of baptism was administered to J. B. Colvin.

An alarm of fire was rung on Sunday evening, caused by an incipient blaze in the top of the table factory. The damage was slight, as the fire was soon extinguished. A night watchman is a paying investment.

The Grand Concert by the Whiting Chorus was the musical event of our local history, and the hearts of our citizens swelled with pride as they noted the imposing array of talent which Adrian was capable of producing. The choruses were sung in a magnificent manner, exceeding expectation in the perfect ensemble of voice, and the force, fire, and musical warmth of the thoroughly trained singers. There was a swing, sonority and vigor in the various renditions such as could only be obtained from continuous rehearsing under skilled direction.—Adrian Daily Times.

A committee from the State University visited Tecumseh about two weeks ago to look through our schools. Prof. Kellogg has just received a letter from President Angell stating that Tecumseh has been placed on the list of those schools, whose graduates will be admitted without examination, in each of our three courses; B. L.; B. S.; and Ph. B. Our schools have an excellent standing now, and the teachers of the present year have all been engaged for the coming year with one exception. Our foreign tuition money will exceed $700 this year, the largest in the history of the school.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

down town with an address by Fred A. Maynard, and then everyone went to the home. Department Commander Karitz presided at the unveiling and Secretary of State Washington Gardner delivered the address.

The monument is of Barre granite, 18 feet high and cost $2,500. It is surmounted by the statue of a veteran soldier 6 feet 6 inches in height chiseled from a solid block. The shaft is 4 feet square and 14 feet 10 inches high, and bears this inscription:

In Memory of the Soldiers and Sailors Who Fought in the War of the Rebellion.
1861-1865

Below the shaft on the front of the third base is the Michigan coat of arms in bronze, and on the second base are the words in raised letters: "Michigan Soldiers' Home." The base is 7 feet 8 inches square and rests on a solid foundation of masonry. The monument stands in the Home cemetery, which is laid out in the form of a maltese cross, in the northwest corner of the grounds.

VICKSBURG, May 31.—The new soldiers' monument was dedicated Wednesday. Hon. H. B. Hudson, of Manceiona, delivering the address. The monument stands on the soldiers' plot in the cemetery and was erected through the efforts of the Woman's Relief Corps. It is granite 12 feet high. On one face is the inscription: "Honor to the Defenders of the Union, Heroes of 1861-1865, Acker Post 200," and on the other the Woman's Relief Corps monogram and the words: "Erected by the W. R. C., 1893."

FOUND GUILTY.

Asa Tefft to Serve Thirty Years for Killing His Uncle.

HASTINGS, June 1.—Asa Tefft will spend the next thirty years of his life in Jackson prison, the judge so decreeing Thursday morning. He took his sentence without flinching. Tefft murdered and then robbed his uncle, Leroy Rogers, a farmer who lived alone near this village. Rogers was shot three times and then terribly cut about the head and neck with an ax. The evidence, though circumstantial, was so complete that the defense did not attempt to prove Tefft's whereabouts at the time of the murder.

Death of William McArthur.

CHEBOYGAN, June 2.—William McArthur died Friday morning. He had been prominent in business and political circles for many years, and was formerly a member of the firm of McArthur Bros., contractors of Chicago. He was a member of the legislature when democrats were scarce, and was a presidential elector in 1882. The remains will be taken to Palmyra, N. Y., for burial. He leaves a widow, but no children of his own.

Steamers Collide.

SAULT STE. MARIE, June 3.—The steamer George Spencer, up-bound and light, collided with the schooner Alverson, laden with ore and bound down, at the head of the canal Saturday night. The Alverson's mizzen mast was carried away and the life boat broken in two, in addition to much other damage. The loss to the schooner will exceed $1,000.

Giddings a Candidate for Congress.

LANSING, June 1.—Lieut. Gov. J. Wright Giddings has declared himself a candidate for congress, to succeed Congressman Moon, of Muskegon.

—We map out our future likesome unknown coast, and we say here is a harbor, there a rock; the one we will attain, the other shun, and do neither; some chance gale springs up and bears us far o'er some unfathomed sea.—I. E. Landon.

MICHIGAN FLOCKS.

An Enormous Shrinkage in Value Is Reported.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3.—Information which Senator McMillan is gathering concerning the wool industry seems to show that the sheep owners of Michigan have suffered a tremendous shrinkage in the value of their flocks. Finely bred sheep that were formerly worth from $10 to $20 each are being disposed of at less than two dollars. The slaughter which is going on among the unprofitable innocents is said to be awful. Whole flocks are being killed for mutton.

Returned to Work.

HARD TO BELIEVE.

Charges of Inhumanity Brought Against Bay City Parents.

BAY CITY, June 3.—A sensation has been caused here by the publication of an interview with Sanitary Officer Wyman in relation to the deaths of certain children from alleged neglect of parents in cases of diphtheria for the purpose of securing the small amount of insurance on their lives. The sanitary officer says that the cases have occurred so often that he is forced to believe that the shameful neglect and carelessness of parents were due to the fact that the lives of their children were insured. Experience has convinced him that in several instances innocent lives have been sacrificed to an insatiable greed for gain.

For some time past a life insurance company of New York has been operating here, and has written hundreds of risks on the lives of children ranging from 1 and 2 years to 15 years old. The payments required were small, 5 to 10 cents a week covering the premiums, and for this the parents, in the event of the death of the children, received from $15 to $150. Officer Wyman has been at work on the matter, and has found four cases where children were permitted to die during the last few months for no cause except to collect the insurance.

One case the past week occurred where the parents got $100 for the death of a 14-year-old girl. The attending physician says there was not the slightest danger of death if the child had been attended to, but he was not called until she had been sick several days, and then the parents refused to get the medicine ordered. The case was reported to the police and to their amazement the parents brazenly announced she was insured. They had told neighbors that she was going to die. The other cases were similar, and it is even known in one case that the child was exposed to diphtheria by the parents and the police allege it was for the direct purpose of causing its death to secure insurance.

The cases reported have all been among the poor and one family being supplied with food by the authorities and still managed to keep up its assessments to the insurance company. The cases are such that the law cannot reach them. While there is a moral certainty of guilt, the lack of direct proof is such that even if there was a law to cover the matter the guilty ones could scarcely be convicted.

LABOR CONGRESS.

It Will Be Held in Lansing on the Third Day of July.

JACKSON, May 31.—The conference of the officers of the Federation, Knights of Labor, State Farmers' Alliance and Industrial union, met Wednesday at the Hibbard house, called here by the resolution adopted by the state K. of L., looking toward a labor congress. After discussion of the present condition of the industrial world, the conference fully organized by electing John Devlin chairman and William Crewe secretary. A call was issued for a labor congress, to be composed of delegates from each local and central labor body in the state to meet in Lansing July 3, 1894.

CORNER STONE LAID.

Bay City's New City Hall the Scene of a Big Display.

BAY CITY, May 31.—Twenty thousand persons were present at the laying of the corner stone of the new $200,000 city hall Wednesday afternoon. Military and masonic organizations, as well as many other lodges and societies, were here from Alpena, St. Johns, Corunna, Saginaw and Flint. Grand Master W. H. Phillips, of Menominee, conducted the exercises at the stone. A chorus of 300 school children sang "America" and "Rally 'Round the Flag." Memorial day exercises were held by grand army posts during the morning.

Licenses Refused.

LANSING, June 3.—Insurance Commissioner Giddings has refused to renew the license of the Central Michigan Live-Stock association, of Detroit, and will ask for a receiver for the Farmers' and Horsemen's Live-Stock association, of Ypsilanti. The commissioner has also refused a license to the American Monitor, of Detroit, an association purporting to do a fraternal insurance business. The license is refused on the ground that the association assumes to do a business not authorized by the insurance laws of Michigan.

Operated a Private Mail Route.

GRAND RAPIDS, June 3.—George D. Dowling, widely known as a banker and lumberman, it is claimed operated a private mail cart between Whitehall and Montague to accommodate Montague citizens, who disliking the reforce postmaster, boycotted him by sending all their mail to Whitehall. Suit has been begun against him to collect the $150 penalty for running a private mail route.

1000 Meals for Five Cents

Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require say 17 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trifle greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having

Diamond Crystal Salt

instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our Dairy Salt, there's money in it. Address Diamond Crystal Salt Co., ST. CLAIR, MICH.

C. L. Morgan, of Macon, was in town Tuesday.

Fred Clark, of Brooklyn, was visiting friends here on Sunday.

John Schreder is planting seventy-five acres of beans on the section farm.

E. F. Muir left Friday for Detroit to visit his daughter who resides in that city.

Clara Bush has just finished a very successful term of school in the Nichols district.

S. W. Demuth and Geo. Runyon went to the lakes Tuesday to put up a new boat house.

Mrs. J. F. N. Bowen visited at J. W. Bradner's last Friday, also J. E. Woodward and wife.

Chas. Hayes, a barber once in the employ of Thos. Roper, has been doing the town for the past week.

The graduating class of Clinton high school number 14 this year, the largest class that ever graduated.

Peter Snauble is now hauling the lumber from here that he bought at Saginaw for his new barn.

We are glad to learn that Miss Mary Fitzgerald is able to be out again after her long and tedious illness.

Bradley Way and Mrs. Susan Fisher, who were married last week at Ann Arbor, will occupy the old Lazell farm.

Mrs. W. P. Wastell and Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle left for Port Huron Thursday for a week's visit with friends.

Frank Smith and wife gave a pedro party to a few of their friends last Friday night. Frank Palmer won the prize.

A. C. Huntington, wife and Sadie, visited a brother of his near Ypsilanti last Monday. C. D. Keyes accompanied them.

W. B. Keyser left home Tuesday morning for a few days recreation. He will visit Cadillac and Lake View before his return.

The Episcopal social is being held at Mrs. Geo. Hard's to day, instead of Mrs. J. S. Kies'. The change was made on account of illness.

Rev. Warner, pastor of the Congregational church will preach a Maccabee anniversary sermon next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock.

Dr. J. L. Tuttle and Mrs. John Kimball have placed awnings upon their dwellings thus greatly improving their appearance and comfort.

The baccalaureate sermon to the High School graduating class will be delivered next Sunday evening at the M. E. church by Rev. D. H. Ramsdell.

The village assessment roll just completed shows a total assessed valuation of $580,000, an increase over last year of about $45,000. We consider this a very favorable showing for these hard times.

The game of ball Saturday between the married men and single men was a fine one, the former being the stronger outside the battery. The regular team was divided in this game. Considering that both nines had not played for one or two years it is a wonder that no more errors were made. It required ten innings to settle it. Score, 11 to 8 in favor of the single men.

Dr. J. E. White is rapidly gaining an enviable position as a surgeon as well as physician. He has performed many difficult operations since he has been here. A week ago last Monday he operated on Grant Schreder's boy for strangulated hernia. Last week Thursday he removed a portion of the spinal column from Mrs. George Lane, of Addison, who went to Ann Arbor to have the operation performed, but decided to return and have the doctor perform it here, and Tuesday he removed a polypus from the nose of Neil Williams. All were successful.

Last Thursday afternoon the following members of the Eastern Star visited the Manchester fraternity: Doctor and Mrs. White, Mr. and Mrs. Niblack, Mr. and Mrs. Kishpaugh, Nellie Kishpaugh, Delia Nase, Etta Johnson, Hattie Johnston, Clyde Marsteller; also Emma Reddick, Lina Jones, Della Kies, Emma Van DeMark, Grace Smith, Carrie Woodward and Genevieve Burroughs, in one conveyance, with C. D. Keyes as driver, escort and protector. They were joined by a large delegation from the Tecumseh chapter. As the guests drove in they were received by a committee of sisters and brothers of Manchester chapter, who, after a most cordial greeting passed them along to others at the head of the first flight of stairs, who in a like manner received and passed them to others at the head of the second flight. Here they were taken in charge by others. After wraps had been removed a general social time was held in the lodge room. Shortly after six o'clock the banquet was served in the pleasant rooms below. The menu was complete and served in fine style. Many guests who were not members of the order, but elegible to membership, were present to enjoy the banquet and social part. About eight o'clock the chapter was called to order, when the officers of Manchester chapter exemplified the work of the order in an admirable manner. After the conclusion of the work some happy remarks were made by representatives of the different chapters and then came the adieus. The members of Manchester chapter in their manner of receiving and entertaining their guests presented an object lesson worthy of imitation by other chapters.

DAYS OF SORROW AND GLADNESS.

The Address of Grant Fellows Delivered at Tecumseh on Memorial Day.

There are days in the history of nations, like the histories of men, that are filled with sunshine and gladness. There are days in the history of nations like the histories of men, that are filled with darkness and gloom. There are days that are bright and days that are filled with shadows. There are days of storm and turmoil, as well as days that are filled with pleasant dreams. There are days of war and strife, as well as days of gladness and prosperity.

And in the histories of nations, like the histories of men, there are days when the friendly hand has been put forth to save, to sustain and to uphold. There are days when loyal and loving hearts, cheered on by the love of country, have urged the men to deeds of daring, and patriotism, and of self-sacrifice.

It is in honor of such men as these that we to-day assemble. It is to honor the living and to pay due respect to the dead. We should not be dilatory in this duty; we should not be negligent in performing the task that a due respect for these men require. We should pay to them all the honor which their bravery and their self-sacrifice have won for them.

We are a nation of citizens who love our freedom. We love to breathe the free air with which the All Wise Ruler of the Universe has so bountifully provided us. You loved the sisterhood of states; you love the union, and you were determined that it should be preserved; and when the rebel guns were brought to bear on Fort Sumpter on that April day, 1861, and the shots fell one after another upon its walls; when the stars and stripes were riddled with bullets, the loyal men—the true men—of the north arose en masse, and determined that secession should be trampled upon, cost what it would. And when the sun went down on that April day, it went down on a nation that was divided into two sections; a nation that should not be united until war had devastated its territory; had robbed northern homes, and southern homes as well, of their fathers, their brothers, their husbands and their sons. It was to be a war of brother against brother; of two sections that before that time had dwelled together as men of one family; and the bars were to float where only the stars and stripes had been seen before.

There were men who went out in answer to calls of the President, who left the plows in the furrow, the tools on the work-bench; who left the fireside desolate; who left wife in tears; men who went out in the great struggle, never to return again.

These were the men whom we are called upon to-day to honor, and over whose graves you will strew nature's choicest gifts; beautiful flowers. There are many of you here to-day who watched that struggle from firing on Fort Sumpter to the day under the appletree at Appomatox. You remember how anxiously you watched for news from the front; how eagerly you scanned the list of dead and dying; you, the mothers, and the wives, and the sisters, and you looked to see if your loved one was among the dead and missing. And sometimes the reading of that list brought the tears to your eyes and sorrow to your heart for you knew that your loved one was coming home; yes, coming home to his long, last rest!

"There is no flock, however watched and tended
But one dead lamb is there;
No household, howsoe'er it be defended,
But has one vacant chair."

It was a war that settled forever the vexed question of States Rights, a question that had been discussed pro and con for years and years before. The war of the rebellion was the final tribunal to which this question was appealed, and on the blood-stained battle fields of the rebellion this question was then tried out and settled. It was a war that forever settled another question in this country of ours; and that was that this land should be a land of liberty, a land of freedom, for every citizen, no matter what his color or previous condition of servitude.

The mention of this day brings to us thoughts of those other times. What patriotism, what loyalty, what love of country, fills our minds as we think of this day, and the events in commemoration of which we are assembled. Thoughts of shot and shell, thoughts of the battle-field, thoughts of the wounded and dying; thoughts of the blue and the gray, thoughts of the stars and the stripes, and thoughts of the bars. These days should be made school days, to teach the lessons of patriotism, to teach the generation that come unto the scene of action since those dark days, that in this free American government, a government of the people, by the people, that its existence was preserved thro' the loyalty and the patriotism of its citizens.

The United States stands to-day among the foremost nations of the globe; and yet it has no large standing army like the countries ruled by czars, and kings, and emperors. It needs no standing army, for in the hearts of its citizens there is that loyalty, that patriotism, that love of country, which is stronger than an armed host, and mightier than a powerful army. The old countries of Europe need large standing armies to keep their subjects under control, and to keep them loyal to their flag. But the sons of America are loyal to the stars and stripes not through fear, not through awe, but for love of country, a love for our institutions. The volunteer soldiers of the United States were and always will be the foundation rock upon which the government rests. I have but one thought for the soldiers:—honor for the living and tears for the dead. For the men who tramped the long marches, foot-sore and weary, who slept with no roof over them save the blue canopy of the starry heavens, who went into the battle for God, home and native land, and three hundred thousand of whom are sleeping in our national cemeteries, waiting for the revelle that shall call them to the bright beyond.

The dark days of civil strife have long since gone by. Where once the smoke of battle ascended, now the blast furnaces and factories, send forth the smoke of industry, of peace, of prosperity. The lowing of the cattle now is heard where once the moans of anguish, of agony, and the death gasp arose upon the ear. The reapers are cutting the ripened grain in fields that were once mown by shot and shell. Furrows are now being plowed by tillers of the soil where once the cannon ball plowed its way over a crimson field. The marks of the struggle are being worn away by time, and the bitter feelings which once existed has given way to brotherly love; and now we have no north, no south, no east, no west; but all united in one—our nation.

The men who were central figures in that great struggle are one by one surrendering to the Great Commander. Grant, McClellan, Sheridan, Sherman, have laid down the cares and toils of life. Men who went out in that war as beardless youths have become gray-haired men, and there are many whom you have taken by the hand for the last time; you have looked into their face for the last time; you have called them comrade for the last time, before they cross the river of death. Boys who wore the blue and sat around the same camp-fire, who ate the same kind of hardtack, and who drank from the same canteen, who were mere strippings then, are now the sedate fathers of loyal sons.

Thirty-three years have rolled around since the firing on Fort Sumpter; twenty-nine years have rolled around since Appomattox, and we realise that the time is far from then till now. But the fires of patriotism are not burning low; the people of this country are as patriotic to-day, as loyal to the old flag, as they ever were; and it is in such gatherings as this that the fires of patriotism are kindled; it is in such gatherings as this that we meet and discuss among ourselves the questions that are of interest to us as individuals, and of interest to us as a nation.

To-day there is a question before the American people that strikes me as being one of paramount importance—it is the question of immigration. There are a certain class who come from downtrodden countries of Europe, who make as good and as loyal citizens as we could ask for. That class of honest, hard-working and sober citizens, who left the old country because of its oppression and come to this country because here we have no kings and potentates; who come to this country and become good citizens, tillers of the soil, and who build up for themselves and their children a home this side of the Atlantic. These we welcome. Yet there are those who come to this country who are the criminal class of Europe, and who belong to the worst type of citizens of the old countries. There should be, in my judgment, a law adopted that this latter class of immigration should not only be restricted, but should be absolutely prohibited. There should be such immigration laws as to admit and encourage immigration from the old world of that class of citizens who will make our country better, who will become American citizens and lovers of the stars and stripes. That class should come in. But to that class who come to this country, who are fugitives from justice, that class should be prohibited from making this country a hot-bed for their iniquities. The United States should hold out her hand of welcome to those who desire to become citizens of our country, to those who are willing to renounce their allegiance to their mother country—who become loyal citizens. But that class of citizens who belong to the Mafia of New Orleans, or the Anarchists of Chicago, for that class we should have a wall of fire around our country.

In the late war of the rebellion there was found upon the muster rolls of the United States army the name of many an Irish lad, the name of many a German boy, who had left the Emerald Isle or the Fatherland, because of their oppression, and who came to this country and became loyal citizens. There was many an Irish lad that stood shoulder to shoulder with a Michigan boy, and many a German son marched side by side with an Ohio soldier, and their blood was mingled upon the southern battle-fields. This is the class of citizens that the American people want. But that class of citizens who come from the old countries and come for the purpose of raising their hand against our government; and who come for the purpose of making war upon our flag, we have no room for them; no place for them; they should not come in.

Another question which naturally comes up when we think of the lessons of patriotism, is the fact that in this land of freedom we have a free school system and educational advantages.

This should be improved. Boys and girls who are growing from boyhood to manhood, from girlhood to womanhood, will be the fathers and mothers of the next generation. See that the boy's first foot-steps are guided into the paths of honesty and integrity and good deeds. It has been truly said that the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world. Father and mothers, keep the home influence pure; see that the boys and girls are started out on the right road; place in their hands innocent and instructive books; keep out of their hands the trashy literature of the day; let them have innocent amusements and keep them in the paths of honesty and integrity. Teach them that they owe a duty to their parents; a duty to their state, and a duty to their country, a duty to their God. Teach them to reverence gray hairs; teach them to be kind; teach them to emulate the valor, and the bravery and the loyalty of the men who fought for this country; teach them to remember the boys in blue, who sacrificed so much for our good; teach them that now we have a country, the grandest, the greatest country upon the face of the globe; teach them that it is a united country.

It was my fortune a short time ago to take a steamboat from Cincinnati down the Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans. On the trip down we passed where Island No. 10—one of the important land marks of that great struggle—used to be; but the constant washings of the waters of the Mississippi have gradually worn its shores away, little by little, until to-day not a vestige of this historic spot is left.

And so let us hope that it is with the bitterness that once existed between the north and the south. Let us hope that gradually, like the shores of the island, it will be worn away, until not a vestige and not an atom of it is left, and we can take them by the hand and say to them they are fellow-citizens with us; citizens of one commonwealth, under one flag. But even as we do this, we must not forget the men who made this thing possible. We must not forget the boys in blue who gave up their lives to keep the union flag in the nation's skyes. Reverence and honor them; keep their memories green in our hearts.

Cover them over; yes, cover them over;
Parent, husband, brother and lover;
Shrine in our hearts these dead heroes of ours;
And cover them over with beautiful flowers.

HELL HAD NO TERRORS.

Battle Creek, Mich., April 28.—Before he killed himself C. B. Stevens penned the following letter to a local paper; "Please publish this: it may do some good. I am going to leave this world and try the next; whisky has done it. I have tried, and tried hard, to quit, and I can't. When you see a man that drinks, pity him; don't kick him farther down the hill. I think I have seen hell enough for one man, don't think I will be punished in the next world.

C. B. STEVENS.

LAKE RIDGE, Mich., May 9th '94.

TO THE EDITOR:—I hand you herewith the above clipping from the Detroit Evening News, which shows to a limited extent the burden under which those who are slaves to the liquor habit are laboring. Only those who have had personal experience with the stuff can realize the mental suffering and remorse attendant upon men who WOULD quit and have tried so many times only to fail and sink lower. I am one of them, sixty years of age, used liquor forty years and speak from sad experience. As is generally known in this vicinity, I have taken a course of treatment, popularly called the "Jag Cure," under the care of Dr. Hardy of Britton; call it what you like but it does the work. I am out of the mire' go and come, where and when I like, with no fear of yielding to temptation and going home drunk. The smell and name of whiskey or beer is repulsive to me.

It is for the benefit of men who have tried to quit and failed, that these few lines are written, and if they are instrumental in getting but one sufferer cured the effort will not have been in vain. Why should people not know that you take the gold Cure? They certainly know when you get drunk. Respt.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

All the gold in the world could be put in a room twenty-four feet each way, it is said. That is probably the room in which Mr. Corbett is willing to meet Mr. Jackson alone.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Samuel McClure, of Tecumseh, called on friends Sunday.

The thermometer registered 100° in the shade last Monday.

Emmet Baker, of East Milan, made his annual visit on Children's Day.

Any person finding the church key will please hand the same to the sexton.

D. W. Smith spent the fore part of the week in Bellville with I. D. Loree.

Carrie Holloway, of Rome, is in the village at present under Dr. Rhode's care.

Rev. J. Stansfield and wife, of Port Huron, visited Rev. Cansfield and family last week.

Sheep shearing is the order of the day and wool is selling for 15 and 17 cents a pounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Wolcot, of Milan, spent Sunday as the guests of Mrs. J. Arner and family.

Dispatcher W. D. Stearns, wife and daughter Hazel, of Toledo, Sundayed as the guests of A. J. Sutton.

Mattie Rappleye entertained the scholars of the primary department at her home Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Ramsdell, of Clinton, will occupy the pulpit on next Sunday morning in the absence of Rev. Cansfield.

Remember the date for the W. C. T. U. ice cream lawn social to be held at Mrs. John Arner's on the 27th inst.

Abraham Rhinebold, of Millersville, Ohio, visited his brother, agent Lafe Rhinebold, from Thursday until Monday.

There will be no service at the church Sunday evening as the friends desire to attend Children's Day exercises at Britton.

F. E. Pock'ington with his men are hustling the brick and stone work for the Masonic Temple at Tecumseh in fine shape.

A large delegation of friends from Holloway, Macon and Britton, were in attendance at the Children's Day exercises on Sunday evening.

Daniel VanNocken, of Petersburgh, having purchased the elevator, is prepared to take in grain from this date. L. P. Smith will do the buying for him.

E. L. Lowe, Emma Miller, Mattie Rappleye, Lelia Sutton and J. D. Arner attended the elocution entertainment given by Miss Maxon, at Saline, last Friday evening.

T. J. Toby and wife, of Adrian, Henry Toby and wife, of Toledo, F. G. Florence and family, of Holloway, C. W. Culbertson and family spent Sunday at the home of M. M. Florence.

It looks a little tough when a young lady has to buy a top buggy to make an impression on the young men, and if there is any young man who would like to furnish the horse an engagement can easily be agreed to.

Monday afternoon B. B. Bennett, of Plymouth, exhibited a Bell phonograph, at the church, and the ladies of the church society have completed arrangements for an entertainment to be given in the church on Tuesday evening, June 26. For further particulars see small bills.

Monday being the birthday anniversary of M. M. Florence and J. VanVleet, the event was celebrated at the home of Mr. Van Vleet during the afternoon, by a gathering of relatives and friends. Mr. Florence was 66 years old and Mr. Van Vleet 52. Valuable presents were presented to each of them, and a bountiful repast was served by the host and hostess.

Children's Day exercises passed off very successfully on Sunday evening, the church being filled to overflowing. A large number went away unable to gain admittance. It is estimated that a thousand people were at the gathering. The church was handsomely decorated with potted plants, flowers and evergreens. At the left on the rostrum was erected a tower very tastily decorated and at the right was a fort guarded by the old canon, while the stars and stripes helped to beautify the appearance. The committees of arrangement and decorating did a grand work. The collection for the Children's Day educational fund amounted to nearly $9.00.

The primary department of the village school, under Mattie Rappleye's careful and efficient teaching for the past three years, closed Friday afternoon with appropriate exercises a a floral festival. The exercises consisting of recitations, declamations and singing passed off very finely. Miss Rappleye's ability as a teacher cannot be excelled in any section. Not one word of complaint can be said of her in any way. We understand the board have contracted with Fannie Miller for the coming year. The majority of the board took the matter of wages as the cause for a change, as Miss Rappleye thought she ought to have the same wages she had been getting. With the greatest respect for Miss Miller, we think the board showed a weakness in their judgment when they let a few dollars outweigh experience, especially in this department of the school work. The change of teachers in the advanced rooms was a wise move on the part of the board and was more forcibly proven when it was observed that the principal closed his work without any special demonstration, not even having interest or respect enough for the primary department to attend their closing exercises. We regret very much that as wise a board as we have were so near-sighted in their selection of primary teachers and the feeling of indignation existing may be felt later on, and should be most forcibly resented.

MACON MUSIC.

Mrs. Milan Sage and Mrs. Calvin Davenport are visiting their brother in Vermontville.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wright, of Adrian, spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Libbie Augustus.

The Children's Day exercises at both churches passed off very successfully and the children deserve much praise.

Rev. J. I. Gulick will preach a sermon to the K. O. T. M. and members of Glen Hive, next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Clara Gooding, Miss Charlotte Oven, Mrs. Edward Carter and Miss Susie Langan went to Adrian to attend the Flower Mission work.

Rev. A. W. Stalker, of Detroit, will deliver a lecture in the M. E. church one week from Friday night for the benefit of the Epworth League. Admission, 10 cents.

Dr. Morden and family of Adrian, drove out and spent Sunday with his brother, Dr. Walter Morden, of this place. Mr. Ed Morden remained for a few days' visit with his uncle.

Quite a number of the young people have been receiving cards announcing the graduation of Wm. B. Hatch. June 11th from the law department, Georgetown University, Washington, D. C. We extend our heartiest congratulations.

On account of the lecture to be given at the M. E. church Friday evening, June 22, by Rev. A. W. Stalker, of Detroit, for the benefit of the Epworth League; the social to be held at the home of Geo. Kuder has been postponed. Mr. Stalker has spent some time on this lecture; let all turn out and profit by it. Admission, 10c.

The W. C. T. U. held their monthly tea at the home of Miss Charlotte Oven, last Friday afternoon, a large number time. The following officers were were in attendance and report a pleasant elected:

Prest.—Mrs. Myra Camburn.
1st Vice-Prest.—Mrs. James Hatch.
2nd Vice-Prest.—Mrs. Wm. Osgood.
3rd Vice-Prest.—Mrs. Carter.
4th Vice-Prest.—Mrs. Libbie Hendershot.
Cor. Secty.—Miss Charlotte Oven.
Rec. Secty.—Miss Grace Sage.
Treas.—Mrs. Hattie Sage.

Superintendents were elected for several different departments of work.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. Ed Bove is on the sick list.

Mrs. Da Rice is sick with measles.

F. D. Jenkins spent Sunday near Addison.

R. F. Smith was in Ypsilanti a few days last week.

Miss Blanch Hampton returned to her home in Ovid Tuesday.

Clarence Burtless has got a job in the asylum at Kalamasoo. He went there last week Monday, and reports he has a good place.

The Center School closed last Friday with appropriate graduating exercises. Miss Nina Allen and Messrs. Cecil Billington, Hoyt Wheelan and Howard Pierce are members of the class.

The L. O. T. M. held an entertainment and banquet at Maccabee Hall last Thursday night, which was a decided success. The ladies are enthusiastic over their new order and are bound to succeed.

The following pupils attending the center school have been neither tardy or absent during the term: Dora Hunt, Wilford Allen, Ethel Hampton, Ray Hampton, Willard Hunt, Sherman Camburn, Helen Crittenden, Gerald Powell.

Rev. W. T. Williams, pastor of the Congregational church, preached a sermon to the Maccabees Sunday morning, in his happiest strain. It was well received, and we can heartily endorse the outspoken fact, that this popular young minister is gaining friends every day.

Raisin Valley Seminary.

Otis Hoadley was absent from school last Tuesday, on account of sickness at home.

Several simple, smiling Suttonites spent sweetly several hours at the Seminary Sunday.

The seniors have sent out their invitations for commencement. They are simply fine.

The baccalaureate sermon will be preached at the Friends' church, on Sunday evening, June 17th, by the Rev. J. W. Malone, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Rev. Varner, of Tecumseh, lectured to the students on Wednesday evening last. His subject was "Temperance." He is a Prohibitionist clear through.

You Cannot Cure Piles

By Internal Remedies.

The only way to cure piles in every form is to use a remedy like the Pyramid Pile Cure which is applied directly to the parts affected and its wonderful healing effects are felt on the first application because the medical properties are rapidly absorbed by the sensitive membranes of the rectum and the cure is speedily made, and almost before the patient is aware of it, every trace of piles has left him.

This is one reason why the Pyramid Pile Cure has been so successful. It is applied directly where it is needed and where it will do the most good. Not by the roundabout way of the stomach by the harsh, barbarous methods of various surgical operations and so called systems.

Its advantages over all other pile cures are these: It cures without pain, the cure is lasting, it contains no poison and is the quickest and cheapest cure yet found. It is made by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., and sold by all druggists, at one dollar per package.

Ripans Tabules: a family remedy.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Chas. Scherpning, of Portage, Onio, was visiting friends here Sunday.

Arrangements are nearly completed for our 4th of July celebration.

Mrs. L. C. Winship is at Orden attending her mother, who is not expected to live.

Mr. Crane, of the Davis & Rankin Building and Mfg. Co., spent Saturday in this place.

Adad Brown and family, of Blissfield, spent Sunday with his brother, DeLoren Brown of this place.

J. W. Crane, wife and family, of Elmhurst, Ill., visited with Cass Miller and family last week.

Hartman Bros. have just completed a harness for the Lenawee Coach Horse Co.; it is full rubber trimmed and is a dandy.

Major Howell, of Adrian, stopped for a short visit with L. C. Winship last Sunday, on his return trip from Ann Arbor on his wheel.

Childrens' Sunday was appropriately celebrated at the Presbyterian church here last Sunday. The opening march by the Junior Endeavorers, carrying blue banners with letters J. E. in white on them, was quite a feature of the morning.

Last Sunday morning while driving to church, the team of John Moore, Sr., became unmanageable and ran away, throwing the occupants of the buggy into the road; it bruised Mr. Moore considerably, but the rest of the family escaped with a shaking up; the buggy was wrecked.

At the election held last week, the following officers were elected by the Y. P. S. C. E:

Prest.—Dr. Nixon.
Vice-Prest.—Miss Minnie Kerr.
Secty.—Miss Ola Wildey.
Treas.—A. D. Macham.
Chorister—J. L. Richards.
Organist—Miss Eva Doty.

The habit of catching on moving trains is one that cannot be too strongly condemned; what might have resulted in the death of a prominent young man of this town, was enacted here last week Tuesday. Guernsey Kelly, being dared to catch on an east bound freight that was moving quite rapid, succeeded in securing a positon on the side of a freight car, and waved his hat to those watching him, caught his arm on the switch board, bending one corner of the 8 inch iron plate to a right angle, cutting a hole in his arm that required dressing. Dr. Nixon dressed the wound. We hope this carelessness of boarding moving trains will be abandoned at this station, hereafter.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Church social at Willis Smith's Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas VanWert are visiting in this vicinity.

George Taylor graduates from Clinton high school Thursday.

Mrs. A. B. Wisner and Clarence drove to Ypsilanti, Saturday, returning Sunday.

George Taylor had a runaway last Friday night, the result being a broken shaft and harness. Geo was not seriously hurt; a cat freightened the horse.

The next Lyceum will occur at A. D. Hunt's four weeks from last Saturday night. Let every member come out, as important business will come before the house.

Newell Wisner also had a runaway, Monday, while descending the Marshall hill. A plank slipped and hit the horse's flank, there was a lively dumping of articles along the highway, including Newell himself, but no other damage done.

In Normal hall, Ypsilanti last Saturday night, at the oratorical contest of the Mock congress, the $5.00 gold piece was awarded to Carl Wisner, by a unanimous vote of the three judges on the first ballot. Subject of his oration: "Shall the negro be given a separate State?"

The graduating exercises of the Central school occured at the Congregational church. The graduates were Nina Allen, Cecil Billington, Hoyt Whelan, Howard Pierce. In addition to the valedictory, Cecil had class history; Nina Allen's essay was Evangeline translated into prose.

Farmers, fruit growers, if we hope to save our apple orchards another year we must prepare to fight. In conversation with Mr. Waldron, we learned the following facts: "Some specimens of the worm which infested their orchards this spring, were sent to the Agricultural College, and there pronounced to be the army worm; they are a small black worm, about an inch long; a few were observed in Mr. Waldron's orchard last year, but not until about corn planting time this spring was any damage done, then London purple was freely applied—men, and horses being covered with the insects, which spin a web from the tree to the ground, while applying it; the almost daily rains however at that time rendered that useless. The young worm after extracting the life from every leaf, goes into the ground, to remain there until the following spring, they will then ascend the tree, lay their eggs and when this crop hatches business begins in earnest. The professor from the college says fight them with Paris green, 3 oz. to 40 gallons of water being the right proportion; as preventive measures he recommends fall ploughing, and turning hogs into the orchard, also some sticky substance like cotton batting put around the tree to prevent the worm from ascending to lay their eggs."

Thousands of dollars belonging to a New York lawyer mysteriously disappeared when he died. Did he expect to need a defense fund in the other world?

It is slightly confusing to hear Col. Tom Ochiltree spoken of as the "famous Texan of New York."

THE DEPOSIT STONE.

The corner stone of the Masonic Temple block was filled with a list of relics last Saturday forenoon, was properly sealed and covered, and before night that corner column was six feet above the foundation. As it was not deemed expedient to get up a formal celebration of the event, there were no exercises attending it and but few witnesses. Below is a full list of the articles and relics deposited in the chest:

History of lot and building; names of contractors; workmen and cost of building; photo and Masonic record of himself; history of Tecumseh Chapter No. 51, O. E. S. since organization; by Alfred James.

ONSTED ODDS.

These hot days make corn grow.

Wheat and oats are doing nicely.

Will Muck visited Brooklyn friends recently.

John Jones, V. S., of Adrian, was in town last Saturday.

We have heard of no one from around here that has or intends to join Coxey's army.

C. W. Faling and wife, of Leslie, were visitors among friends here the latter part of last week.

The school here closed last Friday for the summer, and the children gave a very good entertainment.

Some of the members of the I. O. O. F. of this vicinity attended the funeral of a deceased brother, at Adrian lately.

Childrens' day services will be held at the F. B. church here next Sunday evening, and everyone is invited to attend.

A. P. Onsted has removed the old fence from in front of his residence, which adds to the appearance of the premises.

Childrens' day exercises were carried out last Sunday evening at the Springville M. E. church where a good programme was carried out.

Landlord Teachout has erected a windmill over his well which supplies water to both hotel and barn. Water is good enough to drink and the most healthful.

The Maccabees of this vicinity celebrated the 20th anniversary of the order, on Monday evening of this week, with literary exercises and a banquet at Fraternity hall.

The third trotting matinee was held here last Saturday afternoon, under the control of the trotting association of this vicinity, and some good speed was shown, also a ball game was played between the Tipton and Wolf Creek clubs which was quite interesting to the spectators.

OBITUARY.

Died, May 22, 1894, at the home of William Curry, at Cone, Monroe county, Mich., Harmon Swick, of old age and heart trouble. He was born July 11, 1814, and when a young man came to Michigan where he was married, but lost his wife in 1850. In 1851 he went to California by the overland route and returned in 1857, living in New York state and Michigan the balance of his life. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Rachael Herbals, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Mary Collum, of Jackson, Mich. Mrs. Collum was with him in his last sickness, never leaving his bedside, night or day, until the last spark of life went out. She then laid her father beside her mother, brothers and sister at Lake Ridge, to await the great resurrection.

Permanent Cure for Rupture.

The straw hat crop is rather late this season, but it will ripen rapidly, if this weather continues.

"Senatorial courtesy" is still dawdling away valuable time, inflicting essays upon the public on the tariff bill.

The miners' strike at Cripple Creek, Col., is becoming serious. Blood has already been shed and the end is not yet.

Good times have not yet come and never will come permanently until national legislation gives some encouragement to agriculture.

Senator Gorman is ill from overwork. If the report be true that he is responsible for the present tariff compromise, no wonder the poor man is sick.

In the pending coal strike, both the operators and miners should act on the principle, that compromise and work are better than no work and bloodshed.

Wise and just legislation is a surer protection against riot and strikes, discord and Coxeyism, than all the militia in the country armed with Winchesters and Gatling guns.

The best advice we can give the farmers is to keep out of debt. Get on a cash paying basis as soon as possible, and stay there, even if you have to live on nothing for a few months.

The Courier-Journal says: "There is a lack of uniformity in calling the tariff bill the Wilson bill, or the Gorman bill. With a few more amendments it may be called the McKinley bill.

The friends of the repeal of the tax on state bank currency were long on confidence during the debate, but they were short on votes and the bill was defeated in the House by a vote of 70 to 102.

The trial of Attorney General Ellis is in progress at Mason and is being pretty hotly contested on both sides. The prosecution seems to have the call at present but no one can tell what the decision of the jury may be.

Protectionists are very consistent. The only thing which they profess to protect is labor, and that comes in free of duty by the ship load. Would Carnegie and other shrewd protectionists advocate a tariff if it hampered what they sell—goods—and increased the price of what they buy—labor?

Bare land in New York city has been sold at the rate of $25,000,000 per acre. This is equal to 100,000 acres of farming land at $160 per acre. Some land in New York rents at $500,000 per acre per annum, and yet some people really think that to tax land values you would put the heaviest burden on the farmers. The single tax is not a tax on land, but on land values.

The Free Press says, in commenting on the Ellis trial: "It will in no wise prejudice the Ellis case to make the passing observation that it has developed some of the tallest, most brilliant and well sustained lying that a fertile imagination can originate. By comparison Ananias will hereafter be thought of as a bungling prevaricator and a pretty decent sort of a fellow.

There is a great deal of humbug indulged in at present in regard to the sugar-tax. A small tax on sugar will yield a large revenue, and hence from a revenue standpoint there are good reasons for taxing it. But if a sugar tax should be substituted for an income tax to make up the deficiency in revenue, the leaders who are responsible for such action will make a bad political blunder.

Representative Cobb of the Elkhart, Indiana, district has bought the Washington Times, the penny daily that was started a few weeks ago as the organ of the wageworkers of the national capital, and will continue the publication. Although Mr. Cobb is a Democrat, he says that politics shall not enter into the policy of the paper, which will not be changed. The paper has a good circulation for a new one.

It is somewhat singular that the only bribery cases which are exposed to public view are those in which the bribe is refused. The country would like to know how much it cost the sugar trust to carry the sugar tax through the Senate, how much it cost the whiskey trust to get the bonded period extended ten years; how much it cost the coal and iron barons to "induce" a few pretended Democratic Senators to hold up the Wilson bill in the interest of McKinleyism.

While Detroit is wrestling with a smallpox scare, the doctors of the health board are quarreling with each other as to who has done the most to—neglect his official duties.

With the tariff bill still hanging in the balance and the country's coal supply reduced 50 per cent., any improvement in the business situation is out of the question; and the present condition is likely to last for some time.

The Brownsville Herald is sound on the watermelon question. It says: "The praises of the watermelon have often been sung in both prose and poetry, and a mere mention of the delicious, juicy fruit is enough to bring a smile of delight to the face of those who know it, that is aroused by no other gift of nature. Mark Twain says: 'The true Southern watermelon is a boon apart, and not to be mentioned with commoner things. It is chief of this world's luxuries, king by the grace of God over all the fruits of the earth. When one has tasted it he knows what the angels eat. It was not a Southern watermelon that Eve took; we know it, because she repented.'"

Representative McKeighan, of Nebraska, convulsed the House with laughter and gave the country a new nutshell history of evolutionary politics when he said: "A mugwump is merely a Republican with a conscience—a Republican with courage to do right—a Republican with brains to think and who insists on thinking and thinks himself out of the Republican party and becomes a full-fledged mugwump. Then he is taken into the Democratic fold on probation. If he ceases to think he is allowed to remain, but if he still insists on his right to think he is driven into the third party, and that makes a populist."

The St. Louis Republican is level-headed on the income tax question. Read this: "Congress must see that the income tax deals fairly with all classes of taxpayers. It will prove unpopular if the justice of its principle becomes injustice by unfair operation. Nothing should be permitted to remain in the law which would compel a man to pay the tax rate twice on the same property. Nothing should remain which will discourage one business and favor another. Permanence of the income tax principle will depend upon the equity of its application. The people will judge the principle by the law. The principle is so just and so useful that its renewed use in the tax laws should be so begun that popularity will assist it from the first."

E. Ellery Anderson delivered an address last week before the "Good Government Club" of New York city in the course of which he used these sensible remarks: "Look at the condition of affairs at present in the country in reference to the silver and the tariff questions. We have some 70,000,000 of people with a producing power of $12,000,000,000 annually. Assuming that this productive power is reduced ten per cent by enforced idleness, what an enormous amount is lost for the privilege of hearing our Senators talk! I merely use this as an illustration to show the importance of disseminating education among the people upon whose intelligence the government of the country depends. To enable the people to reach proper conclusions on the tariff, the currency, and labor questions; to enable them to define the rights and responsibilities of capital and labor, they should be properly trained and instructed."

At a monster meeting in Cooper Union Hall, New York, May 19, Henry George said: "I shall go to Cooper Union on May 22, not to protest against the Senate amendments to the Wilson bill, but to protest against the turning back, the cowardice of the Democratic party."

"How about Hill?" sang out a voice.

"He isn't worth talking about," was the prompt reply. "He is a tariff reformer who wants to reform the tariff where it does not hurt the trusts. Many years ago Horace Greely advised the young man to go west. To-day every highway is filled by men who have been west. Why? Because they are denied the sacred right of earning a living on the millions of acres untouched as yet by the plow, because the land is monopolized. It is a bitter comment on our republic that leaders of this class are fined in a Washington court for treading on the grass. Yet that is most significant. Monopoly says to the toiling worker, 'Keep off the grass.'"

The Indianapolis Sentinel calls on David B. to speak up in these leading questions. "David B. Hill announces that he is in favor of a tariff equal to the difference between American and foreign wages. That is what the Republican national platform announces. But what wages does Mr. Hill mean? The wages of Australia and Canada, which are equal to our own, or the wages of England, which are slightly less, or the lower wages of protected Germany and Italy, or the wages of India? And what is the difference between our wages and the wages of any other country in proportion to the work done? And what will Mr. Hill do with industries like coal mining, in which our wages are lower than those of the only countries that compete with us? Will he put a premium on imports? And how will Mr. Hill get the wages to the workingman? And why is Mr. Hill masquerading as a democrat, anyway? Why does'n he go over and join Tom Platt in party name as well as in principles?

A BIG CANAL PROJECT.

The next great canal scheme is the Trans-Michigan canal, connecting Lake Michigan and Lake Erie at Toledo and Michigan City. It would make practically a direct line between the two points, and pass through northern Ohio and northern Indiana, and would not be many miles south of Adrian. The projector proposes that it will be built large enough to carry the heaviest ships, and it would save 700 miles from Chicago to Toledo, the canal being 180 miles long. When it is considered that the tonnage yearly passing through the straits of Mackinaw is greater than the tonnage of all the seaport towns on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, and in fact greater than all the coastwise incoming and outgoing tonnage of England and the Thames, some idea of the immensity of the saving in time, danger and travel by the proposed canal can be gained. In addition to this immense saving in transportation, the canal would be practically open all the year, while lake navigation is only open a part of the year. It is one of those schemes that seems out of the question, and yet it is no more of an undertaking in this day and age of the world than many others that have been accomplished under less propitious circumstances.

It is about time the United States Senate investigated those fluctuations in sugar stock, which are based on rumors of Senatorial tariff action.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address Jno. C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the HERALD.

It is an interesting mental exercise to imagine what the Democrats would be saying about this pending tariff bill if the Republicans had introduced it.

1857-1890.

Gov. McKinley said of the Wilson tariff bill that it is "returning to what Buchanan left us." As he presumed upon the ignorance of his hearers this sounded all right. Of course he knew that the tariff of 1857, which "Buchanan left us," originated in and was passed by a Republican House of Representatives, and received the support of Charles Sumner, Henry Wilson and N. P. Banks of Massachusetts, William H. Seward of New York, and William A. Howard and Henry Waldron of Michigan. It reduced the duties levied under the Walker Free trade tariff of 1846 about one-quarter. The early republicans were in favor of freedom of trade as well as the freedom of men. The average rate of duties under the tariff of 1857 was less than 20 per cent. This was the tariff that "Buchanan left us," and it was a great stride toward free trade when compared with the Wilson bill, which proposes 35 per cent. on dutiable foreign imports. The modern tariff-for-plunder Republicans do not appear to good advantage when compared with the great founders of the party, who were opposed to commercial slavery as well as to negro slavery. The McKinley tariff of 1890 is 250 per cent. higher than the Republican tariff of 1857—the one "Buchanan left us."—Jackson Patriot.

The Development of the South

is being furthered by the Queen and Crescent Route by means of a special series of Monthly Excursions to southern points at One Fare for Round Trip. These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th; good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennesse, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q. & C. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

Send us your name for advertising matter and any information you may want as to lands and immigration to the South.

Now is a good time for cleaning up the streets and alleys, the back yards, corrals, cesspools and privies, and all other places where vegetable or animal filth has accumulated during the winter. We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring-lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grass to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very convenient form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are kept level in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanical strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

Stubblefield April 8/94

"Ordinary" Mower Co.

Gentlemen

You have got the hardest pulling mower I ever hitched my horse against. I stacked one of them into a tree years ago and stuck to it till it knocked me out. The draft is the heaviest I ever saw. Why don't you pattern after the old McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower? Its draft is extremely light, making it very easy on horse flesh.

THE WORLD'S FAIR

Committees who tested the McCormick No. 4 Steel Mower in the only regular exposition field trials, in a heavy growth of timothy and clover, said, in their official report: "The efficiency of the machine is thus, under fair conditions, nearly 70 per cent. Ordinary figures for ordinary mowers are at least twenty pounds higher in total draft, with an efficiency of not above 60 per cent., which latter figure good machines should be expected to exceed." The McCormick is the lightest draft, and most effective grass cutter yet produced. [Highest Medal awarded.]

LOVE STREAMS.

Like a swollen brook in springtime,
Foaming, sparkling, laughing, gay,
Onward leaps impetuous passion
Day by day.
Mother Nature sets the fashion—
All obey.

Like a winding stream in summer,
Broad and deep and calm and clear,
Onward flows love's mighty current Year by year.
Mother Nature, all inherent,
Guides us here.

Like a vast unfathomed ocean,
Swelling, throbbing, ever free,
Onward drifts love's tide immortal
O'er life's sea,
Sweeping on toward heaven's portal
You and me.

A PLAINS ROMANCE.

I heard the story from Jerry Madden, Teddy's present partner in the cattle business, a couple of years ago, as we sat in the shade of the ranchhouse one afternoon.

"Why Teddy don't drink and likewise swears quite few?" he asked in response to a query of mine. "That! Sho' 'e hain't tuk nothin f'r most 12 'r 13 year, 'count o' his kid. 'Married?' Oh, no, none whatever. They hain't no heifer gits Teddy, not much. 'Why?' Give it up. Mebbe you c'n tell me?

"Ted was ridin along one day—'tis 13 year ago—ridin clost by th' railroad track one evenin, feelin kind o' sore an disgusted like, when, all of a saddent, 'e sees somethin funny trottin along th' track. Ted stops an wipes 'is eyes an gazes a hull lot more, 'cause what 'e seen wa'n't nothin like what we finds round this yere patch o' brush. None whatever. Moreovermore, Ted 'd be'n tankin up quite plenty that day, 'e had, an was dead leary o' what might be th' matter of 'is peeps. But 'e rubs 'em quite a lot more, an I hope I may straddle th' 'ghost brone' ef there wa'n't th' purti'st little maverick ye ever see—little girl 'bout 5 year old—browsin along th' track, lookin lost.

"Course Ted rides up an asts who she is an what she's doin there, all alone, with 'er purty face an han's an elegant clo'es, but she couldn't tell 'im. Jes' bu'st out cryin an kep' a cryin, an 'twa'n't f'r a day 'r so we'd even guess at 'er bein there, 'cause she was tongue tied 'r somethin an couldn't say but a few words, pore little thing. But we gits at it th't 'er name's Norah, we does, an th't she draps off a train jes' b'fore she sights Ted ('r 'im, her).

"That little heifer was a beaut', she sho' was, an twa'n't more'n two days 'fore we all was ready t' d' most anything f'r her—me an Ted an ole lady Parry (th' boss' wife) an all th' rest, an dam' ef I don't b'lieve we wa'n't real glad 'stead o' sorry when we fin's out they don't seem t' be no one lookin f'r such a maverick—'cause we advertised, o' course, t' git 'er folks. But we gits no word, not a bloomin shout, so Ted jes' bran's th' kid f'r his'n an pr'ceeds t' raise 'er (think o' Ted, which th' same never raised nothin but hell b'fore, raisin that little, tender gyurl!), Mrs. Parry takin care of 'er f'r awhile.

"Well, Ted was jes' th' funniest cow hand I ever bucks up ag'in. Ye wouldn't 'a' knowed 'im. Ted was a howlin wolf—a reg'lar ole hyena b'fore that—but after th' kid comes 'e braces right up an gits good, none o' th' gang objectin, 'cause they savvies why 'e does it.

"After th' kid was 'bout 9 'r 10 years old we all 'don't get t' see much of 'er, 'cause Ted, havin laid up some dough, sends 'er off t' school. 'She's a sho' 'nough thor'ughbred, she is,' says Teddy, an she gits no scrub trainin. Sabe?'

"That goes, o' course, an th' kid likewise goes t' school, comin back once a year lookin sweeter an purtier 'an ever an we all, mostly Ted, willin t' lay right down an let 'er tromp on our measly ole flea bit frames. Oh, she was jes' like Ted prognosticates on th' jump—a sho' 'nough thor'ughberd.

"Tell ye what she does one time 'bout two years ago. They was livin 't th' station, her'n Ted an Mrs. Bell, th' woman th't give th' gyurl lessons, an one day some eastern folks gits off th' train lookin f'r Mr. McLennan, which is Ted sence 'e gits intuh business for 'isself. They was a real nice lookin, fat ole girl, with specfacles with handles to em, an a dood with one o' these yere foolish little caps ye sees through th' winduhs o' th' sleepin cars.

"Ted an Norah was at th' d'epo lookin f'r some school friens o' the gyurl's, when these folks gits off, an some one points Ted out, an th' dood braces 'im.

"'Aw, me good man,' says 'e, takin sight at Ted over th' end of 'is nose, 'aw, are you Mister McLennan?'

"Ted's a good man—no discount on that—but 'e does sho' hate t' be called one, moreover by a dood, which critter is quite rousin t' Ted's killin instinc's—but 'e gives it out th't his brand is sech, an th' dood springs 'is game on 'im, which is th't 'e an ole lady is lookin f'r Norah Somethin 'r other, which is th' name o' th' kid th't falls off a train one day 10 years 'r so b'fore—our Norah, sho' 'nough.

"They was a su'prise all round, they was. Then Norah takes a hand an flies 't th' ole girl an asts why she didn't find 'er then, an they gives it out th't they never saw Ted's advertisement, an all that, an never learns where she is ontell they lately runs ontu Mrs. Parry somewheres out west. They likewise makes a play th't Ted had stole th' kid. Th' ole lady was goin t' fall on Norah's neck an weep a lot, but Norah don't like that style o' play, so she gives 'er a chill, an, moreover, gives it out cold th't she don't move a step—th't she stays with Ted, th t's he'n a reg'lar dad to 'er.

"An she staid, you bet, an Ted was th' tickledest ole stiff in th' country, t' think she'd rather flock with him th'n t' train wi' them howlin swells. They makes no further play, thinkin, mebbe, th't Norah's temper's pretty high up.

"Ev'rything's real lovely ontell a little while ago—last year it was. Things got a little excitin round yere—real excitin f'r some folks, I may say. They was a few gents in these parts was gettin quite frisky with braudin irons, an was real careless 'bout drivin off beef critters. They was real retirin, modest kind o' people, they was, even ef they was talented in th' brandin line, an we was quite anxious t' meet up with 'em, but they lays pretty low. We gits two 'r three of 'em strayin round, but they keep sawin wood an makin us real tired, so we goes t' work an organizes a vigilance c'mmittee, with Ted as chairman.

"They was a young feller 't th' station then, named Harwood. 'E'd come fr'm somewheres, an give it out 'e was a doctor, a little out o' health 'isself—'e didn't look it, though, bein a big, husky sort o' chap. 'E hangs out 'is shingle an gits a leetle acquainted, an then makes a dead play f'r Norah, w'ich seems t' go all right, Norah lettin on t' like th' duck quite plenty. Oh, but 'e was sho' spoony on her. Th' wust was, we was thinkin th' gyurl was stuck on him, too, an it did sho' give us a pain, 'cause we didn't want no bloomin champ frisker round Ted's corral cuttin out North. An still this yere feller seems white an decent, an 'twas square onpossible t' hate 'im, none whatever. So, when 'e offrs t' join th' c'mmittee, we says yes, o' course. 'E wa'n't a real tenderfoot, ye know, an acted like 'e had sand.

"Well, we keeps up th' good work an ropes a few gents, an they gits quite a lot careful, but keeps on workin. Then, one night, when Ted was out yere, an we was settin up late, we hears a noise among th' home hosses in th' corral, an I says, 'O-ho! they're goin intuh th' hoss business, too, are they?' an me'n Ted breaks f'r th' corral.

"They was five of 'em, but we was out f'r business an cuts loose, an they don't wait t' pick up th' cuss we dropped, an I'll eat a rawhide ef it wa'n't Harwood!

"I was f'r killin of 'im clean, right then, but Ted wouldn't have it, 'e wouldn't, so we takes 'im intuh th' house an brings 'im round, not so bad hurt, after all. He wants us t' finish th' job, 'fraid, mebbe, we're sayin of 'im t' string up some, but Ted only grins a little, sort o' sour, an tells him t' keep quiet.

"Next day me'n Ted hol's a meetin, we does, an settles th' case, an that night we goes t' th' c'mmittee meetin at Jeb Barlow's, where Ted gits up an makes a game o' talk. Says 'e:

"'Gents, I an my pardner, Mr. Madden, has made a real techin 'is every. I hain't no greater talker, but I jes' wants t' say th't we find th't Doc Harwood, a member o' this yere hon'r'ble body, is one o' th' gents we want mostest, an'——

"Right yere they gits excited, but Ted calls 'em down an goes on tellin 'em how we gits Doc, an so on. Then says 'e:

"'I wants t' add right yere th't Doc Harwood is at my house hurt bad, an as long as 'e's there I stand over 'im an keeps 'im fr'm harm. An I adds further th't I don't do this b'cause 'I'm stuck on Doc, but 'b'cause him an my little girl is stuck on each other. Now, gents, I want t' make a offer. Ye can't have Doc 'thout gittin me an breakin little Norah's heart, but I agrees 't' pack th' galoot off t' th' States an guarantee 'e stays ther' ef you all lets 'im go. Does that go?'

"It went O. K. after some rag chewin. So in a few days Doc glides back t' th' States,

"Nope. Norah didn't go—not any. Ted goes t' her an gives it out th't Doc's b'n hurt by hoss thieves an has got t' slide home. Does she want to go?

"'Right yere Norah gives 'im th' merry 'ha ha!' Not much. She don't want t' go. 'Not with no hoss thief anyway, Uncle Teddy,' she says.

"'Hoss thief?' says Ted. 'What d'ye mean b' that?'

"'Mean what I say,' says Norah. 'Never mind, Uncle Teddy, I knows what I'm 'ludin at.'

"Ted sees she's on, an it sort o' razzles 'im. 'But look here,' says 'e. 'I be'n thinkin you—you sort o'—well, liked th' cuss a hull lot.'

"'None at all, Uncle Teddy,' says Norah real promptly. 'I was jes' only havin a leetle fun with 'im. It's dull out yere sometimes, ye know.'

"This yere makes Ted feel a hull lot better, 'cause—'cause, ye see, th' ole fool was ('e tells me all about it) sort o' havin aspirations 'isself.

"About a week after Doc left Norah comes t' Teddy one mornin smilin an blushin an kerryin a letter. Ted was settin lookin out th' window, real solemn an sad, wonderin, jes' that minute, ef 'twas a squar' deal an right an straight, f'r t' ask th't leetle gyurl t' marry him. Th't there proposition was what'd be'n keepin pore ole Ted awake f'r nights an nights, an he was sho' puzzled. 'Bout yere Norah bounces in on 'im an makes 'im jump.

"'Oh, Uncle Teddy,' says she, 'I wants ye t' do somethin f'r Norah.'

"Ted looks at 'er real solemn a minute an then says more solemn:

"'Ye know they hain't nothin t' ask fer th't I won't do f'r ye,' 'e says. 'W'y, see yere, Norah, darlin, can't ye understand th't I'——

"'Oh, I know, ye dear ole goose,' says Norah, breakin of 'is talk off short. 'But hain't this great? I've just got a letter fr'm Alec'——

"'Who's Alec?' says Ted, most broke up an gittin out o' th' chair tremblin.

"'W'y, Alec's—you know—Kate Clark's brother, an I met 'im at New York when I was stayin with Kate, an he says 'e loves me an wants me t' marry 'im, an, oh, Uncle Teddy, ye hain't cross, be ye?' And she falls on Ted's neck an weeps a lot.

"Ted stan's an lets 'er weep quite plenty, him ch kin down a big swellin in 'is throat all the time. Then, says 'e, very quiet:

"'Didn't I tell ye, darlin, they hain't nothin ye can't have? I don't know this yere Alec'chap, but ef ye wants 'im ye sho' gits 'im ef I has t' rope 'im myself.'

"An so she does. Oh, they's nothin Ted wouldn't do f'r that there gyurl."

D. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates and cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 48 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages, has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you. It will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

THE MIDWAY PLAISANCE.

A Fine Reproduction on a Small Scale of the Famous Midway Section.

The Ladies Library Association got up a public entertainment about once a year to raise funds to replenish their treasury. This year they concluded to go outside of the old stereotyped fashion and get up something new. A reproduction of the midway was the result, and the entertainment took place at the armory last Friday evening. The Armory is a splendid place for an entertainment of this kind. There is plenty of room in the main hall to accommodate a good crowd, and there are plenty of rooms for collaterals also. We expected to see a good show but the reality surpassed our expectations entirely. At five o'clock the Armory was opened and the public began to pour in promptly on time.

On entering the drill room at the South door, the first booth to the left was Aunt Jemima's pancake manufactory, with Mrs. Lyman as Aunt Jemima, where pancakes and maple syrup were served to all hungry mortals.

In the opposite corner Capt. Will Hayden, attired in fantastic Egyptian costume, sold bum-bum, with artistic politeness and dispatch.

North of and adjoining the pancake stand was Hagenbeck's trained animals, with L. P. Tribou as concessionaire. This booth contained some rare curiosities, among which were these: The only three-legged cat in Tecumseh: the "cat that came back;" a Rocky Mountain goat from Raisin; free trade sheep and two dogs from Ell Gray's farm: Kangaroo from Kalamazoo; twin kittens (very rare) Vet Erskine's chatterbox (drop a nickel in the cage and it will do the rest); a rabbit cat loaned by Gerald Kennedy; three canines owned by Mart Crossman, Geo. Kay and Dan Hall.

Next was the Dahomey village, Theo. Wood, concessionaire. M. Gray, Geo. Wood, Dick Farley, Ren Brown, Geo. Benaway, O. Hara and Manley acted as Dahomey citizens, and they filled the bill to a dot. People who visited the actual Dahomey village on the midway agree that the burlesque imitation was not overdrawn.

Adjoining this was the American Indian village with Scove Walker as concessionaire, Will Bidwell and Harry Spalding as Indians, and Geo. Tiffany as squaw. This booth represented an Indian wigwam and honey and milk were sold therein.

Next came the Turkish theater, J. D. Shull, concessionaire. Martin Crossman, Al Heidenrich, Geo. Schreder and Ed. Smalledge filled the role of dancers, and the universal opinion was that they did it up brown.

The India Tea house was next in order where iced tea and ice cream were served by Messrs. Burlingame, Heesen and Everett. This completed the booths on the west side of the room.

The reception room at the North end of the Armory was given up to the Congress of Beauty. Here, ranged round the walls in a row of chairs, were assembled female beauties of different nationalities, bedecked in the latest fashionable costumes. Thede Harris was concessionaire and the following persons' represented the beauties. R. A. Heesen, Swedish beauty; Forest Dickinson, German; Ed. Corey, Russian; J. H. Smith, American; Will McGlashen, Swiss; Philip Kensch, Japanese; Will Wescott, Chinese; Harry McClure, Bedouin; Bert Day, African; Rob McClure, Indian; Merton Burlingame, Italian; Vern Heesen, Spanish; Walter Burridge, French; Sam McClure, Irish; Chas. Dickinson, Greek; Bert Gray Lapland; Geo. Bond, Scotch. It would be a difficult matter to tell which young man excelled in the role assigned him and which one was the most beautiful in this collection of beauties. As we have no desire for a war in the editorial sanctum during this sultry weather, we refrain from expressing any decided opinion on this delicate point.

The German village was located in the basement, where tables were arranged as they are in a German beer garden, and refreshments were served, consisting of sausage, ham and cheese, sandwiches, doughnuts, coffee and root beer, by Messrs. Bidwell, Smith and Field. This room was well patronized during the entire evening.

The Society orchestra furnished some of their best instrumental selections during the evening, which added much to the enjoyment of the visitors. Little Bessie Bates, attired as an Indian child, sold pansy bouquets to the company.

There was an immense amount of work attending the affair. The executive committee in charge consisted of Mesdames H. S. Lee C. A. Wright, J. D. Shull, S. P. Hosmer, and Messrs. Hayden, Hosmer, Heesen and Baker. The general work of arranging the booths was under Bert Baker's supervision. Each booth was entrusted to a committee of ladies, who prepared the refreshments and assisted in costuming the characters for that booth.

The crowd kept going and coming during the entire evening, so that the aggregate attendance was good, and the net receipts will add a nice fund to the treasury of the Library Association. True, the show was mostly nonsense, but that is what it purported to be. People, who visited the Midway last summer, had a good opportunity to revive their memories of that wonderful aggregation, and people who never saw the original could gain a fair idea of what it was by seeing the imitation at Armory Hall last Friday evening.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Rooms, June 4, 1894.

Regular session, June 4th, 1894.

Present the entire council excepting trustee Satterthwaite.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

The chairman of the street committee reported that cost of repairing the Brownville bridge with piling would be about $500, and that Jas. E. Lowry and Jas. Mitchell would would lay stone abutments and finish all labor and material, abutments to be 18 feet high, 9 feet wide on the base, 3 feet wide on the top, and 45 feet in length, for the sum of $1,027.000.

The marshal reported that the water works wind mill had been removed and the well filled up.

The street commissioner reported that from May 7, to June 4, the following labor had been done: Fire team labor 15 1-2 days, hired team labor 21 days, 6 hours, $54.00, hand labor 36 days, $60.76; poll tax collected $18.50.

Sexton reported 8 adult interments during the month of May, and $30.00 collected.

Moved and supported that above reports be accepted and placed on file. Carried.

Stevens, attending board of review, $12.00; C. A. Hooten, engineer at water works, for month of May, $40.00.

Finance committee reporting favorably on all of above, recorder was instructed to draw his order on the treasurer for the said several amounts.

Moved and supported that treasurer be instructed to credit the contingent fund with the amount of money now in the water works fund. Carried.

The tax roll of the village for 1894 was delivered to the council. Valuation of real and personal property $1,587,040.

Moved and supported that the Recorder spread the tax on said roll, for 1894, at the rate of five mills on the dollar. Carried.

The penalty of the marshal's bond for the ensuing year was placed at the sum of $8,000.00.

Moved and supported that the council meet at the Episcopal church bridge, Wednesday afternoon, June 6th, at 4 o'clock, to inspect the same. Carried.

Moved and supported that the Council adjourn. Carried.

W. J. INGERSOLL, Recorder.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

A Trying Ordeal in Woman's Life Made Easy.

Pe-ru-na is the favorite remedy during Change of Life, as it not only palliates the disagreeable symptoms during the trying ordeal, but guards the system from the many chronic ailments which are liable to set in. Pe-ru-na promptly relieves the nervousness, sleeplessness, throbbing, hemorrhage, rush of blood to the head, palpitation, indigestion, painful menstruation leucorrhoea and faint spells, from which most of these patients suffer. It acts as a preventive against dropsy, heart disease, enlargement of the liver, and kidney diseases, which are so frequently acquired at this time.

Mrs. Diley A. Mason, of White Wright Texas, says in a letter to Dr. Hartman: "I was a sufferer from the Change of Life. I thought I had everything. I thought I had heart trouble. I got six bottles of Pe-ru-na and one of Man-alin and took them. I am now sound and well. I improved immediately on taking Pe-ru-na, and am now as well as ever in my life."

ADDITIONAL LOCAL.

Regular meeting of Eastern Star Lodge this evening.

Rev. J. W. Malone, of Cleveland, O., will preach at the Friend's church, next Sunday morning.

Childrens' Sunday was appropriately observed at the M. E. church last Sabbath, the special service being held in the morning. The pulpit and rostrum were beautifully decorated with flowers and potted plants.

The Alumni reunion, we suppose, will be held on Friday, June 22d. Are the officers who have parts assigned them preparing for the occasion? The executive committee especially should be stirring themselves, as the time is short for making the needed arrangements.

The Presbyterian church was filled with a large congregation last Sabbath morning to listen to special exercises incident to Children's Sunday. The pastor gave a short illustrated sermon and there were recitations and singing by the school and choir. The program given most fitly exemplified the lesson of this new church festival.

When our citizens went to the post-office for their mail on Monday morning, they found that Uncle Sam had moved his quarters into the Fred Landgraf store, "just around the corner." The removal was a complete surprise, but the universal comment was: "It is a good move." The location is just as central as the old one, while the room itself is much more convenient and commodious.

The Senior class reception was held at Miss Lizzie Russell's on Friday evening, June 1st. It proved to be a most enjoyable event. About fifty guests were present, and Teeple took a group view of the company by the aid of a flash. The evening was passed in mirth and gaiety. A bountiful repast was served and the "wee sma" hours had appeared on the dial when the guests took their departure.

We clip the following from the last issue of the Manchester Enterprise: "Dr. Fred A. Kotts is in Ann Arbor this week attending the meeting of the state dental society. He has taken his patent hot air syringe and some of his preparations along to exhibit to the "dents." He has a clinic to-day and is on for a discussion to-morrow. We have reasons for being proud of the doctor because he is one of the brightest students and best operators the profession claims."

The 4th International Convention of the Baptist Young Peoples' Union of America will be held in Toronto, Ontario, July 19-22. The Baptist churches of the Lenawee Association expect to be represented by a delegation of fifty or sixty. Pastor H. A. Smith of this place is chairman of the committee on transportation and entertainment for this party. The route selected is via Wabash and Canadian Pacific. Rates of one fare for the round trip have been granted. The party will start from Adrian on the morning of July 18, and will reach Toronto the same evening. Special cars are to be provided for their accommodation. Those from Tecumseh and vicinity are to take this train at Britton. Tickets from there to Toronto and return $8.01. This is an open rate and all persons desiring to make the trip are entitled to its privileges. Those besides the regular delegates, who may desire to go, are asked to communicate with Mr. Smith that sufficient car accommodations may be provided. Tickets for return trip will be good until Sept. 15. Side trips to the Canadian Lakes, Montreal, Quebec, Niagara Falls and other resorts are being arranged at reduced rates, for those who may desire them. Mr. Smith will gladly give information in the matter to those who may be interested.

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia: land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 15, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 16 will be ready for distribution to-morrow.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in twelve parts, containing 20 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enamelled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. No 2 is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 20 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents, to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon, will receive one of these patterns free. Any othea pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

The marriage of Miss Louie Beck, mentioned in the HERALD of last week, took place at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Chas. Egan, where she made her home for some weeks past, and not at Rev. Mr. Smith's home as stated. Mr. Smith tied the knot in his usual happy manner.

The rumor got started on the hill yesterday that Census Enumerator Bury was getting names for enlistment in the army, as war was about to be declared, and Fred had a hard time convincing some of the people of the first ward that war would not be the result. Especially did he have to pacify one or two ladies who went to him with tears in their eyes.—Evening Telegram.

Mrs. H. L. Stewart arrived home last Thursday from Ocean Springs, Miss., where she has been spending the winter with her husband. Her health was much improved by her winter's sojourn on the gulf. She was accompanied by Miss Johan Brewer and Mr. Stephen Brewer, of Ithaca, N. Y., who have been spending some months at Ocean Springs.

The North American Review seems to be the only publication in the world which has the honor of numbering among its frequent contributors Cabinet Ministers of the two greatest English-speaking countries. The latest addition to this series is an article from the pen of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Hon. J. Sterling Morton, which appears in the June number, entitled "Protection and the Proletariat."

Commencement progam last week at the Fayette Normal University was very enjoyable throughout. Seven times Chapel Hall was filled almost to overflowing. A remarkable general interest was manifested in every exercise of the week. The weather was perfect; large numbers of strangers and visitors from a distance were present; and all the various exercises were interesting and highly creditable to the institution. There are in all thirty-six graduates who go out this year from the institution to speak in no uncertain tones of the good work that is done within its walls.

Will E. Hall, of Covington, Ky., was in town over Sunday.

Miss Anna Harding is home from Jackson for a few days visit.

The Populists of Lenawee county will hold a mass convention at the Court House, in Adrian, on Saturday, June 16, 1894, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of electing delegates to the State convention and to transact such other business as may properly come before the meeting.

The fifth annual reunion of Co. F., 26th Mich. Infantry took place yesterday at the residence of Henry Ball, in Dundee. There was a fine turn out, nearly thirty members of the company answering to roll call, the weather was delightful, and a very interesting program was presented in the afternoon. A fuller report of the exercises will appear next week. A lot of the boys in blue from Tecumseh were in attendance. We caught a ride home just at night with Arthur Harding and had a very pleasant trip.

E. J. Smith, the versatile and witty editor of the Adrian Press, has accepted a position on the Ann Arbor Argus and will assume his new duties there at once. The printing fraternity of Adrian tendered him a farewell reception and banquet Tuesday evening, which was a royal social time. Mr. Smith's departure from Lenawee county will be sincerely regretted, but he will receive the heartiest God-speed from every member of the craft with the wish that his lines may fall in pleasant places in the University City.

The meeting of the Michigan Woman's Press Association, held at Ann Arbor last week, was one of especial interest to all who attended. Noted writers, able speakers and thoughtful workers, made up an excellent program, while the local committee and the people of the University City seemed to vie with each other in making the women feel at home, and enjoy every moment of their time. All who listened to each days proceedings fully realized the significance of the Motto of the Association! "Let us as women learn to put down self and work for a cause."

The graduating class of the Tecumseh High School contains ten members this year, and their commencement exercises which will take place next Thursday evening promise to be of unusual excellence. KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

ELLIS ON TRIAL.

Progress of the Case Against the Attorney General.

The Prosecution Presents Some Witnesses Who Give Damaging Evidence Concerning His Alleged Connection with Election Frauds.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

MASON, June 7.—If ever a legal battle was fought by both sides for all there was in it more stubbornly than the one now in progress in this city in which Attorney General Ellis is the central figure, the records do not show it. The defense is putting up a most vigorous fight and the prosecution shows a disposition to stay by them at all times. The first eight counts of the indictment charge forgery in connection with the return to the secretary of state in particular, while the ninth count is indefinite. The defense claimed that the indictment charged two crimes and endeavored to have the people forced to elect under which count the case was to be tried. The court overruled this motion, holding that the several counts all covered the same offense.

LANSING, June 8.—Developments of a most extraordinary and sensational character were made at Mason Thursday upon the trial of Attorney General Ellis for forging the return from Gogebic county upon the salary amendment of 1893. The developments came in the form of the testimony of W. H. S. Wood, in 1891 clerk of the state board of auditors and afterward superintendent of the state reform school. Wood was not sworn before the grand jury and his presence in the case was until quite recently unknown to the public.

Wood testified that while clerk of the board of auditors one morning in April, 1893, Ellis came to his office in company with Frank N. Potter, who is under indictment for complicity in the 1893 frauds. Ellis produced two returns from Gogebic county, and, informing Wood that they were incorrect, instructed him that he was the only person who could lawfully change them. Potter agreed that it was Wood's duty to make the changes suggested by Ellis, and ex-Secretary Soper gave Wood instructions to proceed. Acting under these assurances, Wood says, he changed the word "three" to "thirteen," thereby increasing the affirmative vote upon the salaries amendment 1,000 votes. Ellis was pleased with the job, and significantly remarked that the writing made by Wood was very similar to the other writing in the return. Wood testifies that he afterward made changes in another return. Wood further testified that some time last year he met in Lansing Frank A. Potter, who introduced to him George H. Bussey, now under arrest for perpetrating the Wayne county frauds, as the man who did that identical job at Detroit, and remarked insinuatingly that he and Bussey had done in 1893 what Wood had done for Ellis in 1891. Potter, the witness believed, had been drinking, and in that condition had sought the latter's confidence.

LANSING, June 9.—Attorney S. S. Cooper, of Bessemer, created a sensation in the Ellis trial by swearing that in January last the attorney general called at his office and endeavored to retain the firm of Riley & Cooper. He tried to force a retainer on Cooper, who demanded to first know the business in hand. Ellis then said a fraud had been committed in connection with the Gogebic returns and all he wanted the firm to do was to keep away from the courthouse until the clerk's record could be fixed so as to agree with the returns to Lansing. Cooper refused the retainer.

The second sensation came when Postmaster Healy, of Ironwood, took the stand and flatly contradicted testimony of ex-Clerk Wood, who swore that he made two of the alterations on each return. Healy swore positively that he made all the changes himself in Ellis' office, believing that as chairman of the county canvassers he had made an error in making out the original returns. He stuck to this notwithstanding the production by the defense of his affidavit made last February to the effect that none of the changes were made in Lansing, as he made them all at Bessemer, and also in spite of the showing by the prosecution that he swore before the grand jury that he made but one charge on each return, thus sustaining Wood's testimony that he (Wood) made the rest of the charges. Both sides have declared their intention to impeach Healy.

LANSING, June 10.—M. M. Riley, a Bessemer attorney, testified at the trial of Attorney General Ellis Saturday that in January last, the week after the amendment frauds were exposed, he had a conversation with Ellis in the Gogebic county courthouse at Bessemer. Riley, who is a member of the republican state central committee, had received telegrams from state officials asking him what the county clerk's record showed the vote on the amendment to be. Knowing this, Ellis informed Riley that if the latter would consent the matter could be fixed up and the record changed so as to correspond with the returns in Lansing. Riley also swore that Ellis further said had he known the situation sooner he could have fixed the records himself and no one would have been the wiser, for, as he was attorney general, he could have obtained possession of the books. Riley refused to consent to attempt to change the records and telegraphed the correct vote of the county. During the grand jury investigation Ellis again offered him a retaining fee which was refused. Ex-Senator Stearns of Bessemer, Miss Anna Harty and Mrs. Lizbeth Bowen, of Osage, Ia., formerly one of Ellis' clerks, also testified to about the same effect. The trial will consume at least another week and is attracting large crowds of spectators.

MICHIGAN VILLAGE DESTROYED.

An Area a Mile Wide and Five Miles Long Devastated in the Lumber Regions.

MARQUETTE, Mich., June 11.—Destructive forest fires are raging in the neighborhood of Nestoria, 50 miles west of here. Two bridges on the West Shore road, near here, were burned late Saturday, stopping traffic to Duluth, and a hard fight was necessary to protect the company's property at Nestoria. The burning district covers an area 1 mile wide and 5 miles long, and the destruction to timber must be enormous. Similar big fires extend southward at intervals for many miles. Sagola, a lumbering village of 400 inhabitants, was completely wiped out Saturday night and a freight train on the Milwaukee & Northern passing through there was set on fire and several cars burned. Only the most meager reports can be received, as in many places wires are down and travel suspended entirely.

MOTOR CAR ACCIDENT.

Several Persons Sustain Bruises by an Overturned Electric Train.

DETROIT, June 11.—Ten persons were injured Sunday evening by the overturning of a motor car at West Fortieth and Twenty-second streets. The car, with its trailer, carried about 125 people and was running rapidly, when it jumped the track and was overturned by its own momentum, and that of the trailer. The seventy-five passengers on the motor were thrown into a struggling heap instantly. No one was killed and no bones were broken, but ten persons sustained sprains, cuts and bruises. The cause was a depressed joint in the track.

Grade-Crossing Disaster Costs $1,200.

KALAMAZOO, June 11.—A Michigan Central train struck a carriage at a country roadcrossing and killed Daniel Crane, Herbert Green and the horse in November, 1880. E. A. Crane brought suit in the circuit court for $50,000 damages. A verdict has been rendered for $1,200.

Fire at West Bay City.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., June 11.—McLaughlin & Magill's coal sheds, office, lime kiln and warehouse, the Riverview hotel, Lind Bros.' boat house and the steam barge William P. Thew were destroyed by fire Sunday, involving a loss of $30,000.

A Pioneer Gone.

BATTLE CREEK, June 8.—George C. Rogers, an old detective and horse-thief catcher in the early days of this city, died Thursday aged 76 years. He had lived here fifty-two years.

WHERE GOLD IS HID.

A Michigan Man Who Claims to Know Its Whereabouts.

Chris F. Vogel, of Marshall, Claims to Have Information of Long Concealed Mexican Riches—He Tells of a Soldier's Secret Revealed to Him.

A Marshall special correspondence of the Chicago Tribune of June 9 says:

Chris F. Vogel, who has sprung into notoriety in connection with the story that he is the sole possessor of information which would lead to the recovery of a large sum of money stolen from a convent in Mexico many years ago, was interviewed to-day and denied many of the statements made in the press concerning the hidden treasure. He said in 1858 he was the keeper of a small boarding house in Chicago, and that one of his boarders was a Bavarian. This man was taken seriously ill, and Mr. Vogel took care of him faithfully until he died. Just previous to his death, being anxious to make a confidant of some one, he told his landlord that during the Mexican war he was one of four soldiers who stole a large sum of silver and gold from a certain convent, the estimated value of which was in the neighborhood of a half million dollars. They secreted the money in a safe place, and shortly left the neighborhood in following their duty as soldiers. Two of the robbers were killed during the war, and the other two by agreement kept each other posted as to their respective movements, with the intention of some time going after the booty. The dying man told Mr. Vogel that he had not heard from his partner for a long time, and he was, when he last heard from him, in Georgia. From this fact he was satisfied of his comrade's death. Before dying the boarder gave Mr. Vogel drawings and full instructions as to obtaining the treasure, but for some reason the latter did not place much confidence in the story. In February, 1892, Vogel read an article in a German newspaper relating how the Mexican government was endeavoring to find the money, as it evidently had some inkling of the fact that it had been secreted on Mexican soil. In the article the amount was estimated at $100,000. Vogel then wrote the Mexican government, stating that he knew of the whereabouts of the treasure, and received a reply from the secretary of finance some time afterward asking his price for the information. The matter dropped at this point and he has heard nothing further from Mexico.

Mr. Vogel is confident that he alone knows where the money is concealed, and denies that it is buried in the vicinity of the robbery, but affirms that he knows just where it is, and how many feet under ground it was placed. He appeared somewhat disconcerted when it was suggested that the Georgia man might possibly have returned to Mexico and secured the wealth, but still believed that he was the only man on earth who knew just where the treasure lay. He seems to have no definite plans in regard to further action in the matter, but thought some of conferring with the authorities at Washington, as it is an international affair. Mr. Vogel is in good circumstances, being the owner of valuable real estate in this city.

HAS 153,000 MEMBERS.

Report Made to the Supreme Council of the Royal Arcanum at Detroit.

DETROIT, June 9.—For several days the supreme council of the Royal Arcanum, one of the largest beneficial societies of the country, was in session in this city. In accordance with the rules of the order all the deliberations were conducted in strict secrecy. H. H. C. Miller, of Chicago, presided. The annual report of Supreme Secretary Robson, of Boston, shows that the order, which was brought into existence in 1877 with nine members, has to-day a total membership of nearly 153,000 divided up into 1,561 councils. The membership is divided over every state in the union with the exception of Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida and South Carolina. For the year ending May 1 the order paid out death benefits to a total of $3,250,000, while the total benefits paid from the organization of the order to the same date have aggregated $27,000,000. Each assessment of the order now realizes $257,000.

Quarantine on the Detroit River.

DETROIT, June 9.—The United States health officials have established a quarantine service on the river here to examine all boats coming from Chicago that pass or enter this port for traces of smallpox. The steam yacht Florence B. has been engaged for the work. During the day she will work off the city, but at night she will go to St. Clair flats canal.

Will Store Coal at Muskegon.

MUSKEGON, June 9.—President Goodrich and General Traffic Manager Harson, of the Goodrich Transportation company, have purchased a harbor frontage of 795 feet in the heart of the city. The property unimproved cost $8,000. The company will build docks and warehouses and store coal here for its boats running between this point and Chicago.

Memorial Services Held.

ANN ARBOR, June 11.—A memorial service for the late Dr. Condon L. Ford, demonstrator of anatomy of the university of Michigan, was held in University hall Sunday afternoon. President Angell presided. Tributes to the dead man were given by Prof. Martin L. Dodge, dean of the literary faculty, and Dr. V. C. Vaughn, dean of the medical department.

Michigan Dentists at a Banquet.

ANN ARBOR, June 9.—One hundred and twenty-five members of the Michigan State Dental society sat down Friday evening in Granger's academy to a pleasant banquet given by the local committee. Prof. N. S. Hoff acted as toastmaster.

A GRAND FEATURE

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood and sends it coursing through the veins full of richness and health, it also imparts new life and vigor to every function of the body. Hence the expression so often heard: "Hood's Sarsaparilla made a new person of me." It overcomes that tired feeling so common now.

There is much tenderness in this seemingly cruel world—but the butcher rarely finds it.

It is harder for a man to refuse anything he likes, because it isn't good for him, than it is for a woman.

Do You Use Salt?

It will pay you in numerous ways to use the salt that's all salt. This is especially true as to the butter maker. You recognize a difference in butter. We can point you out a difference in salt. You strive for the best milk, why not search for the best salt? Test, compare, ask questions. Investigate what has done for others. There's no secret about it. Write and get particulars. We grant that salt is cheap, but is that a good reason why you should not have the best? Look fairly and fully into the salt question, and you'll find the way to better flavored butter, and better prices through our Dairy Salt. Indispensable for cooking and table use also. Write us about it.

Diamond Crystal Dairy Salt

Clinton Column.

CLINTON MICH., JUNE 14, 1894.

Will Williams visited Ann Arbor the last of the week.

Rev. Fr. Ternes, of Adrian, visited Clinton last Friday.

Lizzie Kirk, of Tecumseh, is visiting friends here a few days.

The Japanese Medicine Co. are in full blast this week at the fair grounds.

Edward White, of Isabella county, is visiting his son, Dr. White and family.

Mrs. E. R. Smith returned home from her Kansas trip Thursday evening last.

Miss Grace Davis came over from Detroit Saturday for a visit with her people.

W. D. Van Tuyle went to Lyons, O., last Saturday on his wheel, returning Sunday.

This week occurs the regular meetings of the Eastern Star chapter and the blue lodge.

Herbert Silvers, of Chicago, arrived in town last Friday for a few days' visit with friends.

Laura Haggart got home Thursday from Cambridge, Ill., her school there having closed.

Patrick Murphy went to Adrian Monday afternoon to visit his daughter Hannah a few days.

Children's Day exercises at the Baptist church will be held next Sunday evening at the usual hour.

Mrs. Ella G. Rose came over from Detroit Thursday evening for a week's visit with Mrs. Marjory Rose.

Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle and Mrs. Sarah Wastell left Thursday last for a visit with Detroit and Port Huron friends.

Carl Burton arrived home from Chicago Friday afternoon and will remain some time among the friends and scenes of his boyhood.

Frank McClure has started his soda fountain, and he makes the best hot weather drink in town. If you don't believe it, try it.

L. J. Leek visited his sister Myra at Adrian over Sunday, returning Monday accompanied by his sister Ella who has been there the past two weeks.

Miss Birdie Vosburg Carrie and Louie Davison and Blanche Rose, of Detroit, came over Monday evening. They are guests of Mrs. M. Rose.

Clinton is thought to have more bicycles in proportion to its population than any other town in the state. The riders are all the way from nine to ninety years of age.—Adrian Press.

Misses Vosburgh and Davidson, of Detroit, gave a fine concert at the town hall Tuesday evening. Those who braved the sultry atmosphere to attend were well pleased with the program.

The council have ordered a tax of $4.50 per $1.000 on the village assessment, which is 50 cents per $1.000 less than last year. The first $1.000 bond for the electric light plant will fall due next November.

Dan Embler's colts, while being unhitched Tuesday morning, ran away, tore up an evergreen tree by the roots, demolished the wagon and badly demoralized the harness. Mr. Embler, strange to say, escaped with a slight cut on the head and a lame arm. The horses were unhurt.

John Smalley, one of the oldest residents of South Manchester township, died suddenly Tuesday morning at the advanced age of 82. He had lived on his present farm over 50 years. He was at one time one of the largest horse dealers and shippers in southern Michigan and was well and favorably known.

Sunday, though very hot, was a great day for services. At the Congregational and M. E. churches they observed Children's Day with appropriate services in the morning. The floral decorations were fine and the services interesting. At each church there were three little ones baptised. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the K. O. T. M. memorial services were held at the Congregational church; in the evening union services at the M. E. church and regular services at St. Johns Episcopal church, all of which were largely attended.

A week ago on Sunday evening we had a rain accompanied by thunder and lightning. Doc White's dog, "Watch," is very timid at such times. While the Doctor and Mrs. White were attending services at the Episcopal church, the dog rushed in, having escaped from home and tracked them. Watch was panting very hard and Doc feared it might disturb the services, therefore he endeavored to get the dog out but he did not propose to go, feeling safer where he was. Doc finally collared the dog and by the time the outer door was reached, it was difficult to say which was breathing the hardest, Doc or the dog.

Our ball boys went to Britton Saturday and were done up to the tune of 13 to 17. For some reason Kennedy was not in usual form and only pitched four innings. Merriman pitched the balance of the game, and did well considering it was the second game he ever pitched. He is without doubt a ball player and a valuable acquisition to the team. Our boys could not hit Eastlick safely at critical times and the grounds being rough and laid out facing the sun many of the errors were excusable. Our boys seemed to play in hard luck.

The last number of the Michigan Farmer contains this flattering notice of one of Clinton's industries: "Without a doubt the Clinton Plow Co., of Clinton, this state, has gained more rapid prominence with the farmer and implement dealer than any other institution of the kind that has ever branched out in this section of the country. The gentlemen of the company, Mr. F. L. Woodward and F. B. Greenleaf, are exceptionally well adapted to their respective positions in the concern, and the line of goods that they are manufacturing certainly has more than ordinary merit, as hundreds of farmers in the state can testify. We predict a very bright future for this concern, as their plows are constructed on correct principles, with the special points of strength and durability, and are particularly adapted to hard ground plowing. The leading implement dealers of this and other states are anxiously applying for the sale of these goods, which is also an excellent indication.

The funeral of John Smalley will be at the house this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

L. W. Kimball, wife and Ruth, visited Saline friends Saturday and Sunday.

Will Rhodes and wife, of Pittsfield, visited Saturday and Sunday with her brother, Ham Niblack.

It is expected there will be a game of ball Saturday on the home grounds between Adrian and Clinton.

S. F. Marsteller has moved his old house to the west side of his lot, to make room for his new dwelling which will be put up soon.

Mrs. Ella G. Rose and daughter Blanche, Miss Vosburg and the Misses Davison return to Detroit in the morning.

The High School lawn fete at the residence of Prof. and Mrs. H. W. Daniels last Tuesday evening was largely attended. The grounds presented a charming picture.

The M. E. church was crowded last Saturday evening and Rev. Mr. Ramsdell delivered a very eloquent and practical baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers.

St. Johns Episcopal social will be held at the residence on Washington street next Thursday afternoon, June 21st. If the weather is pleasant refreshments will be served on the lawn. All are cordially invited to attend.

The graduating exercises take place this evening at the town hall. The class is the largest in the school's history, numbering fourteen, seven males and 7 females. The program is varied and will undoubtedly be very fine.

The alumni of the Clinton High School will present the following program at town hall, Friday, June 15:

Instrumental music—Miss Clyde Marsteller and J. D. Hause.
Prayer.
History—Mrs. C. S. Burroughs.
Solo—Minnie Humphrey.

Welcome to the class of '94—Laura Haggart.
Response by Grant Davis.
Banquet at the home of Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle.

Bro. Blanchard's basswood bugle blew a wee little blast last week, in trying to answer the HERALD's recital of facts of the week previous. True to his own instincts the editor of the Local adopted the methods of a coward in what little he had to say, by casting reflections upon our business integrity, which he would not dare to do in plain words, because he knows they would be libellous. However, we have no desire to prolong this controversy. It was forced upon us in self defense and we have no wish to "keep it up" except for that purpose, but we shall not hesitate to keep it up if Mr. Blanchard's attacks upon us continue. The HERALD has gained many friends since this controversy began, both in Clinton and Tecumseh, and we shall endeavor to merit their good will by advocating justice and fair play, as heretofore. As matters now stand we have no further reply to offer at this time. First, it hardly seems fair to keep hammering a man after he is down. Secondly, if we were to continue the war now, some of the good citizens of Clinton might be causing our arrest for cruelty to animals.

A CIRCUS

ON THE BILL-BOARDS

and a circus on circus day are two kinds of a thing. The greatest circus is usually on the Bill-boards, and the circus on Circus Day is consequently a disappointment. There is, of course, the occasional exception which proves the rule. McCormick Binders and Mowers are an exception. The promise on the "Bill-boards" is always fulfilled on "Circus Day." For years the makers of McCormick Grain and Grass Harvesters have been telling the World that they could and would at any time demonstrate the superiority of their machines in the actual competitive field test. The "Bill-boards" of other manufacturers have glaringly proclaimed that their machines are the best. But "Circus Day" came at length. The World's Fair urged all these manufacturers to take their machines into the field that the results might be compared. The McCormick was there; its show went on. It's promises to the World were carried out. But how about the other "great and onlys"? They stayed at home consoling themselves with the reflection that "the people like to be humbugged," and their artists got up new pictures for the "Bill-boards." Before deciding about going into these field trials, the competitors of the McCormick went and examined the crops to be cut, and realizing the severity of the conditions they said to themselves: "We don't propose to come here and compete with the McCormick;"—"a live coward is better than a dead hero;"—"a sucker is born every minute, and we'll catch some of 'em anyway." That policy may answer for the "Bill-board" sort of circus; it will not do for the McCormick. Promises must not be broken. If McCormick machines are not better than all others, they must not be so advertised. If they are so advertised, every Binder, every Reaper and every Mower must be ready at a moment's notice to go out into the field and show up. That's business. Write to the McCormick Harvesting Machine Co., Chicago;—or, better yet, call at once on your nearest McCormick agent.

BRITTON BUDGET.

The themometer stood 100 last Saturday.

The correspondent was sick last week, so the Budget was missing.

Remember our base ball team plays Cone team here next Saturday.

A. W. Lee and L. A. Brown were lake visitors last week, and they report a good time.

Subject at Christian Union church next Sunday, "Present Status of Christain Union."

Rev. Haines, of Highland, Oakland county, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Curtis.

Remember the 4th of July celebration at Britton. Bring all the children and enjoy yourself.

Mrs. C. E. Watson and family, late of Chicago, are visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Mudge.

An engine on the C. J. & M. was derailed here last Saturday, causing a delay of about three hours.

A large delegation from here attended the reunion of Co. F, 26th Mich Inft. at Dundee last Wednesday.

Miss Martha Ackley closed her school in the Prairie dist. last Friday. We understand she is engaged for another year.

Quite a number of our citizens have got the small pox scare to perfection, and if you go near them they exclaim "don't touch my arm".

The Hive will meet Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, instead of in the evening, on account of the commencement exercises, held Friday evening. Every member be present.

L. A. Brown started last Tuesday for Ill., he being employed by the Homer Steel Fence Co. He will establish agents. Well, L. A. we will miss your hearty laugh now on our Midway.

Commencement exercises of the Britton public schools, will take place on Friday evening. The work of the year, under the charge of Prof. Collins, has given universal satisfaction, and he is retained another year.

The Ladies of the Maccabee Hive will sell sandwiches, coffee, ice cream and lemonade on the grounds belonging to the railway station, east of the Exchange House, on the 4th of July. All Sir Knights and Lady Bees are cordially invited, as is the public in general.

The childrens' day exercises at the Christian Union church last Sunday evening, under the conduct of Supt. W. R. Osgood, were highly creditable to the school, and were attended by a large audience. The selections rendered by Mrs. C. E. Watson, of Chicago, entitled "Creed of the Bells" and "Wanted, a Pastor," added essentially to the entertainment.

Our boys played the Tecumseh high school nine last Saturday, defeating them by a score of 18 to 1. Following is the score:

Britton	1	2	2	3	4	1	2	2	1	—18
Tecumseh	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	—1

Struck out by Easlick, 15; by Harris, 8. Batteries, Easlick and Lowe; Keusch and Harris. Umpires, McClure and Yates.

Remember the citizens of Britton have spared no pains to make the celebration here one of the greatest our village has yet witnessed. The different committees will see that the programme is carried out properly, and more added to it. One of the main features of the day will be the speech, to be given by the Hon. Grant Fellows, of Hudson. The program is as follows: Grand salute at sunrise, of 42 guns; ball games at 10:30 a. m. and 3:30 p. m., prizes, $12.50, $7.50, $5.00; the speech will be given at 1:30 p. m. in Britton's grove; foot race, 100 yd. dash, 1st prize, $1.00; bicycle race, 100 yds., 1st prize, $2.00, 2nd, $1.00; egg race, 100 yds., 1st prize, $1.00, 2nd, 50c; pie eating contest, prize, $1.00; fat men's race, limit, 220 lbs., prize, 1.00; boys race under 12 years, 1st prize, $1.50, 2nd, $1.00, 3d, 50c; bologna race, 1st prize, $2.00, 2nd, $1.00; calethumpians, 3 prizes, 1st, $5.00, 2nd, $3.00, 3d $2.00. A fine display of fireworks in the evening, something entirely new, you must be sure and see them. During the day Master Willie Saxton will walk a tight rope. Remember the boy is only 10 years of age. Come and see the boy with nerve, and hear a good speech.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our late bereavment, the loss of a dear husband and father, we wish to extend our most sincere thanks.

MRS. W. LENARDSON AND FAMILY.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address Jno. C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the HERALD.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Postmaster Santus was a Detroit visitor, Saturday.

Dr. D. W. Loree is preparing to repair his residence on South St.

Harry Smith has improved the looks of his house by a coat of paint.

Lou Arner went to Hudson, Friday, for a few days stay with friends.

Census enumerator Culbertson expects to complete his work this week.

With this issue we begin our eleventh year as correspondent for the HERALD.

Professor L. M. Drake is moving his household goods to Blissfield this week.

Agent Bert Slater, of Tecumseh, called on Agent Rhinebold, Friday afternoon.

Palmer A. Hamilton and wife, of Elkhart, Ind., visited friends in the village last week.

Quite a large delegation attended the Children's Day exercises held in Britton, Sunday evening.

Geo. Cone, of Hudson, visited his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Montgomery, Sunday and Monday.

Postmaster Santus has one of the best letter copiers there is. It is the simplex printer, and works to perfection.

Mattie Carr, of Croswell, Ohio, will enjoy country life at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Florence Lowe, for a few weeks.

Quite a number of our citizens attended the Farmers' Club picnic held in Geo. Holloway's grove, near Holloway, on Friday last.

Mrs. Malinda Bush and Mrs. I. T. Bush, of Brooklyn, N.Y., arrived Tuesday for their, summer vacation at the home of their parents.

Miss Mary Anderson's class in music will give a concert in Sutton's Opera House, at Tecumseh, on Friday evening of next week. Tickets may be had of Clara Temple and Kittie Clark, at 25c each. No extra charge for reserved seats.

Those who failed to hear Rev. Dr. Wilder, in his lecture, on Monday evening, at the church, missed one of the finest lectures that has been given here in a long time. The subject was "Hard Times and their remedy." Mr. Wilder is a very able speaker and understands his subject perfectly. It is hoped he may visit our village again in the near future.

Remember the phonograph entertainment to be given at the church, on Tuesday evening of next week, by B. B. Bennett, of Plymouth, under the auspices of the L. C. S. It pleases the young and is a wonder to the aged. A production can be heard in any part of the house without the ear tubes. It is truly one of Edison's great wonders. Admission to all, 15c. For further information and programme see small bills.

On next Wednesday evening, the ladies of the W. C. T. U. will give an ice cream festival on Mrs. John Arner's lawn, on South St. The ladies of the Union will endeavor to make it one of the most pleasant occasions of the season. A grand surprise is in reserve for all who attend, and those who fail to do so will miss a rare treat. Cream and cake, 10c a dish. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and as the cause is a worthy one, it should have the hearty support of every lover of God and home and native land.

CARD OF THANKS.

As we have not the privilege of meeting those who aided us, and administered to the wants of our dear Nellie, during her sickness, we take this means to extend our thanks and appreciation, and when death claimed her as its own, they still showed deep sympathy by their presence and assistance. To those who sang the sweet songs, she loved in life so well, at the funeral, we wish to extend our gratitude, and shall ask God's blessing upon them all in our prayers.

Respectfully,
MR. & MRS. S. V. DIBBLE.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

School closes in the Bradley District this week.

Clarence Wisner is home from the Tecumseh high school.

The highways are receiving the attention of the farmers this week.

Mrs. Mary Knight, widow of the late Orson Knight, of Adrian, visited relatives south and west of Tipton, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wisner visited at Wm. Burns' last Thursday. Mrs. Burns was very low, although the family consider her improving.

The Milford Times of June 9th says that Miss Zella Davis returned to her home from Big Rapids last Monday, and left on the following Wednesday for Elwood, Ind., where she has been engaged to teach stenography and typewriting.

THEY WANT NAMES.

The Russell Art Publishing Co., of 928 Arch Street, Philadelphia, desire the names and address of a few people in every town who are interested in works of art, and to secure them they offer to send free, 'Cupid Guides the Boat,' a superbly executed water picture size 10x18 inches, suitable for framing, and sixteen other pictures about same size, in colors, to any one sending them at once the names and address of ten persons (admirers of fine pictures) together with six two-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing, etc. The regular price of these pictures is $1.00, but they can all be secured free by any person forwarding the names and stamps promptly.

NOTE—The editor of this paper has already received copies of above pictures and considers them really 'Gems of Art.'

MACON MUSIC.

Dr. Oven, of Petoskey, made a flying visit at his old home last week.

Miss Carrie Hoag, of Tecumseh, is spending a few days among friends.

Will Hatch, of Washington, D. C., arrived home last week for the summer vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ovenshier, of Bellevue, Mich., are spending a few days among relatives and old friends.

Joe Howell, who has taught in Ada, Kent county, the past three years, arrived home last Thursday for the summer vacation.

The Maccabees turned out in full force last Sunday morning, to celebrate their anniversary, and Rev. J. I. Gulick gave them an able discourse.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Reform church, will give a Tokio Tea on B. H. Pennington's lawn, July 11th. All are cordially invited. Programme will be printed later.

Quite a number of our young people attended the commencement exercises, at Clinton, last Thursday evening, in which Miss Edith Cotton was one of the graduates.

Mr. J. S. Osgood, of St. Johns, made a short visit with his brother, Wm. Osgood, last week. He came to see his mother, Mrs. Martha Osgood, who is in quite feeble health.

The community was very much shocked and grieved last Wednesday morning to learn of the sudden death of "Uncle John" Morgan. He was feeling unusually well and went to the field to help along a little, and was overcome with the heat. Dr. Morden was immediately summoned and pronounced it sunstroke, but he was beyond human aid, and passed away in about an hour. He was 79 years of age; was loved and respected by all who knew him. He leaves an aged widow, one son and one daughter, who with a large number of relatives and friends will deeply feel his loss. The funeral services were conducted from the old home on Friday afternoon by Rev. Ramsdell, and were attended by a large concourse of sympathizing friends.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Rooms, June 18, 1894.

Present the entire council. Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORT OF COMMITTEES.

Chairman of committee on public health reported that complaint has been made as to the condition of W. W. Marsh's slaughter house, that he and the health officer had investigated the same and found it in good sanitary condition.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

Marshal reported that he had procured two extra keys to the door of the engine house, one of which he had fastened to north side of said door and the other he had placed at Harris & Hitshu's store.

NEW BUSINESS.

The bid of James E. Lowry and Jas. Mitchel, to build abutments for the Mill street bridge for the sum of $1,000 was presented to council. The following bills were presented and refered to the Finance committee: Wm. Mellon, labor, $30.00; S. C. Stacy, printing, $5.00; Casper Cook, labor, $30.00; A. Hyde, street commissioner, $24.00; Poll tax worked, $30.38; A. Park, work on water works, $6.15; Robt. Owen, 4.12; committee reporting favorably on all of above bills Recorder was instructed to draw his order on the treasurer for the said several amounts.

Moved and supported that Recorder draw his order on the treasurer for the sum of $877.19 to pay interest on water works bonds for July payment, carried.

Moved and supported that water board make report at next meeting of council showing how much water rental has been collected and the names of all who are in arrears. Carried.

Moved and supported that a committee composed of the President, trustees, Smith, Heesen and Hall be appointed to have charge of the Mill street bridge; to draft specifications, draw and execute contract; require a bond from contractors in the sum of $1,000 and to have full authority to act in the premises. Carried.

Moved and supported that chairman of the Cemetery committee procure a dump cart and harness for the sexton's use. Carried.

Moved and supported that the Marshal shall have the months of July and August in which to collect the corporation taxes. Carried.

The street commissioner was instructed to place signs on the bank of the Raisin river at Globe Mill bridge, forbidding all persons from dumping rubbish thereon. Council then adjourned.

W. J. INGERSOLL, Recorder.

A REMARKABLE CURE.

A Case of Piles of Eighteen Years' Standing.

Cured by the Pyramid Pile Cure.

There are plenty of Pile cures which give relief and sometimes cure a mild case of piles but there is only one which can be depended upon with certainty to cure obstinate long standing cases, and that is the Pyramid Pile Cure.

Endorsements and testimonials are received daily from men and women whose integrity and reliability are above question and in this connection a letter received from the Rev. Jas. Wesbrook of Bowne, Mich., may be of interest to pile sufferers who have sought in vain for a cure. He says:

I have used the Pyramid Pile Cure and I know that it is all that is claimed for it. I have been troubled with piles more or less for about eighteen years and I had tried other remedies, but the piles grew worse until about ten months ago I used the Pyramid Pile Cure. It give almost instant relief and I have been free from piles over since. Rev. J. H. Wesbrook.

The Pyramid Pile Cure is prepared by the Pyramid Drug Co. of Albion, Mich., and for sale by druggists everywhere.

OBITUARY.

Died, May 22, 1894, at the home of William Curry, at Cone, Monroe county, Mich., Harmon Swick, of old age and heart trouble. He was born July 11, 1814, and when a young man came to Michigan, where he was married, but lost his wife in 1850. In 1851 he went to California by the overland route and returned in 1857, living in New York state and Michigan the balance of his life. He leaves two daughters, Mrs. Rachel Nichols, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. Mary Callum, of Jackson, Mich. Mrs. Collum was with him in his last sickness, never leaving his bedside, night or day, until the last spark of life went out. She then laid her father beside her mother, brothers and sister at Lake Ridge, to await the great resurrection.

Lucius L., son of the late Olmsted and Mary Hough, was born in the town of Tecumseh, June 22nd, 1833. He passed his youth and early manhood in the town of his nativity. At the call of his country, he enlisted on the 27th of Sept., 1861, in Co. D, 3d Reg., Mich. Cavalry; reenlisted as veteran volunteer at Lagrange, Tenn; was discharged from the service of the U. S. at San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 12th, 1866. Since his return he has lived most of the time in Saline and Tecumseh. For the past three years his home has been in the village of Tecumseh. For several years his health has been failing, and he was conscious of his approaching end. He died May 27th, and was laid at rest on decoration day, in our beautiful cemetery, by the G. A. R., of which he was a member. The funeral services were conducted by the Revs. H. A. Smith and J. P. Varner, the G. A. R. giving their burial service at the grave. He leaves a widow and four children, one brother and sister to mourn his loss.

How to Avoid Farm Work in Summer.

It never gets so hot in the South as it does in the North. There are never any sunstrokes in the South. The hotter the weather the harder the Northern farmer has to work to save his crops, while down South the farmers do their farm work during the Fall, Winter and Spring, when the weather is cool, and during the Summer they take it easy. It is always cool in the shade down South and the nights are always cool. The thermometer seldom gets above 90. The hottest day during the past five years was 97 degrees.

You can grow one crop during the Winter, another during the Spring, and another during the Fall on the same land each year. You will net more money from each one of these crops than you can make from a similar crop in the North. You can get a home cheaper. It will cost you less to live. You can make more money. You will have better health, live longer, and enjoy life better in the South than in the North. A beautiful pamphlet that tells all about it sent free to all applicants. Go South now and investigate. Low rate excursions every month over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. E. E. Posey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile, Ala.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and —he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 21, 1894.

And now Senator John Sherman, of Ohio, claims to be a bimetallist. What will happen next?

The best speech on the tariff question could be summed up in these six words: "Send the bill to the house."

Public sentiment is becoming more and more emphatic on this point, that the best way to reform the U. S. Senate is to abolish it.

His physicians advise the President to keep quiet. Wouldn't it be a good plan for them to advise the Senate to keep quiet, too?

Congress blames the President and the President blames Congress. In the meantime the Republicans are sawing wood and carrying the elections.

Governor Tillman, of South Carolina, says he takes a glass of whiskey with a friend, when he feels like it. Now, let us hear from the Governor of North Carolina.

It is asserted that there have been worse tariff bills than the Gorman bill. True, but that is no reason why a Democratic Congress should accept such a bill, after all.

Is Mayor Pingree of Detroit a candidate for Governor? He doesn't say so directly, but then the Mayor is a very taciturn man and would hardly wish to acknowledge the corn in so many words.

The Senate has agreed to tax sugar 40 per cent, which will increase its cost, according to Mr. Havemyer, at least one cent a pound. The same Senate objects to the income tax, because it is inquisitorial.

Farmer governors are all right. Michigan has had a good many of them. It has also had one soldier governor in thirty years and he was a one term man. Now, why not give the old soldier another chance?

The St. Louis Republic says: "Mrs. Lease should not make the mistake of becoming a candidate for Congresswoman at large from Kansas. She belongs with the other nice old ladies in the United States Senate."

The coming great political conflict in this country will be between money and manhood. Money is on top at present, but the people are becoming educated and the time is coming when they will vote for their own interests.

Gov. Lewelling, of Kansas, has been renominated by the Populists. Well, if Kansas really wants another term of Lewelling, we don't know as other people ought to complain. Public officials in Kansas are a peculiar lot, anyway.

Although it is only 15 days to the close of the fiscal year not a single one of the regular appropriation bills has become a law and there is no prospect that any of them will before that time. A joint resolution extending the old appropriations will have to be adopted by House and Senate. Otherwise the wheels of the government would cease to revolve July 1.

Senator Teller in a recent speech said: "What are we to do? Are we to go on in the way we are going? Are we sensible men when we sit here and do nothing? You may deride the Coxey movement; you may poke fun at Fitzgerald; but they represent a sentiment of distrust and discontent; and they are indications, in my judgment, of a danger that no sensible man ought to overlook."

No time has yet been set for taking a vote on the tariff bill, but Senator Harris, it is said, refused an offer of Senator Aldrich to make it June 25, because he thought it could be reached sooner. The general impression is that the bill will be passed sometime during the week beginning on that date, whether there is any agreement or not. The Senators are as tired of the discussion as the public is.

The Chicago Herald is getting "sarcastical, as Artemus Ward would say," in thus prodding the sugar trust Senators: "Senator McPherson's servant girl who sent the famous telegram ordering a purchase of sugar trust stock—a transaction by which the Senator cleared $15,000—ought to be advanced to the rank, pay and emoluments of typewriter at least. Such a female is too valuable to be exposed to the risk of being blown up while lighting the fire with kerosene.

The Republican members of the Senate are still using every pretext possible to retard the passage of the tariff bill. It is now claimed that a vote will be taken on the 25th.

The big coal miners strike is now in a fair way of adjustment and it has come none too soon. The plan of settling the controversy by districts was adopted, which will doubtless result in a general settlement in a few days.

The "irony of politics" was never more emphatically illustrated than in the vote on the sugar schedule taken by the Senate. Every Democrat but one voted for protection—and strange to relate, that one Democrat was David B. Hill—and every Republican voted for free sugar.

An important amendment to the tariff bill was introduced in the Senate recently by Mr. Morgan. It strikes a blow directly at trusts of all sorts. The amendment provides that every combination, conspiracy, trust, agreement, or contract is declared to be contrary to public policy, and null and void when made by or between two or more persons or corporations engaged in the importation of goods from foreign countries, where such trust, etc., is intended to operate in the restraint of lawful trade or to increase the market price of the product or article in which it deals or seeks to control. This is doubtless an excellent provision, but whether "Senatorial courtesy" will pass it is a different question.

The New York World expresses the political situation very accurately in these words: "There are only two sides to the question now before the people. Shall the trusts, to whom the Republicans sold the government, continue to rob the people, or shall they be restrained? The Democratic party, in its National Convention, says they shall be restrained; that their wholesale plunder shall be stopped. A few democratic members of Congress may be cajoled or bribed to act with the Republicans, but the rank and file, the masses of the Democratic party, have organized against plutocracy. They have declared war against it, and that war will be continued until either the Democracy or plutocracy is destroyed, even though new leaders may have to be selected in every Congressional district at each election."

The tariff bill in some modified form is due from the United States Senate on the 15th inst. Such at least was the promise made to the people by the managers of the bill. There is no chance that the obligation will be met. On the contrary, the people will be more than fortunate if the measure escapes from the puttering hands of the Senators before the dawn of the new fiscal year. Not one of the causes that have contributed to this delay are creditable to the intelligence or honesty of the Senate. The Democrats, with whom the prime responsibility rests, have tamely surrendered themselves and their honor into the keeping of a gang of gamblers and stock jobbers claiming affiliation with their own party, but practicing loyalty to no interests save those of the trusts by which they are retained.—Chicago Times.

President Havemeyer, of the sugar trust, is by long odds the most interesting and important witness who has yet testified before the Senate investigating committee. While not volunteering any information, Mr. Havemeyer willingly answered all the questions asked, except as to the total amount contributed for political purposes by the sugar trust. There he drew the line and refused to answer questions asked him. He admitted that the sugar trust was organized to control the price of sugar and that its $55,000,000 of profits during the last few years was proof of its success; that he came to Washington to control the legislation of Congress on sugar, but had not got all he asked for in the sugar schedule of the tariff bill; that the sugar trust made liberal contributions to the political parties which controlled the states in which it does business.

Senator John Sherman's position in regard to a government income tax is quite different under Cleveland's administration from what it was under Grant's. On the 23rd of May, 1870, he made a long speech in the Senate to show that an "income tax is the most just and equitable tax that could be possibly levied." He laid great stress on the good results of the system in England. For twenty years that country "has maintained in peace and in war, with a surplus revenue and without it, the income tax as a part of her system," said Senator Sherman on that occasion, "and every writer on political economy who has written for 20 years has, I venture to say, concurred in it." In fact, Senator Sherman was so thoroughly convinced of the justice of the income tax that he seemed at times to favor the abolition of all other methods of raising revenue for the government. He considered it immeasurably above the system of tariff taxation on the necessities of the laboring classes. The taxes on sugar, coffee and tea did not fall on the rich and poor alike, he contended, for the reason that a rich man needed no more of such articles than a poor man did. All of the earnings of the latter were taxed in this way, while only a small percentage of the rich man's income was reached by either the tariff or the internal revenue laws.

Sugar Trust Politics.

The testimony of Mr. Havemeyer before the Senate committee gives a very frank and well-understood presentation of Sugar Trust politics. He tells the exact truth when he says that they contributed to both parties, and always to the majority party in the state; and in telling this he tells nothing more than what every intelligent politician of the whole country has known for years.

The sugar trust is in politics for revenue only, just as are all other monopoly interests of the country. They serve Republican power when it is omnipotent; they serve Democratic power when it is in the mastery, and they carefully note the trend of public sentiment in national campaigns and generally manage to fall on the winning side.

In 1890 when the Republicans were framing the McKinley bill the sugar trust made itself potential. It did not bother with the House, where there were confused councils, but when the bill reached the Senate the Trust struck out from the shoulder and received a protection for refined sugar in excess of the entire labor cost of refining it. In other words, the McKinley bill as amended in the Senate, paid the sugar trust not only the entire labor expense of refining it, but even in excess of that amount by a tax of one-half cent a pound on refined sugar with raw sugar free.

We do not remember that the Republican organs then complained of the sugar trust. The Republicans were in power and the sugar trust respected and supported the party that had the power to frame a tariff bill. Speculation in sugar shares was quickened, and they advanced over thirty per cent. in a few weeks, but the same journals which approved of everything that was then done, are now horrified at the idea of the sugar trust obtaining a fraction it obtained from the Republicans in 1890.—Philadelphia Times.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Gentlemen:—I am very happy to write to you that I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh with great success. I have been troubled with this complaint for over ten years, with dull headache nearly all the time. After taking three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, I am cured of catarrh and clear of the headache. I was also troubled with a scalp disease, which was very annoying, four or five years. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I do not have any trace of this trouble. I sleep well, have a good appetite and feel strong, quite in contrast to my feeling before I began to take this good medicine." J. M. CARNAHAN, Patton, Ill.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. Full particulars sent by E. Fosey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile Ala.

The Development of the South

is being furthered by the Queen and Crescent Route by means of a special series of Monthly Excursions to southern points at One Fare for Round Trip. These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th; good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q & C. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

In the matter of the estate of Albert Hyde, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the probate court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at The Lilley State Bank, in Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 14th day July, 1894, and on the 6th day of December, 1894, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 6th day of June, A. D., 1894, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated Tecumseh, Mich., June 12, 1894.

LESTER P. TRIBOU,

Commissioners.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grass to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very condensed form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not lost in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanism, strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

a circus on circus day are two kinds of a thing. The greatest circus sually on the Bill-boards, and the circus on Circus Day is consequently sappointment. There is, of course, the occasional exception which ves the rule. McCormick Binders and Mowers are an exception. Their mise on the "Bill-boards" is always fulfilled on "Circus Day." For rs the makers of McCormick Grain and Grass Harvesters have been ing the World that they could and would at any time demonstrate the eriority of their machines in the actual competitive field test. The ill-boards" of other manufacturers have glaringly proclaimed that their chines are the best. But "Circus Day" came at length. The World's r urged all these manufacturers to take their machines into the field t the results might be compared. The McCormick was there; its show nt on. It's promises to the World were carried out. But how about other "great and onlys"? They stayed at home consoling themselves h the reflection that "the people like to be humbugged," and their ists got up new pictures for the "Bill-boards." Before deciding about ing into these field trials, the competitors of the McCormick went and amined the crops to be cut, and realizing the severity of the conditions, y said to themselves: "We don't propose to come here and compete th the McCormick;"—"a live coward is better than a dead hero;"—"a cker is born every minute, and we'll catch some of 'em anyway." hat policy may answer for the "Bill-board" sort of circus; it will not do r the McCormick. Promises must not be broken. A CHILD.

Old signs are written in thy tender face,
Desires, regrets that thou hast never known.
Thou art the heir of thy aspiring race,
Heir of a troubled throne.

Of hope that hardly dost portend the morn,
And sadness that hast scarcely guessed at pain,
God takes the characters of fate outworn
And writes them fair again.

Those little feet, that scarce the light turf press,
Those little hands so brown with wind and sun—
God grant they tremble not for weariness
Before thy course be done.

And thou shalt love and learn what love is worth,
And thou shalt trust and learn to value men,
And all the sudden mysteries of earth
Shall open to thy ken.

* * * * * * *

What! Will be flying? Am I, then, too staid?
Can I not smooth the meditative brow,
Flash through the sun and flutter through the shade,
As birds from bough to bough?

What! Dost thou linger? Ah, my dear, how much
Thou givest, couldst thou only understand!
The kiss of childish pity and the touch
Of thine absolving hand.

—New York Ledger.

A PLUCKY ENGINEER.

I am a civil engineer, or rather I was one until I retired a few years ago with a comfortable fortune. Many men in our profession have had exciting experiences, but I doubt whether anybody but myself has ever traveled at the rate of 60 miles an hour, suspended beneath a railway carriage.

I was never a man to seek adventure for its own sake; neither was I inclined to be timid when a task attended with danger had to be performed. My work often brought me into great peril; but, except on the occasion of which I am about to write, I had, fortunately, kept clear of accidents.

It was in the seventies that I received the appointment of chief engineer to one of the big railway lines connected with Boston. I was of an inventive turn and had recently taken out a patent for a radial axle frame for six wheeled coaches. This was a device that enables the wheels of a carriage to adjust themselves to sharp curves and so obviate the friction of the rail and consequent danger that attached to the ordinary fixed axles.

This patent of mine was applied experimentally to several coaches on my line, and the results were to all appearances very satisfactory. However, I had a technical dispute with a brother engineer, an old friend in whose opinion I generally had the fullest confidence, respecting a rather important detail. As a matter of fact, we held different opinions as to the behavior of the mechanism when in actual operation, and my working model did not help us much.

"I'll tell you what I will do," I said. "I'll satisfy myself by seeing how it works."

"How do you mean?" he asked.

"Why, I'll travel underneath the coach, hang myself up in a hammock and watch the whole thing."

My friend smiled incredulously.

"Will you accompany me? I am in earnest," I continued.

"No, thank you," was his reply. "I must decline to embark on such a harebrained adventure. I have a wife and family dependent on me."

But I was determined to settle the point. If what he said was correct, the sooner the modification was made the better. So I made arrangements for my journey on the Boston express next day.

When I reached the railway station, I found that my instructions had been carried out. A large piece of sacking was suspended beneath the carriage by four stout hempen ropes, passed through wrought iron staples and properly tied and lashed. I examined it carefully and found everything secure.

A few minutes before the train started I crept into my hammock, assisted by my friend, who had come to see me off on my strange journey. He wished me bon voyage, the whistle blew, and we began to move out of the station.

Lying as I was on my back, smoking at a cigar, the motion was at first decidedly pleasant, but as we got up steam and increased our speed my position became one of considerable discomfort. I was rocked from side to side with ever increasing violence and soon became covered with dust and ashes, which, with the tremendous draft, were driven against my face in a manner that was at times quite painful. My eyes were, however, protected by a suitable pair of spectacles that I had taken the precaution to provide myself with.

I was able from my position to watch closely the behavior of the axle frame. I was acquainted with the position and character of every curve on the line, and consequently knew just when to be specially watchful. My gratification was complete when I found that in every respect the views I had advocated were correct. Every swivel and lever worked splendidly, and the undue straining that my friend had insisted must occur at certain points did not exist. There was absolutely no way of improving the mechanism that I could see.

We had passed the worst curve on the line and were now greatly increasing our speed. We were entering on the fastest bit of the journey, and things were getting lively for me. The pitching and rolling of a small boat in midchannel in "choppy" weather were not to be compared to the motion I experienced. It was more like being violently "tossed in the blanket."

One jolt sent me flying upward, and I struck my head against the framework with such force that the blow nearly stunned me. At another time I was nearly rolled out beneath the wheels. I was compelled to hold on to the sides of the sacking for dear life, and my hands were battered a good deal. To make matters worse, a giddiness and nausea were coming over me—a virtual seasickness—and I kept asking myself why I had been mad enough to embark on such a foolhardy undertaking.

Suddenly turning my eyes to one of the two supporting cords at the head of my hammock, I saw, with a feeling of extreme horror, that through friction with part of the radial axle frame it had been cut more than half through! I was hanging by a mere filament! If that broke, death was certain. I must either be thrown between the wheels of the carriage and frightfully mangled or dashed to pieces on the permanent way.

I immediately sought some means of escape from the doom that stared me in the face. I could find none. To hang on by the remaining cord at the head of the hammock was impossible, as directly the other was cut through there would be no support to my feet, which I could not place over the side of the sacking without their coming in contact with the mechanism of the coach. For the same reason I could not grasp any of the framework above, as the only parts on which I could lay hold were the levers, which were constantly moving from side to side and would infallibly crush my hands to pieces.

The cord was wearing thinner and thinner, and I knew that a few minutes must put an end to my existence. There was absolutely nothing to be done but await my fate, which I did, not with that calm composure that is supposed to mark the hero, but in unspeakable terror. My life was literally hanging on a thread, and I could only lie there trembling, in a cold sweat, watching until my fragile support should give way.

Suddenly the engine whistle gave a long scream, and I knew that the brake was being applied and that our speed was rapidly slackening. What could it mean? A distance signal must be against us. If only the train would come to a standstill, I could escape!

We were fast reducing our speed, and I was greatly excited with the hope that lay in this providential occurrence when another short whistle told me that the line was now clear. I felt the brake removed.

Now was the time or never! I knew that the train would not move any slower during the time that I could hope to continue in my position. We were going 15 to 20 miles an hour.

Whipping out my pocketknife, I reached up one hand and cut through the thin strand that supported one side of my hammock. At the same moment I closed my eyes and let myself go, directing all my efforts to the end that my fall should be in the center of the track. I was conscious of a fearful blow on the back of the head and remember on more until my senses returned.

When I opened my eyes, I was lying between the lines with no train in sight. I found that I had received a number of severe contusions, that my left shoulder was dislocated, and that I had sprained my right ankle. This seemed to be the extent of my injuries. In great pain I managed to limp to a cottage a few hundred yards from the line, where an agricultural laborer's wife was extremely kind and attentive. She sent her boy to fetch the local surgeon, who soon put my shoulder right and plastered and bandaged me all over. He then drove me to the nearest station, where I telegraphed the news of my safety, and awaited the next train back to New York.

When I reached town, a great many of the officials of the line were on the platform to condole with me on my accident and congratulate me on having escaped with my life. There had been great excitement and apprehension. When the train had arrived at Boston and it was seen that an accident had happened and that I was missing, a search for my body had been made along the whole line. My disappearance had been considered very mysterious.

My engineer friend, who had been extremely anxious about me, helped me into a carriage that he had in waiting to drive me to my home.

"How, in the name of heaven, did you escape with your life?" he asked as we drove out of the station.

"I'll tell you all about it when we get home," I replied; "but, first of all, I was right and you were wrong!"

"My dear fellow," he said laughingly, but in all sincerity, "I am extremely glad that you have at least that satisfaction out of the melancholy business. I congratulate you heartily."—Exchange.

A Reason For Indolence.

Our public school and university system of training consists, from its conception to its end, in one continued series of competitions among those whom it is training for practical life, and the most successful competitor is supposed to be the most promising man of the future. But the triumphs thus obtained on the threshold of practical life are not infrequently purchased by a strain on the power of adolescent manhood, to be followed by a period of lassitude and indifference when the real work of the world begins.

A story is current that in early life one of the ablest and most vigorous of modern statesmen was reproached by a relation for his apparently incurable indolence, and he retorted, "I am storing energy."—Quarterly Review.

Where the Danger Is.

A stranger in New York city was being shown the sights by a resident friend. They had been putting in about 24 hours a day at it for a week, and the last day but one had arrived.

"By the way," remarked the visitor, "I've done this town pretty thoroughly, but before I leave I want to see the most dangerous locality in it and go through it."

"You've been," replied the resident.

"I guess not."

"Yes. Two or three times."

"Why, I didn't know it. Why didn't you tell me?"

"I never thought of it."

"Where is it?"

"Wall street."—Detroit Free Press.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 49 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE UNION CLUB.

THEIR FIRST ANNUAL PICNIC HELD AT GEORGE HOLLOWAY'S GROVE IN RAISIN.

A Large Gathering of Farmers, A Bountiful Dinner, and Interesting Program.

One of the largest and best managed farmer's clubs in this vicinity is called the "Farmers' Union." Its membership embraces the territory immediately east of Tecumseh village, and includes some of the most progressive farmers in Tecumseh, Raisin, Ridgeway and Macon townships. No better farms can be found in Lenawee county than are embraced within this circle, and the owners who cultivate them are noted for their thrift, independence and progressiveness. As the bottom seems to have dropped out of the Union Picnic at Sand Lake, in which this club always took a prominent part, they conceived the idea of running the picnic business on their own hook this year, and last Friday was the day chosen on which to inaugurate the new custom. Geo. Holloway's home, where he has a large lawn with plenty of shade trees, was the place chosen and a better place couldn't have been found. The day was hot and sultry, the thermometer dancing around among the 90's most of the afternoon, but a large crowd of farmers gathered nevertheless, to enjoy a good old-fashioned farmers' picnic. The grounds are conveniently arranged to accommodate a large crowd. A platform and seats were placed on the lawn south of the house and the tables were spread beneath a row of maples north of the house. This proved to be an excellent arrangement as it provided ample accommodations for a large gathering. As early as nine o'clock the members of the club began to arrive and the highways from all points of the compass marked the coming of teams, until the hour of noon. Many residents of the vicinity appeared on the grounds after dinner, and at three o'clock in the afternoon the crowd must have numbered nearly five hundred people, and a jollier, happier farmers' gathering we have rarely seen.

Shortly after noon the crowd took their places at the tables which were loaded down with all the substantials and delicacies for which Raisin township is noted. The first course consisted of pork and beans, cold baked chicken and other cold meats, and then followed biscuit, salads, pies and pastry ad libitum, winding up with coffee and ice cream. The tables were filled three times but there was enough and to spare.

At two o'clock the president of the club, Mr. John T. Boyce, called the assemblage to order and announced the program in the following order.

The Holloway orchestra opened the exercises with an instrumental selection. The orchestra is composed of six pieces, both string and brass instruments, with piano accompaniment. It is well led and furnishes music much above the average.

An invocation to the throne of grace was offered by Rev. Mr. Stead.

President Boyce made a few opening remarks, welcoming the assemblage and explaining the object of the gathering.

A chorus followed by the Union Glee Club, entitled "Rural Pleasures." This musical annex to the club adds very materially to the interest of their regular meetings, and their singing was one of the most pleasing features of the afternoon's exercises on picnic day.

May Culbertson gave a recitation entitled, "Makin' an editor out o' him," which was beautifully rendered, and little Fern VanDuser followed with a song given in her usual fascinating style.

Mrs. B. I. Laing then gave a reading, "The Farmer's Wheel." Although Mrs. Laing is a grandmother, she was as young in spirit as any of them, and she read the selection with as much vivacity as any one on the program.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Strong followed in a duet, which was superbly rendered, entitled "Wintry Days."

S. C. Stacy gave a short talk setting forth some of his agricultural experience and giving the farmers present a little wholesome advice.

The orchestra followed with another rattling selection.

Miss Bertha Smeltzer gave a recitation "The Three Lovers." She spoke with self possession, in a clear, full-toned voice, making herself distinctly heard over the entire grounds, and she received many compliments for her splendid contribution to the program.

The Ladies Glee Club followed with a chorus, "The Independent Farmer," and to say that it was well sung would only faintly express the fact, and a recitation by Mabel Hollister followed which was beautifully rendered.

Henry C. Smith, of Adrian, then favored the assemblage with one of his characteristic addresses. Mr. Smith is a fluent talker and makes his points in a telling manner. His remarks were appropriate to the occasion and made an excellent impression. We have no space to spare to publish the address entire and no abstract would do it justice.

Miss Fern DePuy followed with an essay entitled, "Is the Age Degenerate?" It was ably written, evincing fine literary ability, and was beautifully read. The club ought to request her to furnish a copy of that essay for publication.

Miss Caroline Colvin then read an original poem on "Farm Life," that was finely composed and made an excellent impression upon her hearers. We should like to see that in print also.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Strong sang another duet, "Down on the Farm." Whether it was better than the first one it would be difficult to say, but it was beyond criticism.

Some short talks came next on the program and Alex. Richards was called out. He gave an impromptu speech, with the vim that always characterizes his remarks. It is a good thing for farmers to spend a day occasionally in sociability and amusement. We read much in poetry and romance about the farmers' life being one of pleasure and independence. This is only true in part. The fact is that farmers are most of them hard toilers and are dependent on other classes. Neither the farmer himself nor the wage worker gets the full benefit of the low price for which farm produce is now sold. Farmers ought to be more independent when they go to the polls and not believe everything that politicians tell them. They ought to think while they work and judge for themselves.

Little Fern VanDuser sang "The Broken Home" most beautifully and in a manner that called forth a rousing encore. Fern has a bright future before her, if her musical talents are properly cultivated.

Rev. C. M. Brown, of Tecumseh, was called out and responded in a few happy remarks. He thought the farmers' life was an independent one. They could have chicken pie when they wanted it and butter and eggs without buying them. The farmers' wife perhaps had a hard time cooking on three-legged stoves with broken griddles. He would like to be a farmer and live in luxury and independence all his days.

The orchestra rendered another selection and President Boyce declared the formal exercises closed. To say that the day's meeting was a success would be drawing it very mildly. The attendance was much beyond expectation. many entire families being present. The gray-haired grand-father and grandmother, the farmer and matron, the young man and maiden, and even the little shavers and babies were all there. It was a home gathering of neighbors and acquaintances and they enjoyed the day right royally. The program too was a superior one, both in musical and literary merit, and displayed to fine advantage the talents which the club contains within its own membership. It was something of an experiment, but the new custom was brilliantly inaugurated and the Farmers' Union Picnic ought to run itself hereafter with each returning June. The guests should feel under special obligations to Geo. Holloway for his generous hospitality. He carried the whole entertainment on his shoulders in one sense, although he had plenty of willing hands to help him. The public owe to him and to the club a vote of thanks for a day of recreation and unalloyed enjoyment.

REUNION OF CO. F.

Its Fifth Annual Meeting Held at the Home of Henry Ball, in Dundee.

On Wednesday of last week, June 13th, occurred the fifth annual reunion of Co. F. 26th Michigan Infantry. The custom which the boys inaugurated five years ago this month has been regularly observed each year since, and with ever increasing interest to the members of the company. This year's meeting was held at the residence of Henry Ball on main street, Dundee. The front entrance of the house was beautifully decorated with national flags and bunting. A canvass awning was stretched over the lawn east of the house to shelter the company and a similar one west of the house to cover the tables. As early as nine o'clock the old veterans with their families began to arrive and before noon a large crowd had assembled. The forenoon was passed in social chat and a renewal of old acquaintance. At one o'clock the company roll was called by Lt. Jehiel Davidson, and the following old vets responded to their names:

From Tecumseh—Jehiel Davidson, Wm. Smallidge.
Britton—John Britton, Norman H. Ackley, Lyman Hause, John B. Osterhout, Henry Reynolds, Joseph Thackery, Chester A. Linn, Warren Covell.
Dundee—Henry Ball, Philarmon Brewer, Richard Tappan.
Adrian—Joseph S. Lane.
Geneva, Mich.—Michael Biggs.
Whiteford—Marquis Hadley, Jared Ward.
Arabela, Tuscola Co.—Samuel Hosmer.
Cone—Thomas J. Auten.
Blissfield—Joseph K. Crane.
Elkhart, Ind.—Palmer Hamilton.
Adams, Mich.—Lyman OsterHout.
Detroit—John Exelby.
Bridgewater—James K. Quick.
Deerfield—John H. Dunbar.

Most of the comrades were accompanied by their wives or other members of their family, so that the entire company must have numbered about one hundred and fifty. At one o'clock a bountiful dinner was served, to which all did ample justice. The tables presented a very neat appearance, being loaded down with all the substantials and delicacies of the season. Mrs. Ball and the ladies who assisted her were entitled to much credit for the skillful manner in which this part of the program was carried out.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the crowd gathered in the bowery east of the house and listened to an entertaining program of a musical and and literary character. The President of the society, comrade John Britton, presided in his usual happy manner. His faculty of making every one feel at home added much to the enjoyment of the invited guests. The program was presented in the following order:

Singing—Quartette, Messrs. W. H. Pulver and L. S. Rogers, Mrs. Gainsley and Miss Claire Skentelbury.
Prayer by Rev. W. H. Skentelbury.
Singing—Quartette.
Address—Rev. E. Mudge, Britton.
Song—Mrs. Gainsley.
Poem—S. Hosmer.
Song—A. Harding and wife, Tecumseh
Address—S. C. Stacy, Tecumseh.
Address—Rev. C. W. Carrick, Morrice.
Song—A. Harding and wife.

The following resolutions presented by Mrs. Jehiel Davidson were adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our already broken ranks our esteemed comrade Frank Brewer.

Resolved, That we to-day miss his familiar face and response to roll call; we are reminded that one by one Co. F. is passing away, with no recruits to fill vacancies.

Resolved, We would tender our sympathy to our brother comrade, Philarmon Brewer and family, with whom for so many years he found a pleasant home.

May the presence of the Heavenly Father cheer and comfort each member of Co. F. as they hear the final roll call, and be ready to respond, with a bright hope of a reunion that shall never end.

We also remember Mrs. Randall, one who looked with pride on this Co. and had their welfare at heart, and who met with us on the occasion of our first reunion, and we believe is to-day looking from her heavenly home, waiting to welcome them as they gather one by one, at the final reunion, where greetings will be eternal.

MRS. DAVIDSON.
MRS. HARDING. } COM.

The residence of John Britton, at Britton, was selected for next year's meeting.

Officers were elected for the coming year as follows; President, John Britton; secretary, J. K. Crane; treasurer, N. H. Ackley; historian, Richard Tappan.

At the close of the program the crowd began to scatter, but many remained until nearly nightfall. The company feel under special obligations to Mr. Ball for his efforts to make the day a pleasant one, and he succeeded most admirably. Taken altogether the meeting will rank as one of the best reunions of the company yet held.

THE LADIES.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

The sudden departure of Mr. Croker from New York may excite surprise, but it can hardly cause regret.

OUR COMBINATION SCHEME.

We take pleasure in presenting to our patrons this week a new combination coupon scheme, which we believe will be of interest to all classes of readers. Under this arrangement we have something for both the older and younger members of the family, something for both father and mother and children.

THE WORLD'S FAIR PORTFOLIO.

This series, already begun and which has now reached No. 15, will be continued each week until its completion. People who are taking it have no cause to regret it, for it has no superior at the price asked, when both illustrations and descriptive matter are considered. No. 16 will be ready for distribution to-morrow.

THE MIDWAY WORLD.

This will be confined wholly to views of the Midway. It will be issued in twelve parts, containing 20 illustrations each, making 240 in all, and each part will be furnished for Ten Cents when accompanied by a coupon. It is one of the best souvenirs of the great exposition yet published, and will doubtless have an immense sale. No other publishing house has such a novel collection. The plates are genuine half-tones, printed on fine enamelled paper. Each plate is accompanied with a brief description. People who are taking any series of World's Fair pictures should supplement them with the Midway World. No 2 is now ready for distribution.

DEMOREST'S PATTERNS.

Here is something for the ladies. Demorest's cut paper patterns are acknowledged to be the best made. They are sold at 20 to 50 cents each, averaging about 40 cents. Any lady sending us Ten Cents, to simply pay the expense of mailing and handling, with one coupon, will receive one of these patterns free. Any othea pattern that has been or may be published will be sent if requested.

COIN'S HAND BOOK.

This is a pamphlet of fifty pages containing statistics on gold and silver and a treatise on the elementary principles of money. It should be read by every person who wishes to post himself on the money question. One coupon and Ten Cents will buy a copy of this pamphlet. Hand in your dimes and coupons and take your choice from this list.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 21, 1894.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Beautiful June weather.

H. Osborn is home again from a business trip.

Remember the Alumni reunion tomorrow evening.

Lovel J. Walker, of Brooklyn, was in town yesterday.

W. Temple made a business trip to Adrian yesterday.

Clinton will soon have a new postmaster, Mr. A. F. Kishpaugh.

Mrs. C. T. Cummins, of Chicago, is visiting friends in town this week.

The masons are now at work on the third story of the Masonic Temple.

Miss Hannah Hanlan, of Milan, was visiting Tecumseh acquaintances Tuesday.

Messrs. Garlinghouse, Walter Burridge and C. A. Wright went to Jackson Tuesday.

Rev. C. S. Lester, of Eaton Rapids, is home in Raisin. His father is seriously ill.

Miss Lou Hendricks, of Coldwater, is spending a few days with Tecumseh friends.

The Miss Mary Anderson's music class will give a matinee at her residence next Saturday afternoon.

Geo. W. Stacy, of East Buffalo, was at the old home in Newburgh two or three days last week.

The Alumni reunion will be held tomorrow evening at the Baptist church parlors. Program elsewhere.

The Y. M. C. A. Club, of Adrian, will play a game with the T. H. S. club next Saturday on the home grounds.

Arrangements are in progress for a grand gathering at the National C. E. convention to be held at Cleveland July 11 to 15th.

Mrs. Wm. Ross, whose health is very poor, is in Battle Creek visiting his daughters. We hope the change will be a benefit to him.

Mayor Heck has completed the census of the village and it foots up at 1,800. He expects to complete the town by the first of July.

Last Monday while Mrs. Paul Mall was coming down stairs, she missed her footing and fell, breaking her wrist and receiving other bruises.

The Commencement exercises of the graduating class take place this evening at the opera house. A fine program will be presented and a large crowd will be present as a matter of course.

The property of the late Wm. C. Heck will be sold on the 17th day of July next by administrator's sale, including both the steam flouring mills and his residence on Chicago street.

The meeting of the Lenawee County S. S. Association opened this forenoon on Military Square with a good attendance, and a fine program is being rendered this afternoon. It is impossible to prepare a report for to-day's paper.

The Farmers' Social club held their picnic at Wampler's Lake last Saturday. Had a good attendance. The weather, though very sultry in this vicinity, was cool enough at the lake. There was no regular program of exercises given, but the entire day was devoted to recreation and amusements, and was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

A very enjoyable family reunion occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hamilton in Raisin, last Saturday. Mr. Hamilton will be 93 years old in July and his venerable wife is over 90 although in good health. About 50 guests were present, and they spent an all day's visit of it, partaking of a bountiful dinner at noon. Among those present were the following relatives from abroad: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Crossman and family of Jackson; Mrs. Annette Crossman and family of Tecumseh; Dr. J. B. Haynes and family; A. A. Stewart and wife of Dundee; Mrs. Crossman and family of Jackson; Mr. and E. L. Ide with their families of Detroit; C. A. Haynes and family of Adrian; Rev. C. W. Haynes and family of Highland Station; Arthur Haynes and family of Britton; Palmer Haynes and family of Elkhart, Ind.

Robt. McClure went to Clinton Tuesday.

Will Westcott was a Clinton visitor Tuesday.

Chas. Mensing, of Clinton, was here Tuesday.

Rev. E. T. Pierce, of Franklin, was in town Monday.

Miss Grace Stevens, of Clinton, was in Tecumseh last Monday.

Mrs. H. S. Waring and Son are spending a few days in Toledo.

Chauncey Vedder and wife spent Sunday with Franklin friends.

Harry Lee is at home from his Virginia farm for a couple of weeks.

Mrs. C. F. Patterson is spending a week or so with friends in Detroit.

Wm. Hayden is having his residence connected with the city water works.

The T. and F. Farmers' club will hold their picnic at Sand Lake next Saturday.

Several Tecumseh people attended the Union Club picnic at Geo. Holloway's last Friday.

Mrs. F. D. Hillman got home last week from California, where she has been making an extended visit with her son.

A trotting matinee will be held at Bills' Park next week Saturday, June 30. Three or four good races may be expected.

S. W. Temple has lately received a car load of Southern pine from Arkansas. It is beautiful lumber, most of it being dressed for inside work.

Little Margie VanWinkle who has been seriously ill with brain fever, crossed over to the other shore last evening. Funeral Saturday at 2 p.m.

John Walters, of Milan, is in town two or three days. He is running a meat market down there now, and has been engaged in that business seventeen years.

Mrs. Dr. Miller, of Washington, D. C. has arrived in town for her usual summer visit, and will be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Tefft, during the heated term.

Rev. and Mrs. Lucas, of Springfield, Ohio, are spending the present week with N. M. Sutton's family. Mr. Lucas preached at the Friends church last Sunday morning.

We have something for the ladies now in our combination coupon offer. Examine the list elsewhere of Demorest patterns, any of which can be procured for ten cents and a coupon.

Miss Helen E. Anderson arrived home last Saturday from Vassar College, having just completed her second year in that institution. She is delighted with her college experience at Vassar thus far.

Britton will have a big celebration this year on the 4th. It will be a very convenient place for Tecumseh people to go to, who may wish to celebrate the day. A full program of the exercises appears in the Britton items this week.

McClure Bros. delivery team ran away Saturday afternoon, demoralizing the wagon and scattering the groceries along the highway for about twenty rods. Rob McClure, the driver, was considerably shaken up, but he is holding the reins again this week.

Mrs. Maria Everett, died at the residence of her son, Chas. Everett, in Raisin, on Thursday last. She was born in New York state in 1815 and came to Tecumseh in 1854. The funeral services were held at her son's home, where she died, on Saturday afternoon last.

On the east bound freight on the Wabash, at Britton Monday afternoon, a brakeman was taken down with the "small pox." A physician was called aud the caboose placarded and run into the exposition grounds at Detroit as hastily as possible. Later news indicates that it was not a case of small pox after all.

The large auditorium of the Presbyterian church was completely filled Sunday evening with an audience that fully appreciated Rev. C. M. Brown's baccalaureate discourse. It was an able and eloquent sermon, filled with timely admonition to the graduating class. Rev's Varner and Fistler assisted in the services and the choir furnished some special music for the occasion.

The return game between Britton's team and the High School boys was played at the Driving Park, Saturday afternoon. The game proved rather disastrous to our boys, the score standing at the end 18 to 1 in favor of Britton. It was evident from the expression on the Britton's faces that they had not gotten over the defeat at Britton two weeks ago when the boys scored them 18 to 12. A shut-out seemed to be in order up to the last half of the 8th innings, when Tom Owens made the one score. It has not been decided whether the third game will be played or not.

The Whiting Chorus Concert given at the opera house last Friday evening, was entitled to a larger audience, although what the audience lacked in quantity it made up in quality. Most of our best musicians were present, and they were delighted with the entertainment. It was a fine program and beautifully rendered. The excessively hot night and other attractions probably reduced the attendance from what it would otherwise have been. Prof. Seley is an excellent conductor, for both the chorus and operetta showed thorough drill, and the Carnelian quartette added new laurels to their reputation.

John Campbell came over from Ypsilanti last Saturday on his wheel.

There was a very heavy rain storm at Sand Lake last Sunday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Rossman, of Jackson, are visiting in this vicinity.

Rev. E. Mudge, of Britton, called at the HERALD office on Tuesday.

Charles Crossman, who is now on the police force in Detroit, is in town a day or two.

Mrs. R. B. House, of Springfield, Ohio, is spending a brief season with friends in Tecumseh and Raisin.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Beckford, of New York, are guests of Homer Bickford's in Raisin this week.

The Concert given by Miss Anderson's pupils will consist of music for three pianos, solos and violins, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Knapp, who have been living in Adrian recently, have concluded to return to Tecumseh.

Miss Kate Anderson, who has been visiting her sister in New York City for the past six months, returned home last Saturday.

Mrs. Geo. N. Stacy, of Elgin, Ill., arrived in town last Thursday and will spend several days among her old Tecumseh acquaintances.

Tickets for "Pupil's Concert" on sale at Adamson's. Reserved seats to be had without extra charge, on sale June 28 and 29. Tickets 25cts.

Miss Manie Monaghan returned Tuesday from an extended visit with Mrs. Irv Finch of Adrian, and will be the guest of Mrs. Judge Stacy for a few days.

"A Public Recital." Preparations are being made for one by Miss Mary Anderson's pupils, to be given Friday, June 29th, in Sutton's opera house, at 8 p. m.

Lavern Ide and wife and Edgar Ide and wife, spent Saturday and Sunday at the old home. They came out to attend the Hamilton family reunion in Raisin last Saturday.

J. D. Arner, of Ridgewey, has just finished ten years of faithful service as correspondent of the HERALD, and no man among all our correspondents has done better work.

Nearly 300 performers will take part in the great "Last Days of Pompeii" performances at Fort Wayne during July, and the grand stand seats 10,000 spectators comfortably.

Rev. F. C. Fistler, who has been pastor of the Friends church for nearly two years, will resign this month. We hope he may conclude to reconsider his determination and remain.

The commencement exercises of Raisin Valley Seminary will be held tomorrow, Friday, beginning at 10 o'clock a.m. There is a class of nine graduates this year and the program bids fair to be much more interesting and elaborate than usual. There will doubtless be a large crowd in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wilson, of Detroit, were at N. M. Sutton's over Sunday. Mrs. Wilson left Tuesday for Cape Cod to spend the summer at the sea shore, and she leaves the younger children with her mother, Mrs. Sutton. Mrs. Stoeple, of Detroit, will also spend the heated term at Cape Cod.

From Tuesday to Saturday of the next week (June 26th to the 30th) Miller Ruptnre Treatment Co., of Detroit, will be represented at the Lilley House, Tecumseh. The Company do one thing only, and do it well. Their treatment, wherever known, is endorsed by leading physicians. Investigation and trial free to all.

The summer school in Tecumseh for teachers, which will begin July 2d. and continue five weeks under the direction of Messrs. H. W. Daniels of Clinton, and L. M. Kellogg of Tecumseh, bids fair to be well attended, as forty have signified their intention to be present. Classes in all the branches for the several grades of certificates will be organized and the work conducted on the topical plan, supplemented largely by personal instruction. Undoubtedly the teachers in the county will find it an excellent opportunity to prepare for examination as well as for their duties in the school room.

Who will be the next at the opening of the fall term of our public schools to introduce the Flag Salute? On June 6th Miss Maud Hodges invited Beers Post and Corps to attend the raising of the flag at her school in District, No. 2, Franklin. Her school did justice to all their exercises which were complete. The history of the salute and some account of Col. Geo. T. Balch, who was the originator of the same, was given by Mrs. A. S. Hanley. An address well rendered by Rev. Williams, of Tipton. A paper read on Patriotism, by Mrs. A. B. Smith. The exercises were enjoyed by all.

The Alumni Reunion will be held at the Baptist church parlors to-morrow evening, beginning at eight o'clock. The following literary program will be presented:

Prayer—Rev. Frank Fistler.
Music.
Welcome to the Class of '94.—Prof. Kellogg.
Response—Philip M. V. Keusch.
Music.
Oration—A. O. Howard.
Music.
History, Class of '85—Rose Hendershot.
History, Class of '86—W. C. Burridge.
Music.

Refreshments will be served by the B. Y. P. U. to be followed by the usual toasts and responses, Thos. H. Temple of Ridgeway acting as toastmaster.

Mrs. Samuel Shutt spent Sunday in Clinton.

John Southwick visited his parents in Milan Saturday.

Walter Heck and wife visited Adrian friends over Sunday.

Mrs. L. I. Bidwell visited friends in Adrian last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander spent Saturday at Sand Lake.

Mrs. Horatio Keyser is the guest of Adrian friends this week.

ELLIS' TURN.
The Attorney General Brings Witnesses in His Defense.

Their Evidence for the Most Part Aims at Disproving the Testimony of Wood, the Chief Witness for the Prosecution.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

LANSING, June 14.—Robert L. Gage, the last witness for the prosecution in the case against ex-Attorney General Ellis, corroborated material portions of the story told by ex-Clerk Wood, the principal witness for the people. The defense, as outlined by T. E. Barkworth, will be that Wood's story is entirely false. The defense will repudiate Healey's story so far as it connects Ellis with the crime, but will claim that Healey made all the changes at Bessemer and conceived the idea himself, believing that if he could show a big vote for the amendment in Gogebic county legislators who were greatly interested in its passage would be more favorably disposed toward a bill affecting both the county and himself which was then before the legislature.

Marcus Peterson, ex-clerk of the board of state auditors, denied point blank ever having the conversation with Wood to which the latter swore. On cross-examination Peterson was asked if he was not short in his accounts when he retired from office. The witness grew excited and appealed to the court for protection, and was assured that when improper questions were asked him he would be protected. He was finally forced to admit that after leaving the service of the state he was informed that there were certain vouchers of his for vouchers that had not been expended.

Ex-Gov. Winans testified that Ellis never borrowed any returns from him, and that, to the best of his recollection, Judge Haine was not recommended for appointment until after the bill creating the circuit passed the legislature.

LANSING, June 15.—On Thursday nearly a dozen witnesses who ex-Clerk Wood in his damaging story against ex-Attorney General Ellis said had knowledge of facts related by him were sworn, and denied all knowledge of such facts. The force of these denials was broken in two instances when the fact was brought out that the witnesses were under indictment for conspiracy in connection with the same amendment frauds. An expert in handwriting gave it as his opinion that the alterations Wood claims to have made are not in his handwriting.

LANSING, June 16.—Experts were sworn in the trial of Attorney General Ellis for forgery at Mason Friday to show that it was Frank A. Healey, of Ironwood, who made the changes in the Gogebic county return, for the forgery of which Ellis is charged. The theory of the prosecution is that W. H. S. Wood made the alterations at the attorney general's directions. The testimony of the experts was not satisfactory, but on the whole they were of the opinion that the writing was Healey's.

The deposition of ex-Secretary of State Daniel E. Soper, who is now in California, was read in evidence Friday. Soper deposes that the Gogebic returns were changed before they were received at his office. An affidavit of Frank A. Healey, made four months ago, setting forth that he had changed the writing in the Gogebic return at Bessemer, was read. It flatly contradicts the statements of Healey made before the grand jury and upon the present trial.

MRS. RICE WINS.
Her Father-in-Law Must Pay $3,000 for Interfering with Family Affairs.

KALAMAZOO, June 16.—The suit of Mrs. Julia Rice against her father-in-law, Perley H. Rice, a wealthy farmer of this county, for $10,000 damages for alienating the affections of her husband, W. L. Rice, was decided in the circuit court Friday, the jury rendering a verdict of $3,000 for the plaintiff. The wife was a Catholic, and when she returned to the church after marriage her husband's people, who were Protestants, made her leave the house, and her husband had since neither lived with her nor contributed to her support.

Caught an Adrian Robber.

ADRIAN, June 18.—Joshua Milton (colored) was arrested Sunday on a charge of burglary and robbery. Of late many stores and residences have been robbed and officers have been baffled in attempts to detect the depredator. Milton was run out of a building about midnight and escaped, but officers followed clews till they secured their man. He rooms in a house occupied by another colored man. After Milton's arrest his rooms were searched and large quantities of silks, canned goods, shoes and cigars were found. The property was easily identified by McConnell, Betz and others whose places had been raided.

PROMISES SUCCESS.
Preparations for Opening the Summer School at Ann Arbor.

ANN ARBOR, June 16.—The university summer school will open here July 9, and will continue for six weeks or, until August 19. Twenty-five members of the literary faculty will have charge of the instruction in the various courses. Special lectures will be delivered by President Angell and Profs. Carhart, Thomas, Demmon, Trueblood, Kelsey and Hinsdale. Already several hundred letters have been received inquiring concerning the school, among them letters from persons residing in Louisiana, Georgia, Kentucky, Connecticut and Missouri. Seventy per cent. of the inquiries have come from teachers. It is probable that a number of regular university students will stay here to take work in the summer school, as credit will be given towards a degree for all courses completed. There will probably be more than 100 students in attendance at the beginning of the session, and there is every prospect of a successful outcome of the new venture in university work.

SUICIDE THE CLIMAX.
William Henshaw Tries to Murder His Family, Then Kills Himself.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 16.—William Henshaw, a drunken painter, tried to kill his wife and children, fatally shot his father-in-law, Jacob Sutton, and then blew his own brains out. Mrs. Henshaw separated from her husband on account of cruel treatment a couple of years ago at Rock Island, Ill., and came here with her seven children. Henshaw followed her and has annoyed her more or less ever since. Recently Mrs. Henshaw instituted divorce proceedings, and it is believed this fact provoked the tragedy. At 8 a. m. Henshaw went to Sutton's house on West street and shot the old man twice in the head. He then crossed the street to his wife's house and tried to break in. Failing in this he fired two shots at the woman and her children, and then sat down on the porch and blew out his own brains. Sutton, who is 70 years old, will die.

FOUND TWO VICTIMS.
Lightning Strikes a House Undergoing Repairs at Menominee.

Workmen Who Had Sought Shelter Underneath the Building Suffer from the Stroke—Two of Them Are Killed and Three Injured.

SLAIN BY A THUNDERBOLT.

MENOMINEE, June 18.—About 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon four men were engaged in raising on jack screws a house belonging to John Anderson, in the northern suburb of this city known as Finntown, when a storm came up quite unexpectedly and the men sought shelter in the basement of the building, sitting quite near to one another on the blockings of the jacks. They had not been long under the shelter when a blinding flash of lightning accompanied by an almost simultaneous crash of thunder gave warning of the electrical danger in the air. The house was struck by the bolt and set on fire. An alarm was immediately turned in and the fire department promptly responded. A glance into the basement disclosed to the foremost fireman the apparently lifeless bodies of the four men, and the report that the four men had been killed by lightning was soon circulated around town. Medical assistance was soon on the ground and after the usual tests and methods of resuscitation it was found that only two of them were dead, Nels Bergstrom and Peter Grignon. Peter Peterson still retained a spark of vitality and there are some hopes of his recovery. The fourth man, Swen Bergstrom, a brother of one of the killed, was severely shocked, but is now entirely out of danger.

MINERS TO STRIKE.
Several Thousand Men Will Quit in the Gogebic Mines.

IRONWOOD, June 18.—At the meeting of the local branch of the American Federation of Labor Sunday afternoon the miners decided to enter upon a strike at once. The meeting was in session all the afternoon and the greatest of enthusiasm prevailed. The committee appointed last Wednesday to wait on the mining officials reported that the demands of the men would not be granted, and after the matter was discussed in half a dozen languages the strike was decided upon by almost a unanimous vote. During the afternoon the streets of the city were thronged with miners who are not members of the union but who sympathize strongly with the miners for higher wages. There was a mass meeting at the city park at night and the attendance was very large.

The mines in this city which will be affected are the Ashland, Norrie, East Norrie, Aurora, Pabst and Newport. Over 2,000 men are employed at these properties. The union here is said to have a membership of about 1,400, but it is expected that all the miners in the city will become members in the course of a few days. Delegates from the other mining camps of this district were in the city to-day and state the men at the Eureka, Colby, Tilden, Cary, Montreal, Ironbelt and Atlantic mines will also join in the movement and about 3,500 men will then be out.

An officer of the local union has received a letter from Samuel Gompers promising aid from the American Federation of Labor. He is quoted as having declared that the national organization would support 2,000 men for a year.

The union demands $2 per day for all men employed underground and $1.65 for surface laborers. Following is the average scale of wages paid at present: Shift bosses, $1.75 per day; trammers, 95 cents to $1.25; brakemen, $1.25; skilled miners, $1.30; surface laborers, $1; pumpmen, $1.25; head engineers, $1.50.

MICHIGAN TOWN DAMAGED.
Escanaba Swept by a Tornado, Which Is Accompanied by Hail.

ESCANABA, June 16.—A tornado, accompanied by rain and hail, passed over this place Friday afternoon, carrying destruction with it. Windows all over the city were blown in and signs wrenched from their fastenings. Trees were torn up by the roots. One of the Northwestern coal derricks was blown down and ruined. It is reported that Cook and Whittby's circus tents at Gladstone were badly damaged. This was the worst storm of the kind that ever passed over this city.

Smashed a Record.

DETROIT, June 17.—Until Saturday the accepted 25-mile record for the Belle Isle course was 1:11:59, made by W. B. Hurlburt, of this city, but Saturday afternoon saw that record smashed all to flinders. In fact, five of the forty-two starters broke it, and three of them by over two minutes. W. W. Grant covered the distance in 1:09:36 1-5. The track is short 5 miles and was measured again, the finish being a half mile below the start.

Dies of Apoplexy on a Street Car.

MARQUETTE, June 16.—Capt. Smith Moore was stricken with apoplexy while riding on a street car here Friday morning and died almost immediately. Capt. Moore has been identified with lake transportation interests for over thirty years. He was a high degree mason and was also a prominent odd fellow.

Stabbed Five Times.

BAY CITY, June 18.—John Leach was stabbed five times in the left lung by Patrick McGibbons in a drunken fight early Sunday morning. He will probably die. Leach's friends assaulted McGibbons and he is too badly injured to permit of his arrest.

Drowned.

JACKSON, June 18.—John Wood, of this city, aged 18, was drowned in Vandercook's lake Sunday afternoon. He could not swim, and waded beyond his depth.

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.
Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bath-rooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soo," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. Clinton Column.

CLINTON MICH., JUNE 21, 1894.

Mrs. Ham Niblack returned home Tuesday.

Sam Sarvey, of Macon, was in town Sunday.

Frank Muir returned from his Detroit visit Friday night.

The Brewster girls are entertaining friends from outside.

Mrs. Case, of Chicago, is visiting D. S. Alvord and family.

The social at Mrs. J. S. Kies' to-day is being largely attended.

Patrick Murphy visited his daughter Fannie in Adrian last week.

Sam Larzelere came over from Grass Lake the last of the past week.

The special meeting of the Eastern Star chapter was very pleasant.

Minor Strang and wife, of Flat Rock, are making Clinton friends a visit.

Patrick Noon still remains very low with but little hopes of his recovery.

Mrs. L. H. Ames, of Ypsilanti, came over here Saturday, for a few days stay.

Mr. Marsteller has begun the work of excavating for his new dwelling house.

Chas. and Fred Kensler, of Manchester, were in town Monday on business.

Several of the band boys played for the roller skaters at Wampler's Lake last Saturday evening.

Chas. Embler and wife, Rose Alvord and Clarence Mills returned home from Wampler's Lake last Sunday evening.

Hiram Ovenshire, of Bellvue, called on his nephew, Ham Niblack, last Sunday.

Robbie Woodward returned home from South Bend, Ind., the last of the week.

The usual St. Johns festival will occur at Masonic Hall, Saturday evening, June 23.

L. J. Leek and Ella entertained their sister, Mrs. Myra Aldrich, of Adrian, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Nase are entertaining their daughter, Mrs. C. C. Fisk and son, of Detroit.

E. R. Smith and S. W. Demuth talk of putting down flag stone walks in front of their stores.

Miss Emma Hause, of Britton, visited her brother Irve, and attended commencement and alumni exercises.

A few of the Clinton Maccabees went to Macon last Sunday to attend the anniversary meeting of the Macon tent.

Little Charlie Semark, son of Ed. J. Semark, was kicked by a colt last Thursday and is in a very critical condition.

Charlie Mensing contemplates running a wagon with oil and gasoline next week. He has already secured many customers.

Late news from Washington says that there will soon be a change in the Clinton postoffice and that A. F. Kishpaugh is the coming man.

Will H. Beehler, the new inspector of cloths at the woolen mill, arrived last Saturday and began his labors Monday. He comes from Auburn, N. Y.

Geo. Sanford was one of the drawing cards at an Episcopal entertainment at Brooklyn last Thursday evening. His mouth organ solos were heartily encored.

The usual June social of the Baptist society, which for years has been held at the residence of Justus Watson, was held at N. P. Watson's. It was largely attended.

Michael Noon, who died in Jackson county last Monday from cancer of the stomach, was a former resident of this vicinity. His remains were brought here for interment yesterday.

It is expected there will be a fine game of ball Saturday between our club and the Chelsea club. Chelsea has a strong team and our club has some new material which will add to its work.

Moses Bartlett came home Tuesday from Auburn, N. Y., where he has been visiting friends for the past week. He lived in that section in his boyhood days and finds that great changes have taken place since his residence there.

Mrs. Eva Cooley, who has opened a novelty store in St. John's building, keeps a full assortment of goods in the novelty line, and is getting finely started in her business. Clinton needs a store of this character, and Mrs. Cooley will doubtless receive the liberal patronage which her enterprise deserves.

High School Commencement.

Thursday evening, June 14th, the graduating exercises of the Clinton High School were held at the town hall. Long before the hour stated had arrived the hall was crowded to its utmost capacity. The stage never presented so fine a picture at an occasion like this. The blending of the class colors (pink and white) overhead was very artistic. The walls back of the stage were made beautiful by curtains and pictures; the floor nicely carpeted with black and white rugs here and there; at either side of the stage pyramids of potted plants in bloom; in front of the stage tables filled with floral gifts for the class; overhead the class motto "To-night we launch—where shall we anchor."

The class, numbering fourteen, was the largest ever graduated from the school and was equally divided as to sex. Shortly before eight o'clock Wirt Rowland took his seat at the piano and began playing a fine march to the strains of which the class marched in by couples followed by the professor and corps of teachers and took their respective places on the stage, completing a picture of rare loveliness. As time and space will not allow a full report of all the essays and orations which did credit to the writers we will speak more of the history and prophecy, as our readers may be more interested in these.

After a few very nice remarks by Prof. Daniels, J. D. Hause and Miss Laura Clark gave a fine instrumental duet and Rev. T. H. Warner followed with an invocation.

Jean B. Marsteller then stepped forward and in a very pretty manner gave the salutatory.

Willis R. Barnes followed with a fine oration entitled "Poverty and Ambition," which showed thought and careful preparation. While he was delivering it a fuse wire burned out and the hall was left for a few moments in darkness which added to his embarassment.

Jennie L. Hause then gave a vocal solo, "The Charming Marguerite."

Carrie A. Alvord's essay, "Theatre of Life," was given in a voice that could be heard by all. She showed that life was divided into three acts—school life, life's school and eternity.

Charles S. Eddy's oration, "Life is Short," was well written.

The instrumental solo, "La Truite," by Miss Clyde Marsteller was well received.

Class History (a) was then given by Winnie Waterhouse. It was well written and nicely given. From it we learn that it is the largest class to graduate: two wear glasses (Maude King and John Tuttle). Their birthplaces and ages are as follows: Grace M. Corwin, born in Grass Lake in 1877; Henry U. Abbott in Green Springs in 1876; Tessie L. Carroll in Clinton in 1877; Grant T. Davis in Franklin in 1877; Maude B. King in Bridgewater in 1877; Charles S. Eddy in Manchester township in 1876, and John L. Tuttle, Jr. in Clinton in 1876, and from History (b) by Harry U. Abbott which was well written and nicely delivered we learn that Minnie Waterhouse was born in Flint in 1877; Carrie A. Alvord in the town of Manchester in 1874; Emilie B. Tagg in Clinton in 1877; Will R. Barnes in Franklin in 1876; Edith K. Cotton in Macon in 1876; Jean B. Marsteller in Clinton in 1877, and George Taylor in Franklin in 1773. The youngest 17 years and the oldest 21 years. Average weight 122 lbs.

Mrs. M. C. Reeves then gave a vocal solo in a charming manner.

Geo. E. Taylor then followed with an oration entitled "An Evil Creeping In," which was a masterly production stamping him a close student and sound reasoner.

Maude B. King's essay, "The Book," was well written and nicely delivered.

St. Ambrose Society, consisting of Grace Stevens, Jennie Hause, Laura Clark, Clyde Marsteller, Mrs. J. T. Clark and Mrs. M. C. Reeves with J. D. Hause at piano gave a fine vocal chorus.

The class poem by Edith K. Cotton was a gem and delivered very effectively.

Then came prophecy (a) by Emilie B. Tagg which was admirably written and well delivered. Taking a look into the future we find Maude King a teacher of fine reputation; John L. Tuttle, Jr., a physician in Clinton, he taking his father's place; Grant Davis a professor, Charles Eddy officiating in a cathedral in India; Carrie Alvord organist and musical director in the same church; Tessie Carroll in Leipsic, Germany, and Grace Corwin queen of a happy home.

Prophecy (b) by John L. Tuttle, Jr. was as ingeniously written as any we ever heard. He brought to his aid the Egyptian fortune teller in the streets of Cairo at the World's Fair, who, with his pencil drew pictures and scenes from which we learn that George Taylor and Harry Abbott are tonsorial artists in the flourishing city of Tipton; Emilie Tagg principal lady teacher in the Clinton high school; Willis Barnes a minister of great renown; Winnie Waterhouse an organist of great reputation; Edith Cotton at the head of the Cotton training school for teachers, and Jean Marsteller at the head of a large marble works. John's manner was easy and graceful and his delivery fine.

After a vocal duet by Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Reeves, Tessie Carroll gave a well written essay in a charming manner from "To-night we Launch" followed by Grace Corwin with an essay entitled "Where Shall We Anchor?" This was a fit companion piece to Bessie's and all felt that the class motto could not have been placed in better hands. While Grace was speaking the lights went out again and she was obliged to sit down until this difficulty was removed.

After a cornet duet by Messrs. Rogers and Greenleaf the Valedictory was given by Grant T. Davis. This was a fit conclusion to the class's efforts.

The male quartette, composed of Messrs. Fisk, Katner and Alexander Brothers, then sang, after which W. S. Kimball after a few well chosen words of congratulations, caution and encouragement, presented the diplomas. This was followed by the class song. The words were by Edith Cotton and the music by Wirt Rowland, which the class gave very nicely. After the benediction by Rev. C. M. Stout, the class received the congratulations of their friends.

The Alumni Reunion.

The alumni exercises at the town hall Friday evening were largely attended and proved very interesting. A. J. Kishpaugh, president of the alumni, announced the program.

First came an instrumental solo by Lizzie Tate. Then the invocation by Rev. D. H. Ramsdell.

Following this was the history of the alumni by Mrs. C. S. Burroughs. To give an alumni history is no small task where it covers so many years but Mrs. Burroughs was equal to it and held the audience as if by magic, from beginning to end. Her introduction was very fine and throughout the history it was interspersed with trite quotations and witticisms that made it charming to listen to, delivered as it was in her inimitable manner.

From it the following is gleaned. The first to graduate from the Clinton high school was Laura J. Haggart in 1877. She is a teacher of marked ability and for the past eight years she has been at Cambridge, Ill. In 1878 there were three in the class—Susan Nase, Alta Silvers and Mary Sinclair. These have all married. Susie married Cassius Fisk and lives in Detroit. Alta married W. D. Van Tuyle, and Mary married J. R. Blanchard, both of whom live in Clinton. Of the class of 1879, Carlton Burton is a fine musician and a musical director whose services are in great demand among the great opera companies. Ida Brown is in Saginaw and Frances Matthews a teacher at Menominee. Class of 1880—Ida McConnell and Genevieve Lancaster after teaching a number of years, married, the former a Mr. Miller and lives in Chicago; the latter married C. S. Burroughs and lives here. Archer Crane married and is a farmer, but still teaches winters. There was no class in 1881. Class of 1882 consisted of Ella Bartlett, Charles F. Clark, William W. Eagan, Kate Mead, Ola A. Sinclair and Milton Ward. Of these Ella and Charlie married and reside here; William Eagen is a professor of languages. Kate, after teaching some years, married Fred Wainwright and lives near Fowlerville; Ola A. Sinclair is a druggist at Ishpeming and lately became a benedict; Milton Ward married and lives at Morenci where he has a position on the L. S. railway. Class of 1883, George McIlwain and Mabel Guiwits. George is a minister in the M. E. church, at present in Boston fitting himself for a missionary; Mabel died in 1888. Class of 1884 consisted of Ella Swift who is a teacher now at Butte City, Montana. May Morey is teaching at Brooklyn. Ella Wellwood taught several terms, then married a farmer and died in 1892. Class of 1885 consisted of Ansel J. Kishpaugh who married and lives here, Dwight Hause is a fine musician, still single and teaches music; George McConnell is married, lives here and holds a position in the woolen mill; Maggie Biggins is with a publishing house in New York. Class of 1886, Minnie Martin married after teaching a while and lives on a farm north of town. Grace Rowland died a few months after graduating, and James Eagan is in the boot and shoe business at Grand Rapids. Class of 1887. Minnie Hess is living in Illinois. Charles Becker married and is a commercial traveler and lives at Ypsilanti. Ethel Hines became a skilled stenographer but died a few months since. Lizzie Dillingham is at home with her parents. Aggie Kirk lives in Jackson. Esther Matthews and Bertha Taylor are at home. Frank Bostedor died soon after graduating. Maggie Murphy is a fine teacher. Cora Van Gieson married and died a few months since, and Flavius Knight is at Ann Arbor fitting himself for an M. D. There was no class in 1888. Class of 1889. Clyde Marsteller graduated in music at a college at St. Thomas, Canada, and is teaching music here. Gertie Millspaugh is at home. Class of 1890. Grace Martin is a dressmaker. Minnie Perry is a stenographer and has a position at St. Augustine, Florida. Kittie Biggins is in New York taking and giving instruction in music. Class of 1891. Nellie Martin, Clara Bush and Minnie Humphrey are teaching. Geo. Tagg is with his father in the shoe store. Willie Waterhouse is with E. W. Freese & Son. Class of 1892. Edward Miller and Charles Allen are fitting themselves for teachers. Emma Cotton is in the postoffice at Macon and Frank Becker is in Chicago. Class of 1893. Alice Halladay is at Albion College. Florence Green is at home. Clare Kimball is shipping clerk at the woolen mill. Grace Collins and Mamie Wilson are teaching.

After the history came a vocal solo by Minnie Humphrey, then an essay, "Progress of Humanity," by Florence Greene. This was a literary gem and demonstrates that she should devote her talents to this field of labor, viz: literary work. Her delivery was faultless.

The recitation, "Money Musk" by Miss Nellie Martin was finely given with a piano accompaniment by Minnie Humphrey.

Then followed an instrumental solo by Clyde Marsteller.

Miss Grace Collins who was to give a poem, not being able to be present, Miss Edith Cotton kindly consented to read her poem of the evening before.

After a vocal solo by Kittie Biggins, Edward Miller followed with an oration entitled "Forces Make Destiny" which was clear, concise and logical, showing the writer to be a clear reasoner.

Miss Laura Haggart's welcome to the class of '94 was cordial and witty and just what one would expect from her.

Grant Davis' response was brief but to the point.

After an instrumental duet by Lizzie Tate and Minnie Humphrey and the benediction by Rev. D. H. Ramsdell, the members of the alumni, graduates and invited guests repaired to the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Van Tuyle where the banquet was served, the tables being placed on the verandas and lawn, presenting a beautiful sight, the whole being illuminated with flags, bunting and Chinese lanterns. The floral designs, furnished by the new members, added to the scene.

When all had partaken there followed the usual toasts and responses, after which the officers were elected for the coming year: Geo. Tagg, President; Minnie Humphrey, Sec'y and Treas.

A Means out of the Difficulty?

Any strain or bending of the back for for any length of time leaves it in a weakened condition. A means out of the difficulty is always handy and cheap. Do as was done by Mr. Herman Schwaygel, Aberdeen, S. D., who says that for several years he suffered with a chronic stitch in the back, and was given up by doctors. Two bottles of St. Jacobs oil completely cured him. Also Mr. John Lucus, Elnora, Ind., says, that for several years he suffered with pains in the back, and one bottle of St. Jacobs Oil cured him.

Obituary.

Died, in Ridgeway, April 11, 1894, at the age of 17 years, of consumption, Lida, the second daughter of S. P. and Althea Smith.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF LIDA.

Dry your tears, fond parents,
For Lida is at rest,
Safe in the arms of Jesus,
Clasped to his loving breast.

Her short, sad life is ended,
Her earthly trials o'er;
She is numbered 'mong the angels
On yonder shining shore.

You fain would wish to join her,
But that now cannot be;
You must only look to Jesus,
The rock higher than thee.

She seemed so sweet, so good, so pure,
To our admiring eyes,
We never thought the precious fruit
Was ripening for the skies.

And when at last the death stroke came,
So swift, so sure, so true,
The hearts that held her here so dear
Were almost broken too.

Sister, think not that dear Lida
Now lies within the tomb;
She never knew its shadow—
She never felt its gloom.

Only her form is lying
Beneath the earthly sod,
Her soul, the part most precious,
Is now in heaven with God.

A happy change for Lida,
To leave this house of clay;
Her spirit, like the caged bird
Soared joyfully away.

Be faithful, loving brothers
Till God shall bid you come
To meet that angel sister
In Heaven, that glorious home.

Put by her treasures, her empty chair,
Fold up the garments she used to wear,
Kiss her and leave her, our heart's delight,
In Jesus' arms she sleeps to-night.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Our weather is cooler.

Miss Edith Crane, of Dundee, is visiting at Miss Martha Ackley's.

Haying is the work of the present, and our farmers are very busy.

The W. R. C. will sell ice cream the 4th, on Britton's lawn. The members please be present at 10 a. m.

All entries for Fourth of July games must be made by 9 a. m. of the Fourth. Call at Lee Bros. for particulars.

Struck out by Hinkley 2; by Eastlick 6. Batteries, Eastlick and Lowe, Hinkley and Lewis. Umpire, Britton.

Mrs. Vreeland, who has been spending several weeks with her sick sister, Mrs. S. Kniffin, has returned to her home at St. Johns, Mich.

Mrs. C. E. Watson, who has been spending several weeks with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Mudge, left for Indiana, on Friday last.

The base ball teams for July 4th will be Adrian and Detroit in the a. m. and the winners and Britton in the p. m. Good games are expected.

Mr. Thomas and A. J. Lee and Mrs. Chas. Dubois attended the funeral of their neice and cousin, Miss Roxy Millspaugh, of Belleville, last Monday.

There will be a dance at Exelby's hall, on the afternoon and evening of the 4th of July. Good music has been secured and a good dance may be expected.

Mrs. Emma Price, wife of E. Price, departed this life at her home, two and one half miles east of Britton, on Monday night, after a lingering illness of several months. Funeral was held at the family residence, on Wednesday, at 10 a. m.

Rev. W. H. Skentelbury, pastor of the Dundee Congregational church, will exchange pulpits with Rev. E. Mudge, next Sunday. He will preach at the Christain Union church morning and evening. The paster solicits a general attendance.

Our base ball team played their third game with Lake Ridge last Saturday, resulting in a score of 10 to 26 in favor of Britton. Below is the score:

Innings—	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Britton—	1	1	1	5	4	0	10	4	0	—26
L. Ridge-	3	3	3	0	0	1	0	1	0	—11

Last Tuesday evening Prof. H. E. Fink, of Tecumseh, called on us to make arrangemenfs for giving us a lucture, which will be given Thursday evening, July 12th. Mr. Fink, after being introduced to the large part of our citizens, consented to give us a trial speech, so after a good congregation had arranged themselves in Lee Bros. store, the professor first gave us a few vocal solos, and then a few extracts from his wide renowned speech, "Social Evils and their Remedies." He was applauded at every rest, and we think his speech, when given July 12th will be largely attended, as we can speak very highly of the sample which he has given us.

Last Friday evening we had the pleasure of attending the 2d. Annual Commencement exercises of the Britton Union school which was held at Exelby's Hall, Although the weather was extremely warm, the hall was packed to overflowing and the exercises held the audience spell bound. The stage was nicely decorated with flowers and ferns and draped with pink and white, which was the class colors. The graduates were two in number, Misses Gripton and Rupp. They did themselves credit in the way they recited their essays which they had so thoroughly rehearsed under the supervision of Prof. Collins. The violin solos rendered by Miss Bailey of Macon, was another fine feature of the entertainment

MANCHESTER MATTERS.

Mrs. J. D. Corey has been quite sick.

Miss Grace Smith will spend her vacation in Saline.

Miss Lucy Poucher returned to her home in Norvell, Monday.

Willie Martin is recovering from a severe attack of the measles.

Mrs. Hattie Lawrence is visiting friends in Toledo and Dayton, Ohio.

Four rattlesnakes were killed recently by Mat Elmis, on the marsh west of town.

E. B. English and his sister, Miss Nettie, visited Tecumseh one day last week.

Miss Florence Kellam, of Chelsea, visited at Isaac Hall's last Thursday and Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Comstock, of Grass Lake, attend the graduating exercises here.

S. W. Clarkson and family drove over from Ann Arbor Saturday, to visit at L. D. Watkins.

Miss Iva Rull will spend the summer vacation with her mother in Rives, Jackson county.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Field, of Tecumseh, attended the Alumni reunion last Friday evening.

Prospects for the organization of a German-American bank in Manchester, are encouraging.

Miss Cora English, of Jonesville, came here last Thursday to spend some time at her uncle's, J. G. English.

Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Keck rejoice in the possession of a little son, who arrived at their home Friday last.

J. D. Bauer and family drove to Tecumseh to attend the funeral of the little daughter of A. VanWinkle, Saturday.

Albert English attended the Democratic county convention at Ann Arbor, last Thursday, and goes as a delegate to the state convention, at Grand Rapids, this week Thursday.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Farmers have commenced haying.

Fourth of July next week Wednesday.

Mrs. John Ousterhout is on the sick list at present.

Commissioner Henry Barnes went to Addison, Monday.

D. W. Smith and J. D. Arner were in Clinton, Thursday

F. E. Rocklington was in Toledo, on business, Tuesday.

Attorney Randall, of Dundee, was in the village, Tuesday.

Wheat is being taken in at the elevator at 53c and oats at 43c.

Mattie Rappleye returned, Saturday, from Dundee, after a few day's stay.

J. F. and T. H. Temple and Dr. D. W. Loree were in Adrian, Monday, on business.

Winnie Barrett and Addie Sherman closed their spring terms of School, last Friday.

Will McCrimmon arrived Tuesday evening, for his vacation visit with friends in the village.

Hon. Grant Fellows and Dr. R. H. Nelson, of Hudson, were in the village last week Wednesday.

Kittie Clark assisted in the musical part of the commencement exercises at Britton, Friday evening.

Remember the class concert, given by pupils of Miss Mary Anderson, at Sutton's Opera House, Tecumseh, on Friday night. Admission, 25c.

Rev. James Wright, of Britton, occupied the sacred desk, Sunday morning, and the Epworth League furnished a very interesting literary program, Rev. Cansfield being absent.

Chas. Pocklington, south of the village, on the Ridge 1 1-2 miles, has 15 acres of heavy grass, which he will sell standing. Any person wishing to buy, would do well to call and see him.

There was a good attendance at the Edison Phonograph Concert, given at the church, Tuesday evening, by Claude Bennett, of Plymouth. All who listened to the program were highly entertained, and speak of the concert in the highest terms. The L. C. S. realized nearly $7.00 for their share of the receipts. They desire to express their appreciation to the young ladies who did such good work in advertising and selling tickets.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Everybody is coming to Holloway, 4th of July evening.

Dr. Begel and family are in Chicago this week; he is attending to eye specialty business.

Wm. Doty, Geo. Holloway, Allen Kelly and A. D. Macham are putting in silos, and it looks as though the cornhuskers will fare slim for a job this fall.

Misses Ada Linn and Rhoba Arner, of Ridgeway, were visitors in this village last week, and while here sold several tickets for the Edison Phonograph Concert, to be held at Ridgeway in the near future.

Remember the Y. P. S. C. E. will give an entertainment, 4th of July evening, entitled the "Festival of Days." They will also run a refreshment stand during the evening, with an exhibition of fireworks after the entertainment.

Last Sunday postmaster Florence entertained an assembly of friends and relatives numbering about fourteen. Mr. and Mrs. John VanVleet and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Culbertson and daughter, Mr. M. M. Florence and wife, Mr. Thomas Florence and wife, of Ridgeway, and M. Mont Florence, of Adrian.

Messrs. Jas. Preston, John Moore, Maurice Nay and Misses Carrie Winship, Agnes and Hattie Still inspected the creamery, Sunday, and were initiated in the mysteries of butter working by machine process. They sampled the buttermilk and expressed themselves well pleased with this "infant home industry."

The charms of the water in Raisin river has lured many from this place to its fond embrace, to enjoy a swim. Last week while a party were in the water, one of their horses broke loose from its hitching and proceeded to frolic some himself. His frolic will cost the owner a sum of repairs on that new buggy that was nearly demolished.

PENTECOST POINTERS.

The ice cream social at L. Daniel's was a success.

Mrs. Smith German has been quite sick for a week past.

Miss Bertha Fish is the happy owner of a new Packard organ.

This section was made glad by a fine shower Sunday afternoon. It was greatly needed.

A young lady of this vicinity must be inclining toward the Catholic faith, we think, as she has been receiving visits from a Monk for some time now.

The news comes from Cone, Monroe county, of the serious illness of Mrs. Lyra Auten, formerly Miss Allshouse, of this place. Her friends here hope for her speedly restoration to health.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Ogden, of Chicago, pleasantly surprised their friends by arriving last Friday, just in time for the social, held at the home of Mrs. Ogden's father, L. Daniels.

Another ice cream social is talked of in the near future, and if the present torrid weather continues it will certainly be well patronized, as everybody and his wife will be on hand for something cool.

Haying has begun on many farms this week. The crop is mostly timothy grass; there being very little clover left in this vicinity, except now and then a field of Alsike. Wheat is looking finely, but oats show rather short straw.

THROUGH TOIL TO VICTORY.

Exercises of the Class of '94 of the Raisin Valley Seminary—A Fine Program Presented to a Large Audience.

Last Friday was a typical June day, warm but beautiful, and the Raisin Valley School was the center of attraction on that day. Commencement Day at the Seminary is always pleasant, and this year was no exception to the general rule. Long before the opening hour arrived, the main hall of the Seminary was packed to overflowing and scores of people were scattered about the building and grounds, unable to find seats in the hall. The platform was neatly trimmed with white and yellow bunting, interspersed with evergreens and smilax. At each end of the stage was a white banner trimmed in gold; one containing the words, "Class of '94," and the other the class motto, "Through Toil to Victory." Tables were arranged in an adjoining room as receptacles for the graduation gifts, and these were literary smothered beneath floral emblems and bouquets, with a fine assortment of books, jewelry and other gifts. The tables presented a delightful picture and were the admiration of all who inspected them.

Promptly at eleven o'clock the graduating class of nine members, with the Seminary teachers and the Carnelian quartette of Adrian, filed upon the platform and took the chairs reserved for them. Prof. White briefly called the assemblage to order and announced the program as follows:

Rev. Edward Mott opened the exercises with an invocation and the Carnelian quartette sang the "Peasant's Wedding March." It was beautifully rendered, as were their other selections. Their vocal music is appropriate to an occasion of this kind, and it was a valuable addition to the program. The essays were all of them well written, showing careful study and training and they were delivered in a manner befitting the occasion. Prof. White, the teachers and the graduates all have reason to congratulate themselves upon the superior character of the exercises. The old Seminary hall never witnessed a better program on commencement day.

First essay by Luella A. Clark, 'White and Gold.' These being the class colors the essayist gave reasons for their being used as such. Gold was used in time of Moses because of purity. We may be gold, Christ can make us pure. She showed the Transfiguration on the Mount in beautiful language, and also the white in John's vision, a picture of the beauty to come hereafter. Each day a clean white page is opened for us; will we mar it by useless living or make it glisten with even greater beauty by living useful, earnest Christian lives?

Essay by Asa F. Sutton, entitled, "Is Liberty dethroned?" Order is Heaven's first law. When Columbus discovered America he found unrestrained liberty. Since then it has been the scene of war and strife. Slavery was the great question in its day; and it was destroyed only by bloodshed. The unrestricted immigration to this country of the scum of all other nations is a menace to our national freedom. But this evil will be met and conquered in time and America will continue to be the home of freedom.

Essay by Mary C. Wood, "The Uncrowned Queen." Whatsoever ye find to do, do it with a will. Take womans influence from the world and what would we have? It is not what we give but what we share. Can she be queen and not be crowned?

Music by Carnelian Quartette followed, a. By the Sea; b. Swiss Love Song. Both selections were very finely rendered.

Essay by C. Grace Hill, entitled, "Homeward Bound." She pictured before us a calm summer's day in midocean, with vessel headed toward home. They feel that the dangerous voyage is almost over. They see not the black cloud in the distance till the storm suddenly bursts upon them. The dark waters dash against the ship. Thus is life. We are adrift on the sea of life, homeward bound.—As part of our voyage was smooth so it is with life. Youth is the smooth part of life. No clouds yet to be seen. Middle life we find ourselves farther out, and old age finds us almost home.

Essay by Geo. G. Hill, entitled, "The Hier Apparent." In India no person has a chance for advancement. A child born in America, no matter how bumble, can elevate himself and aspire to knowledge. He has free will, freedom of speech and thought. A boat in the stream and man rowing against it. Steady application of the oars is necessary to win. If he rests for a moment he goes backward. So it is in stream of life. How many are trying to row against the stream. What a careless stroke may do. It is not all life to live. We should not be like the late general in camp, waiting for something to turn up, while the enemy is at work the while. We must turn something up.

Essay by Olive S. Mead, entitled, "Buried Treasures." She referred to emigrants rushing for gold in California. Many died on the way, those who reached there suffered many things. Some became poorer and others richer. They found their path was not strewn with roses but many times with thorns. Many found that had they stayed at home and labored they would have found treasures more vast than they expected to find elsewhere. The treasure lies not at the top but is buried. We must therefore labor for what we receive. Let us note two persons: One toils and strives to make things pleasant; appreciates all that grows. The other lives a life of idleness; appreciates nothing. Large treasures lie buried deep. Dig if you would find them.

Music by the Quartette, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," was splendidly sung.

Essay by C. C. Ostrander, entitled, "Blind in the Midst of Beauty." She pictured a beautiful sunrise and sunset. Most important of modern inventions are the microcope and telescope. Nothing is so beautiful as sunshine. The common and small things are beautiful. One grows indifferent by not noticing things in detail. Man finds pleasure in toil while he observes.

Essay by E. C. Chase, entitled, "Hawaii." The population of Hawaii consists of so many different classes that independent government is impossible. Honululu has a population of 25,000. They have until recently had no army and navy. They have children's free schools.

Essay by Lydia T. Hill, entitled, "The Dawn of Light." And the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the earth, and God said let there be light, and there was light. The same sun that was hurled into space by that infinite hand at that date is the same one that to-day gives us light. The same moon, the same stars. Next came the vanishment of water and dry land appears. Nothing can grow but for life. Everything in ancient times was based on Mythology. It is always darkest just before daybreak. Men have made noble strides but they have yet noble ones to make.

Presentation of Diplomas by Prof. White. He described their four courses of study. The test of the student is not what he knows but what he desires to know. So these scholars here have been tested. It is not so much what you are as what you mean to be. If this same class of pupils had been placed side by side in some other school they probably would have known nearly the same as they do now. They have been educating each other. Hoping this will form a foundation for future work, I take pleasure in presenting to you in behalf of the Trustees and teachers these diplomas.

Then followed the Class Song, "Sometime We'll Wander Back Again." It was splendidly sung, each member taking part. The benediction was pronounced by Mrs. Mary C. Wood, and the Commencement of '94 was over. The class received the congratulations of their friends, many of the company remaining to attend the Alumni meeting in the afternoon.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

G. W. Allen drove to Ypsilanti and back Friday.

Remember the Lyceum at A. D. Hunt's, one week from Saturday night.

Irene Allen and Carl Wisner are home from the Normal at Ypsilanti.

O. P. Remington's new house at Sand Lake is booming right along.

At last accounts Mrs. Wm. Burns was able to set up a few moments at a time.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Whelan have just returned from an extended visit with relatives in the middle of the state.

MACON MUSIC.

Bert Day, of Tecumseh, is spending part of his vacation among old friends.

Miss Mame Wilson, of Clinton, was the guest of Ina Hendershot over Sunday.

Frank Augustus and family, of Ypsilanti, spent Sunday with his mother, Libbie Augustus.

The lecture given at the M. E. church, by Rev. A. W. Stalker, of Detroit, was quite well attended. He was the guest of Henry Miller during his stay.

Miss Hattie Moore closed her school in the Merritt district last week with a picnic on Will Morgan's lawn. There was about fifty present and it proved a very pleasant affair.

The next monthly tea meeting given by the W. C. T. U. will be held at the home of Mrs. Clara Gooding, July 6th. Ice cream and cake will be served and the usual collection will be taken. All are cordially invited.

THEY WANT MAMES.

The Russell Art Publishing Co., of 928 Arch Street, Philadelphia, desire the names and address of a few people in every town who are interested in works of art, and to secure them they offer to send free, 'Cupid Guides the Boat,' a superbly executed water picture size 10x13 inches, suitable for framing, and sixteen other pictures about same size, in colors, to any one sending them at once the names and address of ten persons (admirers of fine pictures) together with six two-cent stamps to cover expense of mailing, etc. The regular price of these pictures is $1.00, but they can all be secured free by any person forwarding the names and stamps promptly.

NOTE—The editor of this paper has already received copies of above pictures and considers them really 'Gems of Art.'

"WHERE FARMING PAYS."

Is it in the north-west with wheat at less than 50 cents a bushel, with zero weather and blizzards in winter and cyclones in summer? No! Go to Virginia; land is cheap, climate perfect all the year round. Ask any one who knows and he will tell you that in the tidewater section one acre of land has produced as high as $2,000.00 in one season. It is worth looking into. Apply to C. H. Bovee, Gen'l. Land and Excursion Agent, Coldwater, Mich., for pamphlet "Facts for Farmers" free. No statements made that are not corroborated by practical farmers who have grown rich on their Virginia farms.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 28, 1894.

Summer is here at last. If you have any doubts on this point, look at the thermometer.

A good motto for the farmers would be: "Keep off the grass." Or putting it in another form: 'Keep down the weeds.'

Mr. Havemeyer says that the sugar trust has no politics but the politics of business, and that is the kind of politics the people are catching on to.

Bradstreet says the present year is the dullest for the past quarter of a century. And worse than all, that great commercial journal can see no reason for improvement.

The much abused hired girl is destined to appear hereafter in a new role. As a manipulator of the New York stock market for U. S. Senators she is a decided success.

If properly levied, there is no fairer tax than an income tax. It is a tax on wealth, not on consumption; a tax on accumulation and not on industry. The income tax is coming.

Free wool and lumber are good as far as they go. Now give us free coal, free iron and free sugar and knock off the five years extension granted to the whiskey trust in which to pay its taxes.

Whatever a few Democratic Senators may be "induced" to believe, the voters of the party believe that protection is robbery, and they believe it now even more emphatically than they did in 1892.

Senator Matt Quay of Pennsylvania says that he speculates in sugar stock when he feels so inclined and that he has no apologies to offer either. Coming from such a source that declaration disappoints no one.

Senator Vest says that Gorman worked the sugar trick on the Democrats, and Gorman says he did it how so he wishes to preserve every industry in the country. Preserving Sugar Trust dividends on watered stock is about like New York's municipal protection of green goods sharpers.

It is a remarkable fact that girl graduates are outnumbering the boys in the High School courses, and this tendency is increasing. Twenty years ago the reverse was true. The prevailing hard times is doubtless one cause of it as boys are withdrawn from school at an earlier age to earn their own livelihood.

The sugar trust magnates differ from the high tariff barons in one respect, at least: they are not hypocrites. They ask boldly for liberty to rob the people of the United States in order to put money in their own pockets. They do not turn up the whites of their eyes and pretend that the sugar tax is for the benefit of workingmen.

After the first of next September it will be a misdemeanor in New York to furnish information concerning persons or corporations to newspaper representatives which, if published, would be libellous. In the gathering of news more or less dependence must be placed on the individual giving it, and it is proper that those willfully deceiving the papers should be called to account. The general adoption of a law like that referred to in the course of time might stop a great deal of lying.

Another week such as the last has been at the camps of the armies of the Commonweal just outside of Washington, and the proposed grand 4th of July demonstration would go glimmering. The men from both the Coxey and Galvin camps have been deserting in droves because there was nothing at the camps for them to eat. The leaders are all out on soliciting tours, but the earnings from them have not been of a substantial nature, and the local people have almost entirely ceased their contributions of food and money. Sickness in the camps has also frightened some of them off.

The Vermont Republicans have nominated W. A. Woodbury for Governor upon the regulation high tariff platform. That Mr. Woodbury will be elected goes without saying, as Vermont is Republican by more than a two-thirds majority. The chief interest in the election will lie in the fact that Vermont will be the first Republican State after Rhode Island to elect State officers, the election occurring on the first Tuesday in September. In Presidential years the Vermont election figures are closely studied to discover, if possible, any indications of a change in popular sentiment.

Last Thursday was the longest day in the year, but next Wednesday, the 4th, will be the biggest.

The papers of Monday morning contained the awful news of the assassination of President Carnot of France. The deed was committed at Lyons on the previous evening, by an Italian anarchist. The President was riding to the theater, having just left a banquet at the Chamber of Commerce. The assassin sprang out from the throng that was following the carriage and cheering the President, stepped upon the footstep of the carriage and stabbed the President in the abdomen. The latter fell back senseless and was taken to the prefecture where he died in three hours. There was no excuse even for the awful deed, and it will rank with the dastardly crime that took the life of President Lincoln.

There is more truth than poetry in these comments of the New York World: "The Sugar Trust having refused to contribute with sufficient liberality to the Republican campaign fund of 1888, Senator Plumb's advice to 'put it over the fire and fry some of the fat out of it' was adopted by McKinley. Its yearly tax on the people was cut down by him from $45,000,000 to $15,000,000, from 15 to 5 mills per pound; but this reduction was intended only for two years, to whip it into line and make it contribute freely in 1892. It did contribute freely in 1892 to both campaign funds, for it did not propose to take any chances. Now it has its reward, and the Republican party organs are filled with rage at its iniquity. They wanted a monopoly of 'sugar' as they had of 'soap' but the 'fat-frying' in this case has not turned out in the manner anticipated."

The Chicago HERALD has these comments on the hired girl question: With Senator McPherson's hired girl posing before the country as a female Napoleon of finance there is evidently nothing of practical value in Mr. Allen's bill "to preserve the purity of national legislation." It provides that no Senator or Representative shall speculate in stocks whose value may be affected by the action of Congress, and it could probably be enforced if it became a law in the letter if not in spirit. But with Senatorial sons, errant boys, sons-in-law and Congressmen in abundant supply and putting the capital stupendous out of Wall St. at every turn in legislation it is evidently futile to hope that the purpose of Mr. Allen's bill would be effected. Nothing short of divine grace or an abnormal access of common honesty—and we do not, probability cause a rise in stocks—will keep the members of the millionaires' trust from juggling with national prosperity as a means of making the stock market.

The following incident illustrates what an interference and meddling the census system is. Senator Smith of New Jersey, is one of the half dozen Democrats who sold out to the enemy and helped bring about the Senate compromise tariff bill. But there is one set of manufacturers in New Jersey—the potters—who on Senator Smith does not consider worthy of any protection in the tariff bill, and unless the delegation of potters now here can get him to change his mind he will use his influence to have their products put on the free list. They set about through Senator Smith acting as arbitrator between one of the big Trenton potteries and its employes on a new wage schedule, which the workmen declared would result in a reduction of 25 per cent, while the employers insisted that the reduction would not exceed 5 per cent. An investigation convinced Senator Smith, not only that the employers had willfully misstated the case to mislead him, but that they had actually been importing pottery to fill orders while trying to get the men to agree to a reduction of wages.

This bit of testimony, taken from the sugar investigation, contains a big theme of provender for the voters to reflect upon:

Senator Allen—Why should the American Sugar Refining Company contribute to either of the political parties in the State of New York?

President Havemeyer—We have large interests in this State; police protection and fire protection. They need everything that the city furnishes and gives, and they have to support these things. Every individual and corporation and firm in the city, or whatever you call them, does those things, and we do them. We have a good deal of protection for our sugar houses. Contributions were also given to the Republican party in Massachusetts. It is my impression that wherever there is a dominant party, whenever the majority is very large, that is the party that gets the contribution, because that is the party which controls the local matters.

Senator Allen—Then the Sugar Trust is a democrat in a Democratic State, and a Republican in a Republican State?

Mr. Havemeyer—As far as local matters are concerned, I think that is about it.

This is almost a verbatim reposition of Mr. Gould's definition of the politics of the Erie Railroad: "Republican in Republican districts, Democratic in Democratic districts, but always for Erie."

What a grand scheme it would be for some dime museum to buy and exhibit the famous 'safe' where the gamblers used to keep their 'rolls!

Assassination of Carnot.

The civilized world is again startled by the dastardly murder of a patriotic and high-minded President. Like Lincoln and Garfield, the President of France is the victim of private vengeance acting from wanton caprice and arrogating to itself the right of disposing of the destiny of a nation; and in his case, as in theirs, his virtues, disinterested motives and exalted character, his civic courage, his distinguished services to his country and pre-eminent usefulness have been powerless to avert his fate.

The death of President Carnot, while it will be universally deplored and recognized in France as an irremediable national loss, will not effect the stability of republican institutions. His term was drawing to a close and his retirement from public life in a few months was possible in consequence of his impaired health and disinclination to remain in office. The canvass for the succession, already begun, will be at once precipitated. There is no prolonged strain of past popular elections for the Presidency in France. The National Assembly acts almost automatically under the Constitution, and the vacancy will be immediately filled, the existing majority in the popular Chamber guaranteeing the choice of a conservative Republican. But while a new President will be elected without undue excitement, this fresh Anarchist horror coming after the atrocities of a Ravechol and a Vaillant, will warn the French people that stern measures of repression against Socialist enemies and rebels plotting against the whole order of modern progress are indispensable, and that additional and powerful safeguards of political institutions must be established. In the lottery of assassination there are no prizes; but only blanks, and an increased feeling of insecurity and despondency.—N. Y. Tribune.

HOMES IN ARKANSAS.

The location of Arkansas is such as to exempt it from extremes of heat and cold. Its elevations and richness of soils adapt it to the production of a greater variety of crops, fruits and general products used for the sustenance and comfort of man than any other State in the Union. While its salubrious climate, joined with the other combinations mentioned, give to its fruit and food products a peculiarly delightful flavor that can be found nowhere else. It justly boasts of more health-giving springs and better well-water than any other State. Lands are cheap and productive, markets accessible; health good; no blizzards; no drouth; never a failure of crops; good schools, churches and society, and what is also important, a hearty welcome for all. For descriptive pamphlet address Jno. C. England, Little Rock, Ark. When you write, please mention the HERALD.

Even Mr. Platt's halo begins to look as though it needed a change of climate.

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by Orr & Temple.

Farmers' Home Reading Club.

Two letters were received last week by the Farm and Dairy editor, asking for particulars regarding the F. H. R. C. This is a home course of reading in agriculture, horticulture, dairying, etc., on the Chautauqua plan. It is a grand thing for our farmers, their wives, sons, daughters and the "hired man." Write Prof. F. B. Mumford, Sec'y., Agricultural College, Mich. We are reading this course and could not be hired to drop it. We expect to keep at it (in spite of the tariff, or the exit of silver) until we "graduate." Too much cannot be said in favor of this course for our young farmers who have had no opportunity to pursue a course of study at the Agricultural College. In these days it is almost criminal to live in ignorance. The well-informed, educated, practical, hard working business farmer is the one who ought to make the most money, and—he generally does. He who wills may win.—Michigan Farmer.

When the conference committee of the two Houses gets down to business the government had better put the troops under arms.

Go South Now at Half Price.

On May 8th and 29th tickets can be purchased at all stations in the North, to any point in eastern Mississippi or southern Alabama, on the Mobile and Ohio R. R., at one fare for the round trip. You will find more free government land, cheaper railroad lands, and more improved farms at a less price than any where else in America. The country along the Mobile and Ohio is free from swamps, has the lowest death rate in America, has the purest of soft water, and the pleasantest climate all the year. You can raise three crops each year on the same land, and make more money on each crop than in the north. People are coming. Prices will advance. Now is the time to secure a home where it only costs half as much to live, and you can make twice as much money, have better health, and live with more comfort all the year than in the north. Full particulars sent by E. Fosey, General Passenger Agent, Mobile Ala.

If the Democratic party keeps on going down hill, the Populists will soon be on even terms with it.

The Development of the South

is being furthered by the Queen and Crescent Route by means of a special series of Montnly Excursions to southern points at One Fare for Round Trip. These rates are in effect from Cincinnati, O., Louisville and Lexington, Ky., June 5th, July 5th, Aug. 7th, Sept. 4th, October 2d, November 6th and December 4th; good twenty days from date of sale for return. They are sold on these dates to all points in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida (except Key West), and to New Orleans, and all points on our line in Louisiana. The Q. & C. Co. has over a million acres of farms and timber land for sale along its line at $3.00 to $8.00 per acre.

Stop-overs are permitted on these excursions, at any point South of the Ohio River, within the final limit of the tickets. This offers an excellent opportunity to those who desire to go South to look into the great movement of Northern farmers to that section.

Send us your name for advertising matter and any information you may want as to lands and immigration to the South.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

In the matter of the estate of Albert Hyde, deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the probate court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at The Lilley State Bank, in Tecumseh, Lenawee County, Michigan, on the 14th day July, 1894, and on the 6th day of December, 1894, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 6th day of June, A. D., 1894, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated Tecumseh, Mich., June 12, 1894.

LESTER F. TRIBOU,

Commissioners.

We have never had such a fine array of harvest machines to show farmers as this season. Every one shows inventive skill, strength and symmetry derived from the touch of

WALTER A. WOOD.

The Wood machines, as made for 1892, are winning crowds of new friends. Examine the new chain-drive, and balance-reel, on the Wood harvester. Examine the new spring lift and the new axle extension on the Wood mowers. Examine the Wood hand-dump rakes, virtually self-dumping.

We are in the field again for 1894, with the Best Farming Machinery ever sold in Lenawee County.

LOOK AT THESE SPECIALTIES:

1. THE TUBULAR STEEL MOWER.

This is an excellent device for farmers having a moderate amount of grass to cut, not enough to warrant the purchase of a reaper or binder. It gives the farmer a mowing machine and reaping attachment in a very condensed form.

2. THE SINGLE APRON BINDER.

It is of light draft, and with its open rear has UNLIMITED CAPACITY for tall grain, and will cut, elevate, bind and discharge sowed corn—a most severe test on capacity and strength. The heads of the grain are not lost in their passage to the binder, and much grain is thereby saved which would otherwise be lost through shelling. The saving of the grain is an important matter to the farmer and should receive serious consideration.

3. SELF DUMP HORSE HAY RAKE.

This is a companion implement to the Wood Mower. In its mechanism, strength and construction, the best lines are followed. The seat is adjustable, so that the levers are in convenient reach of any person—man, woman or child—and it can be used successfully by anyone who can drive a horse.

A CIRCUS

ON THE BILL-BOARDS

d a circus on circus day are two kinds of a thing. The greatest circus usually on the Bill-boards, and the circus on Circus Day is consequently isappointment. There is, of course, the occasional exception which oves the rule. McCormick Binders and Mowers are an exception. Their omise on the "Bill-boards" is always fulfilled on "Circus Day." For ars the makers of McCormick Grain and Grass Harvesters have been ing the World that they could and would at any time demonstrate the eriority of their machines in the actual competitive field test. The Bill-boards" of other manufacturers have glaringly proclaimed that their achines are the best. But "Circus Day" came at length. The World's ir urged all these manufacturers to take their machines into the field at the results might be compared. The McCormick was there; its show nt on. It's promises to the World were carried out. But how about e other "great and onlys"? They stayed at home consoling themselves th the reflection that "the people like to be humbugged," and their ists got up new pictures for the "Bill-boards." Before deciding about ing into these field trials, the competitors of the McCormick went and amined the crops to be cut, and realizing the severity of the conditions, ey said to themselves: "We don't propose to come here and compete ith the McCormick;"—"a live coward is better than a dead hero;"—"a cker is born every minute, and we'll catch some of 'em anyway." hat policy may answer for the "Bill-board" sort of circus; it will not do or the McCormick. Promises must not be broken. If McCormick achines are not better than all others, they must not be so advertised. f they are so advertised, every Binder, every Reaper and every Mower must be ready at a moment's notice to go out into the field and show up. hat's business. IS IT TRUE?

Is it true that love flies out the window
When poverty stalks in the door?
Is it true that the heart of a woman
Cares for luxuries and nothing more?

Is her heart so shallow and vapid?
Is her soul so narrow and mean?
Is her mind so placid and depthless
That it shows but the surface sheen?

Oh, rather was shallow the writer
Of that libel on grand womanhood.
Of the heart of her whom he slandered
He knew not, nor yet understood.

In the time of adversity's trials,
When the heart is borne down in the strife,
'Tis ever the love of a woman
That brings back our manhood to life.

MANDY.

Eph Parks and his family lived in that part of Livingston county where the farms are red and gully washed, where the cornstalks are thin and sickly looking and burn yellow in the sun almost as soon as they are green. He was strong and rugged, this sturdy farmer, with his big, bony hands and nut brown, lean cheeks, and as he stood out in the burning August sun, striking vigorously at hidden sassafras roots with his homemade hoe, he was a striking illustration of those people who toil throughout their lives with little thought of the rest of the world or its pleasures. Between the rolling, poor land on which Eph was working and the road stood a two room log house, scantily protected from the sun's rays by a few scrubby black oaks.

At a grindstone at the rear of the house stood an old man grinding away at an ax. His hair was snowy white. His wide brimmed straw hat, with its shoestring band, did not conceal the deep wrinkles on his face. His hickory shirt was torn and faded, and the skin looked blistered through the rents. He rested once in awhile and tested the edge of his ax with his thumb. This was Eph's father. A woman almost as old and long past the age of work sat on a stone in a shady spot watching the grinding of the ax and remarking in a cracked voice the chances for a crop. They had failed in this the last season, and it was of great importance to them. The corn bread and bacon had been very scant of late. Eph's parents were very old and feeble, but they helped as best they could.

A tall, angular woman of perhaps 40, though she looked much older, came to the door. Her calico dress was soiled and torn. A pair of Eph's boots with great patches of rawhide and with the heels run over peeped out from under her tucked up dress. Her face was hard and pinched. The sallow color contrasted strongly with the dark, almost black blue of her gown, and when the sleeves were rolled to the elbows her arms were brown. One bony hand clutched a dishrag, which she held against the side of the door as she shaded her eyes with the other. She was looking at her husband as he worked across the red clay field.

The clatter of a horse's hoofs on the hard and gravel washed road was heard. Her eyes were turned in the direction of the rapidly approaching rider. A half dozen children, the eldest a boy of 10, came from a gully near by, where they had been playing, also attracted by the sounds. All moved around to the front of the house. To the surprise of all, the stranger pulled up at the fence:

"Eph Parks live here?"

"Yep, that's him over there in the field," answered the woman.

The stranger dismounted, tied the bridle rein to the rail fence and started across the field toward Eph. The children instinctively clustered around their mother and tugged unconsciously at her dress. She smacked them right and left impulsively. She was watching the stranger. The man finally reached Eph, and the two had a parley for several minutes. When they started toward the house, the stranger had hold of Eph's arm. Eph's parents and his wife and children were all standing close together when the pair reached the house.

"Mandy, this 'ere's a gove'ment ossifer, and he's cum ter take me 'way to jail fur makin them dollars. 'Twan't no harm nohow, le'stwise I'm er church member yet."

"Hurry up, hurry up," said the detective. "I want to get to the station in time to catch the night train."

"How long will yer be gone, Eph?" said his wife. His aged parents stood with their mouths open. They did not understand it at all.

"Doan' know," answered Eph as the handcuffs were adjusted to his wrists.

Then the men climbed over the fence. The stranger got on his horse and told Eph to walk along in front of him. He also said that any attempt on Eph's part to run would cost him his life. There was no handshaking, no tears. The men moved off down the scorching hot road, leaving the group standing as it had stood at first, together. The old man and old woman looked at Mandy appealingly, but Mandy watched her husband and the stranger disappear in the woods. She stood there in the sun with her head uncovered long after they had moved out of her sight. The old man and woman went back to the rear of the house, and the children finally resumed their playing. Still she stood there, looking. The sun continued his traveling, and finally dropped behind the woods in which her husband had disappeared.

"Yes," she murmured, "that there's Jim Dobson's work. He tole on Eph."

She shook her head several times, looked down the road once again and then passed into the house. She prepared the scanty meal without a word. There was a strange silence in the house, as if a corpse were near. The children were put to bed, and soon the old man and old woman followed. Then Mandy pulled her stool over to the open window and looked out into the night. She placed her elbows on the sill and rested her chin in her hands. The moon came creeping up from behind a distant hill and shed its soft light over the farm. Still Mandy gazed out into the night. Her face seemed as void of expression as the black oaks in the yard. The cold, hard stare was directed toward the road, and there it rested immovably. The hours passed slowly. The moon crept on and on until it was almost directly over the house. The loud snoring of the old folks, the occasional cough of one of the children, the chirp of a cricket and the croak of a frog were the only sounds which disturbed the almost perfect quiet.

"'Twan't no harm nohow," she said to herself, "Ther law ain't no right to put yer in jail fur makin money er whisky." And the moon traveled on. "He did it, that ther Dobson." And again she relapsed into silence.

Soon she arose and shook herself, as if to throw off the chill of the night air. She lighted the dip of tallow and placed it on a chair; then she reached up over the door and took a long rifle down from its resting place on a pair of tree forks. She extracted the charge with a long rod, wiped the gun clean and reloaded it. Then she placed it back where she found it, removed her faded calico dress and went to bed. Her loud breathing soon told that she was asleep.

In the morning she performed her household duties as if nothing had happened. No word was spoken of Eph, except by the oldest boy, who asked once when "pop ud be back." No one answered him. The sun came out again in all its fierceness. The children began their play and the old people their talk. When all were busy, Mandy took the old rifle down from the rack over the door. She shouldered the weapon with the strength and sleight of a strong man and started off down the road. She seemed in a hurry, for she took long strides like a man. Her body swayed in tune to her step, either from the weight of the gun or habit. She passed several persons with the usual salutation, "Mornin!" She looked neither to the left nor to the right. Finally she reached a lane where the hazel bushes skirted the road. She walked more carefully then. She peered into a field through an opening, but did not seem satisfied, for she continued her walking. She stopped again shortly and looked through the bushes. In the field, about 20 paces distant, was a man patiently hoeing his corn. She poked the rifle through the bushes just as the solitary laborer straightened up, took off his hat and wiped the perspiration from his face with his shirt sleeve. She glanced along the barrel of the gun. There was a sharp report, and the man fell over in a furrow. The blood flowed from a hole in his temple.

Then Mandy replaced the gun on her shoulder. She walked off down the road without a word. When she arrived at her home, she put the rifle in its resting place and went about her duties.

In the afternoon the rumble of a road wagon was heard below the house. It came nearer. All went to the door to see who it was. The wagon stopped before the house. All knew the driver. It was Bill Bucker, the constable. As he climbed over the fence all in the house started out to meet him.

"Mandy, I want yer ter go with me fur ther shootin of Dobson."

The woman's face was as immovable as it had been when she sat at the window the night before. Eph's father and mother and the children looked at her fixedly.

"All right, Bill, I'll go with yer," and with this she climbed into the wagon.

"Zach," she said to the oldest child, "yer go over to yer Aunt Minerva's an tell her to cum round an look after yer all." The wagon rattled down the road, and the children and old people looked after it.—Will Withers Douglas in Louisville Courier-Journal.

An Object Lesson In Economy.

It is recorded of the founder of Guy's hospital that he always dined alone, and that a soiled proof sheet or an old newspaper was his constant substitute for a tablecloth. One winter evening he was sitting in his room meditating over a handful of half lighted embers confined within a narrow brick stove, and without the luxury of a candle.

A person who came to inquire for him was introduced, and after the first greetings were over the visitor was requested to take a seat. Thereupon Mr. Guy lighted a farthing dip which lay on the table beside him and inquired the object of the gentleman's visit. "I have been told," said the latter, "that you, sir, are better versed in the prudent and necessary art of saving than any man now living. I therefore wait upon you for a lesson in frugality, an art in which I used to think I excelled, but I am told by all those who know you that you are greatly my superior."

"And is that all you came about?" asked Mr. Guy. "Why, then, we can talk the matter over in the dark."

So saying, he, with great deliberation, extinguished his newly lighted farthing candle. Struck with this instance of economy, the visitor acknowledged himself vanquished and took his leave.—London Tit-Bits.

Addressing Envelopes.

A new notion somewhat in practice is to address and stamp envelopes on the back. With the address written across the folds it can readily be seen that any tampering with the contents of the envelope could be detected. Now, if like the electric burglar mat, which on being stepped upon not only sets all the bells in the house a-ringing, but also exposes the negative and takes a flashlight picture of the rascal, identity could also be coupled with knowledge in the case of the letter opener, absolute safety in the transmission of mail missives would be secured.—New York Times.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

TEN GRADUATES CROSS THE THRESHOLD FROM SCHOOL TO ACTIVE LIFE.

A Fine Commencement Program Presented Last Thursday Evening to an Audience That Crowded the Opera House.

Commencement Day has come and gone for another year.

The class of '94 of the High School will compare favorably with its predecessors, and the program which they presented Thursday evening at their graduating exercises was one of superior merit throughout. The class numbered ten in all, six young gentlemen and four young ladies. The exercises were of the usual character, consisting of original essays by the graduates, interspersed with vocal music. The essays were all well written and delivered, showing both natural ability and thorough training, and the program was presented without a hitch, from first to last. The clerk of the weather was in a very congenial mood. A slight shower passed over the village about five o'clock which laid the dust nicely and cooled the atmosphere. Although the house was crowded to repletion, the heat was not oppressive, and the program had been carefully calculated in length, occupying exactly two hours.

The stage and hall decorations were simple but very tasty. The gallery front was trimmed with festoons of yellow bunting; on the stage the full forest scenes were set and each front corner was banked with potted palms. The floor of the stage was covered with a green carpet with fancy robes and rugs scattered about. Suspended from a drop scene over the stage, in large gilt letters upon a white background, appeared the class motto: "The Horizon Widens as We Rise." The platform contained chairs for the members of the class, Prof. Kellogg and the officiating clergymen, who were seated in a semi-circle in the rear of the platform. Ten tables were arranged in front of the stage, on the main floor, one for each graduate, which were literally loaded with floral gifts, books, pictures and other mementos, presented by their friends. These gifts were more numerous and in greater variety than usual and the tables presented a delightful picture. The auditorium and stage were finely lighted, and the room, filled with a brilliant audience, presented a most attractive appearance.

Promptly at eight o'clock the class filed upon the stage and Prof. Kellogg announced the program in the following order.

Miss Georgie Spencer, Accompanist.
Benediction ..... Rev. F. A. Fistler

Of the orations and essays it is enough to say that they were of a high order of merit. There was not an inferior one among them. They covered a good range of subjects, from a newspaper to the Brazillian rebellion, from farm life to the evolution of astronomy. They were all marked by originality and showed painstaking research and thorough study. They were nicely delivered, without an exception, giving evidence of the careful drill they have received under Prof. Kellogg's instruction. Where all did so finely, it would seem invidious to particularize, and hence we content ourselves with saying: "Well done, ladies and gentlemen; we hope you may attain the same measure of success in after life that you did on commencement evening." The musical portion of the program was somewhat out of the usual order, but it was none the less acceptable on that account.

The opening selection, "High School March," was a chorus of some forty voices, composed of the boys and girls of the grammar grades, under the lead of Miss Dora Grayson, and was splendidly sung. The instrumental trio by little Misses Julia Lowry, Ethel Slayton and Floy Freeman, was very nicely given, with a proficiency worthy of much older heads, and it captured the audience completely. "The Fisherman's Return" was another chorus which brought forth a hearty encore. The piano solo, "Polonaise Op. 40, No. 1," by Miss Gertrude Howell, displayed musical ability of a high order and was quite a surprise to her friends. "The Holiday" was a chorus by twenty boys and was rendered in a manner that called out another. Dr. Geo. Howell, president of the Board of Trustees, presented the diplomas. He favored the audience with a few words of congratulation upon the general efficiency and reputation of our public schools, following with some fatherly admonition to the graduates which they ought to cherish in after life. The closing piece, "Revel of the Leaves," was another full chorus by both girls and boys, and this also was honored with a rousing encore. The audience still called for more, but the benediction was pronounced and the graduating exercises for '94 were ended.

It is no flattery to say that the entertainment gave the utmost satisfaction to all who attended, and the general verdict was that the program as a whole eclipsed any of its predecessors. We append a brief synopsis of the essays, which will disclose their general character.

The Class of '94.

BY ELLA A. PRIMROSE.

This essay was in the nature of a class history. After extending a cordial welcome to the audience, the essayist gave the following class statistics:

With the exception of three of our members, we have borne our joys and sorrows together, since we were given the name of High School students, upon leaving the eighth grade four years ago when we commenced the life of Freshmen. Then there were thirty-four of us and as some dropped out while a few more were added to our number, we had thirty in our sophmore year. Nothing out of the usual order happened this year to break the monotony of our school life. The following year we were juniors and we certainly did our best to fill that important position and to conduct ourselves in a manner most becoming to juniors. Soon after school opened we met for the purpose of organization, electing our class officers and enrolling fifteen members.

We held some very important class meetings during our junior year and conducted them in a manner and spirit which might well have been imitated by our vacillating seniors. The result of some of these class meetings was that on the first Monday morning of the third term fourteen juniors walked proudly down to school, each wearing a mortar-board in the chosen class colors, while the seniors in their new white caps looked at us condescendingly from the other side of the road. Near the close of the year, the usual receptions were held—gatherings which were enjoyed by all present, and which will be associated pleasantly in our memory in connection with our life as juniors. Thus our junior year passed by and last fall when we met for organization we were dignified seniors. This time we numbered twelve, out of which number there are ten here to-night, who have managed to struggle through geometry and all the hardships of senior life. Four of these ten have completed the Scientific course, two the English, two the Latin, one the English and German, and one both the Latin and Scientific courses. Tecumseh has the honor of being the birth-place of six of our class, while the native towns of the other four are Franklin Clinton, Milan and North Hector, N. Y., respectively. If we were all to be put on the scales at the same time the weight would be 19,752 ounces, making an average of nearly 123 1-2 lbs., while the combined height is 630 inches, the smallest measuring 60 inches and the tallest 72 1-2 inches. On an average we are 19 years of age. Hawthorne is our best-loved American prose writer and Dickens our favorite English writer. As to poets the majority prefer Longfellow, although Virgil, Ovid and Milton are also favorites. The Marguerite is our chosen class flower. We differ in politics, the majority being Republicans, although of course there are some Democrats and one Prohibitionist.

Among the many possessions of the class of '94 may be mentioned our Hall of learning, a U. S. Bond of '74 and the ever ready Keusch.

The Brazillian Rebellion.

BY CHARLES H. WILLIAMSON.

In the year 1500, Cebral, a Portugese navigator, was driven westward from the coast of Africa and explored the coast of Brazil, where he learned of the rich products of that large South American state. Colonies from Portugal were established and in a short time Brazil passed under Portugal's control. When Phillip II, of Spain, annexed Portugal to his kingdom the American possessions of the latter country passed under Spanish rule. In 1807, when the success of the French army drove John VI from his throne, he became an exile in Brazil and established an empire. After the downfall of Napoleon, John was recalled to Portugal and left the power with his son, Prince Pedro. In 1822 he was crowned as Dom Pedro I, Emperor of Brazil. In 1831, finding himself hopelessly involved with the Chamber of Deputies he resigned in favor of Dom Pedro II. His reign was a very successful one. Almost his first act was the abolition of slavery. His liberal policy and enlightened views have done much to build up the empire of Brazil. After the abolition of slavery the spirit of liberty began to manifest itself and it became evident that upon the death of the emperor the monarchy must give way to a republic. The emperor's officers organized an army and this precipitated a revolution and led to the establishment of a republic. The provisional government was organized with Fonseca as President. Fonseca was soon displaced by Vice-President Peixoto. His rule was mild at first but soon became as oppressive as that of Fonseca, which provoked another revolt led by Admiral Mello of the navy. Hostilities continued until March 1st of the present year when the insurgents were subjugated. The election held at that time resulted in the choice of Moreas as President, who commands the respect and confidence of the Brazillian people.

Political Education.

BY GEORGE L. BOND.

Although our country in its early history was surrounded by difficulties which seemed insurmountable, yet by wise statesmanship a government was founded, which establishes justice, insures domestic tranquility, promotes the general welfare and secures to us the blessings of liberty—a government whose fundamental principles are peace, freedom and equity. That our voters may use their powers most intelligently, both now and hereafter, we should see to it that every citizen receive a thorough training in political science. Every man should know the powers and duties of the citizen. His views should be broadened by the intelligent study of political economy and he should know the effects of free trade, protective tariffs and revenue tariffs, of an income tax and a land tax. By our two great popular educators, the press and the public school system, we expect this work to be done. The press exerts a powerful influence upon the public, but does it always use this influence in the right direction. Does the average political paper always strive to tell the whole truth? We need political papers, but we want those of an independent character—papers that will be as candles placed on candle-sticks and not under the bushel. Does the school system do all within its power to make us intelligent and broad minded citizens? In the average high school neither Civil Government nor Political Economy is required in any course except the English, and these subjects are not given the time they deserve in any course. When our schools shall accord to the political sciences the place which their importance demands, then will our country be governed by men of higher motives and purer patriotism.

The Prose of Farm Life.

BY LIZZIE M. RUSSELL.

Commencement essays are supposed to treat of the ideal only, but I shall crave your indulgence this evening with a brief survey of real life on a farm. That there is more prose than need be is perhaps true, but I shall treat of farm life as I have found it. Why do so many young people leave their farm homes? I think the answer to this question may be found in the fact that too often they lack home attractions, social and educational privileges, the hard work and the long hours of labor required. Many an ambitious youth has had his hopes crushed by the monotonous routine of farm life. Give the boy play as well as work. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Our country school system is superior to what it was in our father's time, that is true, still there is a vast chance for improvement yet. The boy is often pressed into service before he is old enough and he finally becomes disgusted and resolves that come what may he will never be a farmer. Boys especially long for a practical education, and if this privilege is denied them they flock to the cities and towns. Very often the home is not attractive, but this can and ought to be remedied. Probably no class of laboring men work so many hours as the farmer. The labor saving machines prove to be a saving of expense rather than of time. How is it with the women of the household? They are often overworked creatures, whose line of vision seldom extends beyond the walls of their own home. The farmer of the future will be a different person from the farmer of the past, laboring less arduously and enjoying more prosperity.

The Poetry of Farm Life.

BY EMMA E. HALL.

"I would flee from the city's rule and law and go where the strawberries grow on a straw, and the gooseberries on a goose. Oh, let me drink from the moss grown pump that was hewn from a pumpkin tree, and eat mush and milk from folly and fashion free—new gathered mush from the mushroom vine, and milk from the milk weed tree." Thus writes the city resident as his mind turns from the dizzy whirl of business to seek relief in the quiet of the farm. Many who do not understand farm life think it is all prose and no poetry. But it is a poetry of stern reality perhaps, but one that can bring happiness and satisfaction to all who pass their life upon a farm. The farm, no less than the city, has its pleasures and its attractions. There is no profession more conducive to peace of mind and happiness than that of the farmer, for it promotes the health of the body. Again, there is much less evil in country life and hence it favors morality. Without soundness of mind and body there is neither pleasure nor poetry in any life. Much has been said about the dullness of farm life, particularly for the women at home, but this is not necessary, if they will look for the bright things, and avail themselves of all opportunities for pleasure. Most women can spend a portion of each day in reading, music or painting. Farm life may be a social one. Farmers' clubs and reading circles are multiplying. But whether on the farm or in the city, our enjoyment of life depends not so much upon our surroundings as upon ourselves.

The Evolution of Astronomy.

BY HERBERT R. CONKLIN.

Ever since its birth science has been contending with superstition and religious bigotry to gain for itself the privilege of existence and growth. Opposition has acted as a pruning knife, cutting off the useless growth and keeping the plant in proper shape. And astronomy has probably met and overcome more opposition than any other department of science. In the early ages of the world many theories were extant in regard to the plan of the universe. At first it was thought to be an oblong box covered by a solid vault or firmament. Then the earth was placed in the center of the universe as an immovable globe. This was the Ptolemaic theory and was accepted by the wisest men of that age as satisfactorily explaining the apparent motions of the heavenly bodies, and as agreeing with the teachings of Scripture. This theory obtained until the middle of the sixteenth century, although the germs of a new system were earlier planted. As early as the sixth century Pythagoras taught that the earth and the planets revolved about a central fire. In the early part of the sixteenth century Copernicus became convinced that the prevailing notions were false and after years of study he published his book in 1543 setting forth his theory that the earth and planets revolve about the sun. It met with a storm of opposition from scientists and theologians alike. Its teaching was forbidden in the schools. The telescope of Galileo found conclusive proof of the doctrine. He was persecuted for heresy and brought before the Pope. History tells us of his recantation and also of his after declaration: "It does move, for all that." Thus science is ever gaining, and a truth once established always remains.

From Lake Erie to the Sea.

BY RAYNOR SUFFIN.

One of the most potent factors in the rapid development of the United States has been cheap and easy transportation facilities. When DeWitt Clinton, governor of New York, advocated the building of a canal from the great lakes to the Hudson, he was derided. But the canal became a success and then he received the thanks of his constituents. The Erie Canal was more influential in developing the Northwest territory, of which Michigan was a part, than any other enterprise. It is a well known fact that the improvement of water communication between two ports always lowers the rates of freight between the same points. As a military improvement alone, its importance would justify the expense of constructing it. The coast line of the great lakes with the rivers tributary thereto in our territory extends over more than 3,000 miles and is lined with populous cities. If the project of enlarging the Erie Canal were carried out, a line of water communication for large vessels would be opened between the lakes and the ocean, which would be a protection to our commerce in case of a war with Great Britain. The distance between Lake Erie and the sea is greatly diminished by the water way, and we would not be compelled to rely upon a foreign power for our commercial facilities. The enlargement of the Erie Canal is perfectly feasible, as is demonstrated by the building of the Manchester ship canal in England. There are no more difficulties to be overcome in building a canal from Buffalo to the Hudson. Similar public enterprises have received government aid and the enlargement of this canal would be of the same nature.

Atlantis.

BY ROSA M. WILSON.

The facts in the life of the world and its people are often hid in fable, and the researches of the student become necessary to separate fact from fiction. The buried cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii were long considered to be a myth, but the pick and shovel of the explorer have revealed the truth of their existence. Ages passed after those cities were overwhelmed by the lava of Vesuvius, and the mystery seemed more difficult to solve, but the truth contained in the fable was finally revealed. The story of Atlantis, as told by Plato, the Greek philosopher, is attributed to Solon. The priests gave him an account of a war that had occurred nine thousand years before between the people living on this western island and the Athenians. It was lofty and precipitous on the side next the Mediterranian but the center of the island was an extended plain inhabited by a people whose occupation was agriculture and commerce. The question may be asked: Is it possible that Atlantis could have been destroyed in the manner described by Plato? The ancients did not believe it possible, but recent scientific researches have demonstrated the fact that such an event is possible. The terrible earthquake which destroyed Lisbon furnishes a parallel. In the brief space of six minutes 60,000 people perished. Recent scientific investigation has disclosed the existence of an island sunk in the Atlantic between Africa and the West Indias. Religious traditions also offer some conclusive proof on this point. The story of the flood has a counterpart in the Mexican legend. The mounds found in Colorado prove an ancient civilization thousands of years before the christian era. All these facts corroborate the story of Plato and the existence of Atlantis.

A Newspaper.

BY J. WILL SMITH.

Cardinal Richelieu said: "In the hands of men supremely great, the pen is mightier than the sword." Although the newspaper is a business concern, yet because of its peculiar nature the people have rights in it, which do not belong to the product of other industries. Nothing should be printed in a newspaper that cannot be read by every member of the family. The press has an important office in the education of public opinion. A good newspaper educates the community through each of its departments. The power of the press does not refer to the city papers alone, for of the 20,000 periodicals published in this country, 14,000 are country weeklies or small dailies. The average subscriber to the country newspaper takes it more to be entertained than instructed. The editor, therefore, has to submit to the tastes of his subscribers, but nevertheless it is his duty to so conduct his paper as to lead his readers to higher ideas of life and literature. The country newspaper has a powerful influence in controlling the action of the community in which it circulates. The road improvement reform, now agitating many states, was started and is being pushed forward by the country press. The best edited newspaper is not merely a chronicler of events, but it is also an educator of the people. The city editor may not believe what he writes, but since he is unknown to his readers it makes but little difference. But the country editor reflects his own character to a great extent in his editorials. Hence to give the paper tone and character the editor himself must be an influential and respected citizen.

Valedictory.

BY PHILIP M. V. KEUSCH.

CLASSMATES:—As a class we are assembled to-night for the last time. Four years we have labored side by side, entertaining the same hopes and cherishing the same plans. But as all things must have an end so must our High School days. The future is now before us and it lies within our power, to a great extent to make or mar it. As we have met with obstacles in the past so in the future we must expect them. Let us not be disheartened if we fail, but take courage and only fight the harder. Opposition is the very element upon which success often depends. Demosthenes overcame his impediment of speech and for years shook Greece with his eloquence. Disraeli first failed as an author, but pluck and perseverance at last crowned his efforts with success. If we are preparing ourselves for a life of usefulness does it not behoove us to emulate the deeds of great men who have solved the problem of this life? Gathering courage by seeing how others have dared to think and act we may rise in the estimation of our fellow men, remembering that "they live the most who think the most, feel the noblest and act the best." In saying our farewell, we would express our thanks to the school board who have seen our needs and so wisely provided for them and to the teachers who have labored so patiently to store our minds with that knowledge, that will help us to cope with the perplexities of life. May future classes enjoy the same privileges, and may the board and teachers uphold that high standard of excellence already attained. In the name of the class of '94, I say to all, "Farwell."

The fiftieth commencement at the State University occurs this week. What a wonderful growth that institution has had in half a century.

As the HERALD boys will wish to celebrate next Wednesday our correspondents are requested to send their letters one day early next week.

The Anderson concert Friday evening, though given by home talent, will be a superior entertainment. An examination of the program will convince any one of that fact.

J. A. Munger, of the Dundee Ledger, was in town Monday, soliciting advertising for the Dundee Fair premium list. He obtained several cards from Tecumseh merchants.

Miss Mary Burridge returned from Ann Arbor last Saturday for the summer vacation. She has now finished her second year at the University and designs to complete a full course.

Geo. N. Stacy, of Elgin, Ill., arrived in town Friday morning and has been enjoying himself with old friends here for a few days. He left for home this afternoon, accompanied by his wife.

A meeting of the Royal Arcanum will be held next Tuesday evening. The propriety of holding a picnic at Sand Lake next month under Arcanum auspices will be discussed at this time. A large attendance is desired.

Claude VanTyne arrived home from the University last Saturday. He expects to start in a few days for an overland trip to Denver on his wheel, and our patrons will have the pleasure of hearing from him occasionally.

Prof. F. R. Hathaway, of Hudson, will go to Flint next year, where he will have to look after 2100 pupils and 50 teachers. As a school superintendent "Fred" is walking right up the ladder. He is a graduate of Raisin Valley Seminary.

The Tecumseh and Franklin Farmers' Club held their annual picnic at Sand Lake last Saturday. Most of Franklin and a good slice of Tecumseh were there and the Tipton band furnished music during the day. There was no literary program presented, but the crowd gave themselves up to feasting and enjoyment. The several hundred people in attendance made a good day of it.

The Rev. W. R. Blachford went to Hamburg, Mich., Tuesday, to attend the first meeting of a new convocation lately created by the Bishop of the Diocese. The Rev. Tetlock, of Ann Arbor, is the Dean, having been appointed by Bishop Davies. On Tuesday the Hon. J. O'Donell, of Jackson, was elected treasurer, and the Rev. Mr. Blachford, secretary. The next meeting of the Southern Convocation will be held in Tecumseh in September or October. The Rev. Dr. Stonix invited the clergy to go to Hamburg for the present meeting, this year being the 50th anniversary of the building of St. Stephens church in that place.

The Water Board wish to direct the attention of water takers to the necessity of strict observance of the rules regulating hours of using water, and of using revolving sprinklers or moveable fountains. It is considered that the hours allotted are ample for all ordinary sprinkling purposes; but parties desiring the use of water during prohibited hours (from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. are enabled to do so by paying the extra rates. It is the especial request of the Board that all persons will so recognize the rules as to render unnecessary the enforcement of penalties for violating the same. The observance of the rules is imperative in consideration of due regard for fire protection.

Lucius Lilley was an Adrian visitor Monday.

Will J. Kies, of Elkhart, was in town over Sunday.

John Heesen is in Ypsilanti a day or two this week.

The blanket matinee, which will be held at Bill's driving park next Saturday, June 30th, promises to be well attended. There are a large number of entries, which will insure several first-class races.

The concert to-morrow evening by the pupils of Miss Mary Anderson will be a program of instrumental music, much above the average. Let us encourage home talent and a worthy enterprise by filling the house.

Henry Smith has sold his interest in Temple, McClure & Co., to I. C. Wolcott. Thus Mr. Wolcott goes back into the same firm which he left four or five years ago. He has been restless since he left that business and has made a good move in getting back again.

L. G. Lester, of Raisin, died suddenly at his residence last Saturday forenoon. He had been sick for some time but was on the gain, and his recovery was confidently expected, when he suddenly grew worse and submitted to the dread messenger most unexpectedly. The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon at the Baptist church.

The T. H. S. team went to Adrian Tuesday and played a very fine game with the Y. M. C. A. team of that city. The Times report of the game says: "The Tecumseh team played uniformly good ball and made some pretty fancy plays. They were quicker than cats and won the admiration and plaudits of the grand stand." The score stood 9 to 5 in favor of our club.

The Anderson Concert Friday evening will be a first-class entertainment.

People who fail to attend the Anderson Concert to-morrow night will miss a rich treat.

There will be a special communication of the Masonic Blue Lodge to-morrow evening for work in the third degree.

Fred Burlingame, of Coldwater, is visiting friends in town. The frogs will suffer, if he will only take a little salt along when he goes for them.

Frank B. Bauer has been appointed agent of the Phoenix Ins. Co., of Hartford, for Tecumseh. This is one of the best eastern companies and Frank will doubtless make them a good agent.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM. Cleanses and beautifies the hair. Promotes a luxuriant growth. Never Fails to Restore Gray Hair to its Youthful Color. Cures scalp diseases & hair falling. 50c. and $1.00 at Druggists.

ARE YOU CONSUMPTIVE

Baccalaureate Addresses at Some of the Colleges.

President Angell, at Ann Arbor, Makes an Appeal for the Cultivation of Character—Addresses by Other Noted Educators.

TALKED TO ANN ARBOR SENIORS.

ANN ARBOR, June 25.—After the great storm of Sunday afternoon there was a beautiful evening and the large university hall was filled with an attentive audience to listen to the annual baccalaureate sermon delivered to the students of the University of Michigan by President Angell. Prof. Craig read a portion of Scripture and delivered a prayer, after which President Angell spoke on the subject: "The Cultivation of Character." In part he said:

"Character is eternal. We are building it every day. The defects in our work will long perhaps forever, embarrass us, or at least subtract from the power which but for them we might have gained. The work which is seen only of God and of ourselves is the most important. Oh, that we could daily feel that in our inner lives, our most secret thoughts and purposes, we are building for our whole lives, building for eternity. The great conflicts of life are not on the open fields of our Waterloos and our Gettysburgs, but deep within the heart. They are not with confused noise of battle, but without sound of gun or trumpet.

"Some of you, who have been revelling so long in those high joys, with which these years of preparatory study are freighted, the joys of manly study, of daily equipment for the large work of life, the indescribable thrill of conscious mental growth, will do well to beware of disgusts, as the petty jealousies and strifes of narrow and obstinate men, the misunderstandings of stupid men and the misrepresentations of carping critics harass your soul and seem to neutralize the results of your best labors. The most fortunate lives are not free from these annoyances, which spoil so many of our most precious hours. And it is so often the fact that the most gifted men are the most sensitive and so suffer the largest subtraction from their effective power by reason of this moral and intellectual friction. It is the fine, strong nature of the poet which makes him the irritabilis vates. Some excellent men spend their lives in running away from infelicities of situation and do not at last find that happy valley into which these infelicities never come. No, every post has them. The manly, taing the Christlike thing is to meet them with a courageous, patient, hopeful spirit, and stand to the post which God at has planted you till He plainly calls you elsewhere. Show that Christian culture does not unnerve and emasculate you, but that to the braves which other men have it adds the sweetness and victorious patience which makes the career of our Lord so glorious."

The total number of degrees conferred last year was 754, but this year there will be a falling off of about seventy-five. Last year's was the largest number ever graduated in one year from an American college.

At Hope College.

HOLLAND, June 25.—Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City, N. J., preached the baccalaureate sermon Sunday evening in Hope church before the graduating class opening the twenty-ninth commencement of Hope college. His text was: "If ye know these things, happy are ye when ye do them."—John xiii., 17.

At the State Normal.

YPSILANTI, June 25.—The baccalaureate address before the Michigan state normal school was delivered Sunday evening by the new principal, Dr. R. G. Boone. He came to the office in September, 1893. The subject of his address was "Forward Lookers," the theme being profit that comes through living a hopeful, purposeful life as set over against contentment with or brooding over its past. A vivid and detailed picture was drawn of the "Forward Lookers" on the young, the aspiring, the rightly cultured, the morally worthy, as all having an open-doored future, a prospect richer in possibilities of experiment and achievement.

LUMBERMEN ALARMED.

Bay City and Saginaw Appoint Committees to Go to Washington.

BAY CITY, June 23.—A meeting of men interested in the different branches of the lumber business was held here Friday night to consider the senate bill putting dressed or manufactured lumber on the free list. A committee consisting of Selwyn Eddy, S. O. Fisher and Joseph Eastwood was appointed to confer with a like committee from Saginaw to see what influence can be brought to bear on the senate committee at the time of the conference with the house committee in order to have dressed lumber put back among dutiable goods.

A FATAL ERROR.

A Man Mistaken by His Daughter for a Burglar Is Killed.

SAULT STE. MARIE, June 23.—John Corrigan was accidentally killed early Friday morning. He was entering the house when his daughter, who had not heard him leave, thinking burglars were trying to enter gave an alarm. One of the roomers, aroused by her cries, shot at the object he detected in the darkness and it fell. An examination showed the daughter that her father was breathing his last as the result of her alarm. He died in her arms. Corrigan was 93 years old.

Alleged Shortage Found.

MUSKEGON, June 22.—At the close of the common council meeting Thursday night Mayor McGraft reported that John Kuppenheimer, clerk of the board of public works since 1888, is short in his accounts $2,603. The matter was at once placed in the hands of the city attorney, with power to institute proceedings.

Wants to Be Governor.

LANSING, June 24.—The republicans of Michigan will hold their state convention at Grand Rapids July 31. Much interest centers in the contest for the gubernatorial nomination, the candidates being John T. Rich, the present governor, Mayor Pingree, of Detroit, and Congressman A. T. Bliss, of Saginaw.

Want Women to Have a Chance.

ANN ARBOR, June 22.—A petition is being circulated among the seniors and graduates of the University of Michigan asking the board of regents to give some women positions on the university faculty. The petition is getting a great many signatures.

MINERS DISSATISFIED.

An Organization Preparatory to a Strike Said to Be Under Way.

MARQUETTE, June 23.—There is some dissatisfaction among the miners at Ishpeming over the rate of wages, which is admittedly low, but which the companies say are all they can afford to pay. A greater part of the mining proper is done by contract, and most of the dissatisfaction seems to be among men whose contracts have not paid as well as they expected. Several days ago anonymous notices were posted calling a meeting of miners to ask for increased pay. No time was set for the meeting thus called and no gathering of any size was held. There has been no general organization among the men, although it is said that a union has been started within the last ten days. If any organization has been formed its members are still limited and its operations kept very quiet. Emissaries from the Gogebic range are believed to be at work, but have apparently accomplished nothing. There is considerable talk, but no visible movement toward a strike, nor does careful inquiry disclose that there is any general agitation in that direction.

Only Two Out of Five Persons Aboard Are Saved—B. J. Healey Loses His Life in Trying to Rescue His Two Daughters.

A SAD DISASTER.

DETROIT, June 25.—In a hurricane that swept the river about 6 o'clock Sunday night a small electric launch containing its owner, B. J. Healey, and five other persons was capsized. Healey and his two daughters were drowned, but the two other occupants were rescued. When the boat tipped over, Healey, who was at the helm, made a gallant attempt to save his daughters. He swam through the boiling water and several times dived beneath the boat in his efforts to find them. He continued his search until exhausted and sank before help could reach him.

OFFICIALS GIVE A CIRCUS.

Detroiters Turn Clowns and Acrobats to Raise Money for the Poor.

DETROIT, June 23.—About two weeks ago Mayor Pingree inaugurated the plan of turning over all unoccupied lots within the city to the poor for potato patches. The lots are being turned into farms very rapidly, but it has been hard to raise money for plowing and seed. In this emergency the mayor and members of the city council originated the plan of taking charge of a circus stranded in the city, themselves to take the leading parts, the money to be turned over to the potato fund. The circus took place Friday at the Athletic club grounds and netted at least $1,000.

Before the performance there was a street parade with bands of music, in which City Comptroller Moore rode a jackass. The comptroller was in full dress with black knickerbockers, black silk hose and pumps, with silk hat and an immense diamond in his shirt front worth $1,500. He is one of Detroit's blue bloods and his appearance in this outfit created a sensation. President Beck, of the council, was dressed as a clown and drove a pair of donkeys through the streets. Most of the other members of the council rode on a hayrack drawn by a couple of white oxen, and two others drove goat teams. The board of assessors had a hayrack drawn by four white horses; the officials were all dressed as farmers, with wide brimmed straw hats, blouses and jean trousers and made the air hideous with kazoos.

The circus procession drove through the main streets from the city hall amid the hooting of the crowds that turned out to see it and proceeded to the grounds of the athletic club. Here some of the leading men peddled peanuts and lemonade in the crowd, turned somersaults and sang comic songs for the delectation of the spectators. Alderman Beck, who weighs about 120 pounds, had a boxing match with Alderman Richert, who weighs 300. In the third round both were knocked out, and it was several minutes before they could be restored. Comptroller Moore was ringmaster. Some of the aldermen rode trick mules, and the athletes among them performed on horizontal bars in tights.

THE ORDER WON.

Decision on the Validity of Death Claims Favors the Maccabees.

LANSING, June 21.—The great camp of the K. O. T. M. is supreme so far as the determination of the validity of death claims is concerned. This doctrine has been laid down by the Michigan supreme court in the case of John H. Herubeau vs. the great camp of the Knights of Maccabees.

Alexander Coderre became a member of the order in 1889, and named the plaintiff as beneficiary, claiming that he was a dependent. Coderre died in July, 1892, and the executive committee of the order, which passed upon the claim, refused to allow it on the ground that the plaintiff was not nor never had been a dependent of Coderre. The great camp sustained the position taken by the executive committee, and suit was then brought in the circuit court. The circuit judge directed a verdict for the defendant on the ground that by virtue of the by-laws of the order beneficiaries are confined to widows, relatives within the first degree of kinship, and dependents. The by-laws also give the executive committee power to pass on death claims, and an appeal may be taken to the great camp, but the decision of the latter body is final, and from it there is no appeal. The supreme court affirms the decision of the lower court, with costs to the defendant.

SMALLPOX IN A TUG CREW.

Engineer of the Ella M. Smith Taken Sick at Bay City.

BAY CITY, June 25.—The tug Ella M. Smith from Spanish river, Ont., where she went about two weeks ago from Bay City after a raft, was met 3 miles out in the bay at 8 o'clock Sunday morning by Mayor Jackson, Chief of Police Murphy, Health Officer Caughlin, four policemen and several other persons. A signal was given and the Smith was brought to a standstill. Dr. Kerr, the smallpox doctor of this city, boarded the craft and found an advanced case of smallpox, the victim being Thomas Mahoney, of Bay City, who shipped as fireman two weeks ago.

Death of a Well-Known Woman.
